THE SCRAGGS CASE IS CLOSED

Scraggs had escaped! How fast the news spread around our old river bank! Judge Granbery had sent him to the School for Bad Boys, after that last trouble he was in, when he broke a big plate glass window up on Main Street, and tried to lay the blame on Jerry Moore. The Sheriff had taken him up to the School on Friday night. And by Saturday night he had broken away and was gone again, nobody seemed to know where.

"Tough on you, Hawkins, said Shadow Loomis; "that kid will try to pay you back for what you did."

"What I did," I said, "I would do again. I'd do the same for any kid who didn't play fair and square. We've stood enough out of Scraggs—time after time we let him go when he was caught doing something. You fellows never seemed to worry about him. I think I was about the only one who ever felt sorry for him—"

"You're too soft-hearted!" exclaimed Jerry Moore. "That's what I always said about you, Hawkins; you let a guy get the best of you. Why did you ever want to feel sorry for Scraggs? He got himself in bad; and just because you wouldn't let him get away with some of the things he did, he has a grudge against you, and he'll come back here and try to pay you up—"

"I only hope he will do that very thing," I said; "it will give me one more chance to capture him for old Judge Granbery; and this time, believe me, I'll see that he stays captured. He won't be able to break out of the School for Bad Boys again. They'll be watching him too close after this."

"Huh!" exclaimed Bill Darby. "You wouldn't send him back if he started to cry in front of you. You're too soft-hearted."

"Now you fellows get that out of your heads!" I said, hotly. "You get me sore—talking about me like that—I ain't any more soft-hearted than you are. I'd like to take a punch at this Scraggs myself—everytime I think of the way he slapped Arthur that day when his gang caught him, it makes me mad."

"You're right, there," spoke up Arthur, one of the two brothers whom we had taken into our club a few weeks ago. "He wouldn't have tried it if he hadn't his gang all around him, holding me so I couldn't fight back. And I'll say this right here, Hawkins, to your face, too—if you let him get away without paying him back for what he did to me—well, I don't want to belong to this club any more."

"Don't worry, Arthur," I said, "as long as you belong to this club, we will stick up for you. Now, get out, all of you fellows, and let me alone to write the minutes of this meeting."

"No, we'd better stick around," says Jerry Moore, "because we know that Scraggs is loose again and if he comes here when you're alone, he'll give you the worst lickin' you ever had—"

"Not on your life, he won't," I said; "don't you fellows worry too much about me. The way I feel now, I am mad enough at Scraggs to lick him twice before he knows what's happening to him. Go on, get out."

* * *

They all went out except Perry Stokes. He stayed to dust up the place and to set the things in order after meeting, as he always does. I sat down and wrote the minutes, and I noticed Perry hanging around—"You can go, too, Perry," I said.

"Why, sir," he said, "I thought one of us had better stay with you—"

"For goodness sake, Perry, you don't think I'm afraid of this Scraggs, do you?"

"Not if you see him coming, sir. But he most likely will sneak up on you, and you'll need somebody to help—"

"No, I won't need any help. Just let me get close to him, that's all. If—"

The telephone bell started ringing. Perry leaped to answer it. "Hello!" He listened for a while without saying a word. Then he said: "Goodbye!" and hung up the receiver. "It was Judge Granbery, sir," he explained. "He wants you to come up to his office, right away, sir."

I closed my book and put the stopper on my ink bottle.

"I'm going up there right away, Perry," I said, as I took down my coat and hat; "and I don't want you tagging along at my heels. Un'erstand? All I wish is that I run into this Scraggs."

I left the clubhouse in Perry's charge, and went up the river path to the Main Road. Just as I turned into the road I looked back, and saw Perry standing on the river path, watching me. I knew that just as soon as I was out of sight, he would start following me. Good old Perry! He means well, anyhow. Doesn't want me to get hurt, if he can help it.

When I reached the Judge's office, the Sheriff was sitting on one side of his desk, and on the other side sat the principal of the School for Bad Boys. I knew right away they were talking about the escape of Scraggs. Most likely the Judge had the principal on the carpet for it, and was giving him the dickens. And I knew afterwards, too, that all three of these men were sore at Scraggs for getting away, and were bent on getting him back as soon as possible.

"Well, Hawkins," says the Judge, "you've heard all about it, already, I guess."

"Yeah," I said, "Scraggs, you mean. I wasn't surprised to hear he was out again—"

"You're to see that he gets in again," broke in the Judge. "You know what I've always called you boys—the junior police of the river bank. You see your duty now."

"Just wait!" I said, nodding. "If I get my hands on that Scraggs kid again—"

"Oh, there's to be no more fighting of any kind," the Judge cut in; "it is very plain that Scraggs will more than likely come around your clubhouse on the river bank. You're to keep all your boys wide awake, and see that this thing is handled right.....As long as you have Scraggs around, there will be no peace and quiet on the river bank. Something must be done."

"All of us boys are watching for him," I said.

"But you will take charge of it yourself," said the Judge, tapping the desk with his pencil: "I look upon you as the chief of the junior police, Hawkins, and I'm going to put this case into your hands until it is finished. When you have finished it, simply send me word that the case is closed. I'll depend upon you entirely."

I said I would do as he wanted me to, and with that, then, I hurried back to the clubhouse, and before we all went home to supper, I told all the other boys what the Judge had said.

* * *

However, we did not catch Scraggs that day, nor the next. We saw him—three times we picked up his trail—twice we got close to him and once we thought we had him. But he is a slick worker. He laughed at us. That made me mad. I made up my mind now to get him, sure, if it was the last thing I ever did. Then Sadler came—a boy who had a gang he called Sadler's Seventeen. Once upon a time Scraggs belonged to the Seventeen, but was caught stealing, and Sadler threw him out. Later, however, Sadler took him back—on his promise, I thought, to turn a new leaf. Now I know that wasn't the reason. Sadler was soft-hearted.

Sadler came up to the clubhouse the day after we had almost caught Scraggs.

"Why are you hounding that kid?" he asked me.

"You know why," I answered. "But why are you shielding him?"

"Never mind about that," answered Sadler; "I always have a reason for everything. I want to ask you a favor, Hawkins—let this poor kid go. Call your fellows off, and let Scraggs go back—"

"He won't go back," I told him; "he's got it in him to be bad, that's all; and he'll worry the daylights out of our fellows until he is in the School for Bad Boys. Why are you taking his part now—that's what I want to know."

"Because," he answered, slowly, "I feel sorry for him. He belonged to my gang, once. I think we ought to stick up for fellows who belonged to us, once. Don't you ever feel sorry for a guy?"

"That's just my trouble," I said, savagely, "and I'm going to stop it right now. No, sir, I don't feel sorry for Scraggs—I'll be switched if I do! There's some other reason you've got for coming here and begging for him—what is it?"

Sadler shook his head, and sighed. "No," he says, getting up to go, "maybe I ought not do it—I don't think I should—but something's made me feel sorry for him, that's all. I'll tell you this, Hawkins, much as I like you and your pals, I'll have to work against you about Scraggs. I'm not going to let you get him, if I can help it."

* * *

And with that, then, he went away. But I didn't sit still. As soon as he was safely out of sight, I sent Perry Stokes to get the other boys, and follow Sadler. It was just a hunch—from the way he talked, I thought Sadler knew where Scraggs was—and by Jinks! I thought right. They got Scraggs, then, in the old dug-out on Burney's field, where he was hiding. They took him out, although he fought like a wildcat, and Sadler helped—but our boys were too much for them. They brought him up to our clubhouse.

"So, Scraggs," I said, "it didn't do you much good to break out of the School for Bad Boys, did it? You're going back there, tonight. Un'erstand?"

"I'll never go back there!" he snapped. "You'll never get me in that place again."

"We will see about that," I said; "here, fellows, put him back in my writing room and tie him to a chair till I can get the Sheriff down here. Perry, call up the Sheriff right away."

From behind our boys came Sadler, and there was a sad look on his handsome face.

"Hawkins," he said, "once more I ask you to let him go—let me take him back to his—"

He paused.

"Back to his what?" I asked. "Go on, talk. Back to his home? Where does he live? In Watertown? If so why didn't he stay there instead of coming down here and getting us all in trouble. No, Sadler, here's one time you don't see me getting soft-hearted. The fellows have called me soft-hearted for the last time. From now on, by golly, I'm going to be the hardest-hearted guy in the world. I'm mad, I am! And I don't care who knows it!"

Sadler backed away from me as though he thought I was going to tear up things.

"Just one moment," he said, "don't get all riled up, Hawkins. Will you do me one favor, then, if I ask you, for old times' sake, when my gang helped your gang—"

"One favor," I said, "as long as you don't ask me to set him free—"

"No, I want you to promise you won't turn him over to the Sheriff until tonight—"

"Just as soon as the Sheriff can get here," I said, "he goes back where he broke away from."

But the Sheriff was not in when Perry called up his office. He was gone all that afternoon and darkness fell, and still we had our prisoner in the back room of the little clubhouse. The boys had to go home to supper. I told them to go ahead, I would stay with Scraggs, he couldn't get away or make any trouble, anyway, because we had him tightly roped to the chair. No taking chances with a fellow like Scraggs.

Even after they were all gone, and I was there alone with the troublesome fellow, I took a peep every once in a while through the curtains that hung in the doorway of the writing room, to see if he was still in the chair. No telling what Scraggs could do or couldn't do. A fellow like that might know a lot of tricks, and one of them might be getting loose from ropes that bound him.

A noise sounded from the river path—I thought it was the Sheriff coming for Scraggs—I heard wheels grating on the hard path and Sadler's voice called "Whoa, there, Prince." Then I knew he had his father's best horse hitched to a carriage, and I wondered what he was coming back for. I sat down in the chair at the head of the long table as a knock came at the door. I called, "Come in." The door opened. It was Sadler.

"Oh!" he said. "I'm glad you kept your promise to me—is he still here?"

I nodded to the back room. "In there," I said. "Waiting for the Sheriff."

Sadler backed out and closed the door again. I sat silent, wondering. Presently the door began to open slowly, again. No, it was not Sadler. It was a little old-looking lady who came in—she was trying to smile, even through the tears that made her eye look sad. Her clothes were old—her hands trembled—she slowly closed the door behind her, as she said:

"Are you Seckatary Hawkins?"

I got up and walked over to her, and placed a chair for her. But she would not sit down.

"My name is Hawkins," I said nodding; "and the boys all call me Seckatary—"

"I am so glad!" she said. "It's you I wanted to see. The Sadler boy—I asked him to do this for me—he promised he would come—but he said you would not listen to him—"

"Sadler?" I said. "Yes, I istened to him, and I told him—"

"About Billy, I mean—"

"Billie?"

"Yes, Billy Scraggs—"

"Oh!" I said. "Yes, I told Sadler that we could not let Billy go—he's in the other room. We—"

"I was wondering what made him stay away so long," she said, "you know, Sadler told me Billy was with you boys down here in this clubhouse—you see I can't watch him as much as I would like—I must work every day—and for a while I wasn't working, and Billy got restless—he wanted to go all the time—to see something. I thought he might be glad to know—I've got work again now—I'd like to have him come back home."

"You didn't know—" I began—"you mean you didn't hear about him getting into—"

"Oh, yes, Sadler told me you had him in the club. But I want him back again, Seckatary Hawkins, you see—Billy only has me now—his mother died when he was a baby, and his daddy—he is gone, too—and now Billy has only me to look after him—but he is a dear boy—always kind to me—I can't bear to have him gone like this—"

She sank into the chair, and put a little handkerchief to her eyes and cried. Oh, boy, that's one thing I never could stand—no, I can't see an old lady crying for a boy—as long as an old lady like that has that much love for a boy, that boy ought to try to make her happy.

I didn't know what to say to her. I'm not good on talking, anyway. So I went back into the writing room. Scraggs had his head hanging upon his chest. I spoke to him, but he didn't look up. I shook him, and he started up suddenly. He had been asleep.

"Did you hear anybody talking out there?" I asked, nodding toward the room where the little old lady sat.

"No," he said, shortly. Then he pricked up his ears, as he caught the sound of sobbing. "Who?" he asked me simply.

I didn't answer him. I took my pocketknife and cut the ropes that bound him.

"Get out of here," I said.

He stood up and stretched himself. I followed him as he slowly walked to the door, drew aside the curtains and looked—and then he gave a little cry of surprise—

"Granny!" he shouted. "Oh, Granny—I been in so much trouble—"

She was on her feet now, waiting for him with outstretched arms. He flew to her—by Jinks! there wasn't all bad in the heart of Scraggs—no, sir! He put his little arms around her as she folded her cape around him and drew him to her dear old kind and tender heart.

"Billy," she said, and she was smiling down at him, "don't you know you need your old Granny? You mustn't ever run away from me again—I'll have money to send you to school again now—listen! your old Granny's got the nicest job—come along home with me, now, and I'll tell you all about it—and I've got supper waiting, too, Billy—"

"Oh, Granny!" broke in Scraggs, "I ain't worth—"

"Hush!" she told him. And then she turned to me. "Thank you so much for being good to Billy—he's such a restless boy—a bit wayward, maybe—but I love him—"

"That is enough!" I said. And then I turned away. I didn't know what to say, or think or do. I forgot in that moment everything—forgot the Sheriff—and old Judge Granbery—and everything. Forgot, too, that this Scraggs had something coming to him from one of our own club members, Arthur, who had told him he wouldn't stay in the club if—

But that was fixed all right the next day, when both Arthur and his brother Walter said they were moving, and had joined the Merry Times Club, farther down the river.

All I could think of at that particular time was that this poor old granny loved that wayward boy. Well, maybe she could make something of him. Better perhaps than the School for Bad Boys. They don't have any loving grannies up there. When I turned around, both granny and boy were gone. In the open door stood Sadler. "Now," he said, "you know how I felt, when she asked me to come up here and get Scraggs. I was doing it for her—not for that kid."

I waved him out and turned to my desk. And I took pen and paper and wrote upon it: "The Scraggs case is closed."

"Tomorrow," I said to myself, "we will send this to old Judge Granbery."

Which we did.

Password

A CHRISTMAS PASSWORD

Last week our password was "Nebuchadnezzar," and we made no mistake in saying that it was a difficult word to figure out.

This week we are going to give you another difficult password. As you will see, we are giving you four vowels, each one preceded by a dash. Each dash represents a missing letter, and the missing letters are all consonants. You must fill in the missing letters to get the password. Here it is:

—U—E—I—E

If we gave you the first letter, it would be easy, we know. But you must figure out for yourself what letters go in the blank spaces, and when you have placed the right ones there, you will have a word that means Christmastide. Now, let's see how good you are!

Next Week's Birthdays

Following is a list of our members who have birthdays next week. If you know any of them, call up and wish them "Many Happy Returns"—and if your birthday is listed here, write a little report of your party for The Examiner next day. Tell the names of your guests, the games you played, and so on. Address it to Seckatary Hawkins. "RUSH", and leave it in the office as early as you can. If you live in the country, mail your report as quickly as possible.

A Letter From The 'Seckatary'

Dear Club Members:

Two weeks from next Tuesday will be Christmas! I guess every boy and girl in our club today is dreaming of the many joys that this great feast day brings. And it is really a time for dreaming, too. I caught myself dreaming about it just a little while ago, as I sat down to write this. The present world with all its noise and hustle and bustle gradually faded from my mind, and I wandered out into the great open spaces far away in the land of Judea, when the Romans held sway. I seemed to be standing in a lone, bleak place. Beyond in the darkness I could just make out the darker shadows of a little town, in which there was no sound or movement, for the inhabitants were asleep. It seemed that the silence of the ages lay about it. And then, in my dream, suddenly a curtain was lifting upon a scene that was to be remembered down through the centuries.

Now the place began to take on shadows of different forms, and presently, out of themist I could see the dawn begin to break, and to my yet unaccustomed eyes there appeared the outlines of a tiny hill, in the side of which there was a tiny cave, and in this cave a supernatural glow shone upon a manger in which lay a tiny infant, and bending over the crib there was a beautiful Virgin, and an old man with gray hair and a venerable face, absorbed in complete adoration of the babe. At the mouth of the cavern a shepherd hesitated, and around him his pet sheep timidly peeped into the luminous cavern. It was Christmas morning.

There, now, let's see what you can write about Christmas. Write a story or a verse or something, just so it's about Christmas, for that will be the title of our contest for this week. Read the rules carefully, and even if you have tried many times before and not won a prize, remember, it is the one who keeps on that finally gets somewhere. And if you are not yet a member, fill out the membership blank and send it in with your contest work, and you will then receive a club button and a certificate making you eligible to all contests conducted by our club.

Our Weekly Meeting

The meeting will now come to order to hear the report of the contest on "My Favorite Book."

The letters I received are all very splendid—they are just as interesting to me as the books themselves.

In her description of "Six Little Bunkers at Grandma Bell's," Pauline Thorndyke, Bethany, has described the story so well in so few words that she wins the prize. That is a most interesting family, Pauline, and I do hope you get the other books in the series. Your prize Adventure Book has been sent to you.

And now, members, I have a most important notice to give. You know the competitions close every Saturday night, but a lot of members are sending in their letters too late. In fairness to those who are prompt, these cannot be considered. So PLEASE rush your entries before the Saturday night the competition closes.

Dear Seck:

MY FAVORITE BOOK

I have chosen for my favorite book "Six Little Bunkers at Grandma Bell's" It is full of adventures and is very interesting.

It is a book out of a series of five books. I have two of them and my sister in Toronto is getting me the other three.

It is about three little girls named Rose, who is her mother's helper; Violet, who is fond of asking questions and Marjorie, who is always trying out things.

There also are three boys. Ross, who is a little carpenter. Laddie, who makes up riddles and Min Bun, Marjorie's twin brother.

They all get along well and play many games, one they like very well is making bubbles.

They had gone to their Grandma's house to spend some of their summer holidays.

One day it was raining so they could not go out. After a while they decided to make a steam boat out of chairs and an old barrel which their Grandma had given them. Laddie got on top of the barrel and Ross under it. The girls and Mun Bun were on the chairs. Laddie danced and made the barrel rock and then it went "Flop!" on Ross. Though nobody was hurt.

I like it so well because it has characters. I do not like a book that the writer is writing about himself.

Hoping this will win a prize.

Yours fair and square,
Pauline Thorndyke.

Bethany, Ontario.

Dear Seck:

I received my club pin and I will do my best to live up to the motto "Fair and Square." I am sending in a story and I hope I will get a prize as it is my first story.

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

On Christmas Eve I went to bed thinking what Santa Claus would bring me and if he had received my letter which I had sent to him before.

The thing I wanted most of all was a pair of skates so I was wondering whether or not Santa would bring them to me. With these thoughts on my mind I fell asleep. The next morning I woke up very early and ran down to see what was in my stocking and first thing I saw was my pair of skates. I could have cried for happiness.

I found in my stocking a doll, candies, nuts, and many other lovely presents but the one I liked best was my pair of skates.

Yours fair and square,
Olive Matthews

Dear Seck:

I received my pin last night. It was very nice. I am writing a poem.

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

Stockings! Stockings! Oh joy,
Santa will fill them for good girls and boys.
Mine is as long as long can be,
For all the more toys can go in, you see.

Yours fair and square,
Margaret McMartin.

Dear Seck:

Here is my story on Christmas Stockings. I am eleven years old.

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

Two little golden haired children patter softly down stairs on Christmas morning. They run at once to the fire-place where hangs their bulging stockings.

"How good Santa has been to us!" exclaimed the delighted children.

"My mamma doll," said Jean, "the doll I always wanted."

There were many other nice things which both wanted. When mamma and papa got up they found two very pleased children.

Yours fair and square,
Edwin Inkpin.

Peterborough Ont.

Dear Seck:

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

Dan and Betty were anxiously waiting eight o'clock to strike as it was Christmas Eve. At last the clock struck eight and off they went to bed, not forgetting to hang up their stockings. They thought they would stay awake and wait for Santa to come, but they soon fell asleep, as they were tired for they had been out playing most of the day. In the morning when they woke they found their stockings filled to the top. Betty got a sleigh, a pair of skates, and a doll which she prized very much. Dan got a sleigh, a pair of skates and a mechanical set. They both got candies and nuts and were pleased very much with their things.

Yours fair and square,
Davis Brooks.

Port Hope, Ont.

Dear Seck:

I am sending five names to join your club. I am writing a verse on Christmas Stockings. Here is my verse:

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

I'll hang up my stocking, I will not forget;
I hope Santa will bring me a mechanical set.
I hope my stocking is big enough to hold what he brings,
For I'm sure he will fill it with lots of nice things.
There will be popcorn and bags of sugar-plums,
On the morn after the night when Santa Claus comes.

Yours fair and square,
Billie Brooks.

Port Hope,
Ont.

Dear Seck:

It is a long time since I have written to you. I am very sorry for not writing to you sooner, but the time has gone so quickly that I haven't had time. I decided that I would write on my Christmas stocking that I got last Christmas. So here is my story:

Last Christmas I hung my stocking up beside my bed. When I woke up the next morning I couldn't find it. At last I looked under the bed and there I found it. It was full to the top. I am going to write to Santa this year too. I hope my stocking is full next time also.

Yours fair and square,
Teresa Torpey.

R.R. No. 7,

Dear Seck:

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

One Christmas morning when I woke up,
I went to see what was in my stocking.
There was an orange in the toe,
Next to that were some nuts,
Next to that was a little book
And last of all was a little box.
I opened the box and out jumped a little mouse,
It gave me such a scare that I was fraid to open it again.
But at last I opened it,

Yours fair and square,
Mary O'Neil.

Marmora, Ont.

Dear Seck:

I received my pin last night. It is very nice. I am writing a verse. This is the first time I ever wrote one.

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

Christmas is coming,
It won't be long.
All girls and boys will be singing a song.
For Santa will fill their stockings with toys,

Yours fair and square,
Helen McMartin.

R.R. No. 11,

Dear Seck:

Here is a little verse about Christmas Stockings and I hope to get a prize.

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

I hung up my Christmas stocking.
Oh, wasn't that shocking.
Santa Claus started to laughing.
And filled it till it was cracking.

Yours fair and square,
Tom Mac Donald

Dear Seck:

I received the pin O.K. and was very glad to get it. I am also sending in a drawing of Christmas Stockings for this week's contest.

Yours fair and square,
Harvey Boyd.

Mill Street,
Port Hope, Ont.

I'm sorry, Harvey, I can't possibly get room for drawings these weeks—there's so much to get into so small space.

Dear Seck:

As I am one of your new members I am going to write my first letter.

MY FUNNIEST EXPERIENCE

Once a crowd went picking berries,
I had a pailful.
They were too heavy to carry,
I went to help another little girl fill her pail.
When I came back my berries were gone.
Not very far away was an old pig.
When I told the rest they were very sorry/
But I couldn't help laughing myself
When I thought of the look of that old pig.

Yours fair and square,
Mary O'Neil.

Marmora, Ont.

Dear Seck:

I have been wanting to write in one of your contests but I never got a chance until to-day, so I am writing in this week's contest and I hope I win a prize.

MY FUNNIEST EXPERIENCE

One rainy afternoon I went out and got my bunnies and took them into the straw.

I made a bed for them, then I made a bed and lay down beside them. I fell asleep in the straw and the bunnies got up and when I wakened out of my sleep the bunnies were asleep upon one side of me and my kitten on the other side. So I had the three pets then.

Yours fair and square,
Beatrice Kidd.

Announcing The Names of the Winners in Hall's Linen Sale Essay Contest.

"Why Rose of Sharon Linens Make Ideal Christmas Gifts"

It was very pleasing to find that so many boys and girls were interested in linens. At least it was until it came to the time to judge the essays. Most of the efforts sent in were good, although some of the contestants wandered far from the subject.

It was so difficult to arrive at a final decision as to the winners that we submitted the best essays to our overseas linen buyer who is at present in Toronto, and on his judgment the following awards were made:

1st PRIZE

A 2 x 2½ yard tablecloth and one dozen napkins in Rose of Sharon "Trousseau" quality, value $20.00, and $10.00 in cash, goes to Miss Isabel C. Mackay of 210 Antrim Street. We take the liberty of publishing her essay below.

"WHY DO ROSE OF SHARON LINENS MAKE IDEAL CHRISTMAS GIFTS?"

When choosing a gift for a lady, whether maiden or housewife, the questions that naturally arise are: "It is appropriate?" "Will she like it?"

We cannot think of a more appropriate gift or one that would be received with more genuine pleasure than "Rose of Sharon" linen.

Any girl would be justly proud to tuck away in her Hope Chest a piece of linen of the particular make, and any hostess would be equally proud in knowing that her "Rose of Sharon" table linen is absolutely correct, beautiful, beyond all criticism.

The husband of limited means who presents his wife with an inexpensive luncheon cloth in gleaming white or colored design will give as much pleasure as the man who brings home a Christmas gift consisting of an exquisite tablecloth with serviettes to match.

The young man, vexed with the ever-recurring problem of what to give mother, sister or sweetheart, can readily find a suitable gift among the splendid array of "Rose of Sharon" linens.

These linens, coming as they do, in wonderful variety, are ideal Christmas gifts, because they are appropriate, acceptable, ideal Christmas gifts.

2nd PRIZE

A 2 x 2½ yard tablecloth and one dozen napkins in Rose of Sharon "Tourist" quality, value $12.00, also $5.00 in cash. This was won by the following essay written by Miss Eva M. Doherty, R.R. 7, Peterboro.

The climate of Ireland, owing to the influence of the warm Westerly winds, is equable and moist the whole year round.

This is an ideal condition for both the growing of flax and spinning and weaving into linen. In fact, Ireland is the only country where the climate is mild and sufficiently moist to prevent the threads in weaving from breaking. Hence the very best linen of the world is obtained from there.

Flax is much like buckwheat in appearance.

By threshing the grain is separated from the straw, and from this we obtain our linen.

Almost vieing with the Shamrock for its place in the hearts of the Irish is the "Rose of Sharon," a beautiful, little, sweet-smelling wild rose, peculiar to Ireland, and centering in all her most charming romances.

This, patterned on the very best of linen, could not fail to make a very beautiful impression. Besides the beauty of the Irish linen from which are made the finest quality tablecloths, napkins, centres, cushions, towelling, sheets, pillow-slips, spreads, curtains, nighties, aprons, handkerchiefs, men's shirts, and dress goods, its laundering qualities are unexcelled.

There is nothing you can give as a Christmas gift dearer to the heart of a real home lover than genuine "Rose of Sharon" linen, with its beauty and durability. Truly a gift that is a constant and lasting "memoir" of the good wishes that go with it.

3rd PRIZE

One 2 x 2½ yard tablecloth and one dozen napkins to match in Rose of Sharon "Family" quality, value $11.00, and $3.00 in cash. This was awarded to Miss Hilda Phillips, 176 Antrim Street.

At this time of the year when each one's thoughts are centred on "What shall I give for Christmas?" the tasteful and well assorted display of Rose of Sharon linens in the Richard Hall, Limited, Store, answers opportunely this query.

Rose of Sharon Irish linens are manufactured in a country whose climate is peculiarly adapted to the growing, spinning and weaving of the finest flax. Coupled with this are the modern conditions under which these linens are produced.

In the store window, the showing of a lunch cloth, bearing the coat of arms and the monogram of George V., made specially for the Royal household, lends emphasis to the quality of Rose of Sharon linens, as only products of the highest grade ever grace the tables of Their Majesties.

With such proof that these linens are of outstanding merit, the wide choice of designs; the loyal ideal of shopping in the home town; and the recent appeal of the Empire Marketing Board to buy products of the Empire, one can rest assured that in Christmas gifts giving, Rose of Sharon linens fill a fourfold purpose which gives happiness to both recipient and giver.

The prizes are on display in our windows and will be delivered to the successful embryo advertisers as soon as ever they like to come to me for them.

Yours truly,
J. MADILL, Linen Buyer.

To each unsuccessful contestant we are sending through the mail a box of Irish linen handkerchiefs.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 8 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday continued of a limited character owing to the fact that foreign bids were below local exporters' views.

A steady feeling prevailed in the domestic market for cash grain, but the volume of business was not large.

Little business was done in Spring and Winter wheat flour, but values were unchanged.

The tone of the market for all lines of millfeed was firm under a good inquiry from all sources. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was steady.

An active business was done in fresh and storage grades of eggs and values were firm. Receipts were 612 cases.

Beans were steady at $5.25 per bushel for Canadian qualities, while jobbers sold them at 9½c per lb., yellow beans at 8½c, and yellow eyes at 9c per lb.

Prices for all grades of butter were well maintained under a good demand. Receipts were 251 packages.

The demand for cheese continued of a limited character and values were inclined to be easier. Receipts were 632 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 7. —(Canadian Press).—Downturns in price formed the rule for all cereals most of the time yesterday but late rallies counted a something of an offset. Big rural holdings of domestic wheat together were bear factors, but export sales of North American wheat yesterday showed an increase to about 1,000,000 bushels and export bids for corn, rail shipment to the seaboard east, were near to a working basis.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, ⅝ to 1⅛c net lower. Corn finished ⅜ to ¾ down; oats also at ⅜ to ⅝ decline, and provisions varying from 10c setback to a rise of 5c.

According to a recognized private authority here, United States farmers at present have 241,000,000 bushels of wheat yet to be marketed, as compared with 205,000,000 bushels a year ago. Furthermore, an official summary yesterday from Kansas, the foremost wheat-producing state in the country, said the newly seeded winter wheat crop is going into the winter this year abundantly supplied with moisture, and is generally reported as in good condition. Largely as a result of these circumstances, numerous speculative holders of wheat future deliveries showed a disposition yesterday to let go, and during much of the day new buyers were scarce.

Wheat price weakness here yesterday, however, was in contrast with advances at Liverpool. The comparative strength of values abroad appeared to be chiefly due to steady buying of Australian wheat for India, and to estimates current that India this season will import 30,000,000 bushels, whereas in other years the amount of wheat exported from India has aggregrated 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 bushels. On the other hand, the 1928 Australian wheat crop was semi-officially figured yesterday as totalling 160,000,000 bushels, against 108,000,000 bushels last year.

Corn and oats sympathized with wheat weakness, but at times the corn market gave signs of being stubborn. Although receipts of corn in Chicago yesterday were larger, 494 cars, country offerings to arrive were small despite favorable weather. Meanwhile, United States clearances of corn for the week reported as the largest so far this year, 1,128,000 bushels. Argentine corn shipments for the week were also heavier, totalling 5,751,000 bushels.

Provisions acted sluggish.

RAW SUGAR MARKET EASIER

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 (Canadian Press).—The raw sugar market was easier under increased offerings, with duty frees declining 1-16c and Cuban 1-32. Sales reported included 30,000 bags of Cuban for prompt shipment, and 7,700 bags from store to local refiners at 3.95, while an outport refiner bought 4,123 bags of Philippines due the end of this month at 3.89. There was also a sale of 28,000 bags of Cuban for December shipment to a west coast refiner at 2.64 for Cuban.

The easier tone in the spot market was responsible for increased offerings in the futures market with prices easier, closing at net declines of 1 to 3 points. The market opened 1 to 3 points lower under liquidation and European selling with active positions later selling 2 to 4 points below the previous close. Late months showed the maximum losses where the European selling was most pronounced, but toward the close covering checked the decline and brought about partial rallies with final prices a point up from the lowest. Approximate sales 37,300 tons. December closed 2.09; Jan. 2.05; March 2.11; May 2.17; July 2.24; Sept. 2.30; Dec. 2.35.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Dec. 8.—Steady and uniform withdrawals of creamery butter from Toronto cold-storage holdings were made known at the commencement of the week with the release of stocks of produce on hand at Dec. 1. The local trade estimates that it has sufficient butter in coolers to keep the local market going steadily for the next five weeks. In addition, outside butter holdings have to be considered as further backing for the local market. Large shipments of butter from New Zealand were due to arrive in New York per the steamship Devon on After making its call at New York the Devond will proceed to Halifax, at which port it will unload substantial supplies of fresh grass, made butter for distribution to Canadian markets late in the year. Additional butter supplies are moving to Canada from New Zealand to relieve the domestic consumptive situation here, and will likely be sold "over the counter" early in 1929 in Toronto.

Prices Moving Higher

Despite a sharp reduction of Canadian butter stocks as compared with 1927, the wholesale jobbing market from its carry-over this month confidently carries out a fair movement of finest creamery from day to day, at prices which to date have displayed all seasonal "earmarks" of rising trend. The market is also showing a tendency to increase its marketings as the Christmas season approaches.

The market is firmer in price tone than at a week ago. At the close last week finest creamery solids were quotable at a range of from 40¾c to 41c per lb., on the spot market. Yesterday in a jobbing way, the range of values ruled at 41c to 41¼c for No. 1 pasteurized creamery solids, with a ¼c per lb. higher obtained for extra choice lots required on spot for immediate needs. Undergrades were moving steadily to distribute channels at prices ranging from 39¾c to 40¼c per lb.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 8 (Canadian Press). — The general situation on Canadian egg markets was weak yesterday, with a falling off in prices for fresh eggs reported from different centres.

Montreal.—This egg market is quiet and dull. Fresh eggs have undergone a decline of 3c on every grade with the exception of pullet extras. The storage market is very weak.

St. John.—This egg market is quiet and unchanged, with an easier undertone. The consumptive demand has been good and storage eggs are still supplying the bulk of the trade. Prices to retailers are: extras 72 to 75c; firsts 62-67c; seconds 50c, pullet extras 58 to 60c.

Vancouver.—This egg market was lower yesterday. Prices to producers have been reduced and are now: extras 43c, firsts 37-38c; pullet extras 35c. Wholesale prices, effective immediately, are: extras 49c, firsts 43c, pullet extras, 41c.

CHURCH BAZAAR IS BIG SUCCESS

AT HAVELOCK.

(Examiner Correspondence).

HAVELOCK, Dec. 8.—The annual bazaar of St. John's Parish Guild was held on Thursday afternoon in the church basement. The ladies in charge had a splendid display of everything in the line of Christmas gifts of staple and fancy linens for table and household purposes, handkerchiefs, aprons, novelties. Dainty home-made cooking and candy were also on sale. The basement was very prettily decorated with red and green, and red and white. Evergreens were used very effectively as a partition separating the tea-room, where afternoon tea was served from 4 to 6 o'clock, from the section where the booths were situated. The function was a splendid success, as all departments were well patronized. Miss M. McWilliams and Mrs. T. P. Lancaster were in charge of the apron and miscellaneous booth; Mrs. Edward Williams and Mrs. H. W. Roche, the handkerchief booth; Mrs. R. Covert and Mrs. T. W. Quinn, the home-made candy booth; Mrs. H. Bush and Mrs. M. Isaac, the home-made cooking booth; Mrs. (Rev.) P. C. Howard and Mrs. R. Jones, the tea-room; Mrs. A. Forde, the mystery booth, and Mrs. F. Bacchus, the apple tree.

RUSSEL PEAKE.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, December 8. — That the late Russel Peake was held in the highest regard by practically everyone who knew him, was manifested yesterday afternoon when several hundred people were present to pay their last respects to one of Seymour's most popular residents. The funeral was held from his late residence on the English Line, at 2.30 p.m. The services at the home, in the church, and at the graveside, were conducted by the Rev. Mr. MacTavish of the Seymour United church circuit, the Rev. C. D. Daniel, late minister of the same charge, and Major the Rev. James Belford, ex-M.P.P., Codrington. There were a great many beautiful floral tributes from a host of friends and associations as well as from the family. The pall bearers were Warden C. H. Davidson, Reeve W. S. Grills, Ernest Craighead, Ernest Mitchell, William Haig and James Brady. The service was held at the home at 2.00 o'clock. Immediately afterward there was a public service at the Tabernacle Church before interment in the cemetery of the same church.

The church seating capacity would not begin to accommodate the hundreds who issued from the long line of motor cars which formed the funeral procession along the half mile of road from the residence to the church. Many were forced to remain out of doors while the service was being held.

The late Russel Peake was in his forty-seventh year. He was born on the same farm as that from which his remains were carried yesterday. He was a man of high ideals and had enjoyed considerable success in all his undertakings. As a farmer he dealt extensively in live stock. He had served several terms on the council of the township of Seymour, and was completing his third term as deputy reeve, and by virtue of this office, a member of the counties council of Northumberland and Durham. He was a life-long member of the Methodist and United Churches and a strong supporter of the Conservative party. He is survived by his widow, four daughters, three brothers and three sisters.

WARSAW PATRONS

ing Company, then gave a short talk on prices, saying he expects them to be higher.

Mr Foster recited a medley, after which Mr. Fanning, also of the Canadian Packing Company, gave a short address, and complimented the Warsaw factory on the quality of the cheese it produced. When speaking of eggs, he said that this past season, when they first graded the eggs, there were complaints that they made too few extras, but when they took them out of storage, many that had gone in as extras came out seconds. This statement raised some discussion as to why this should occur. Mr. Fanning would not say it was general all over Ontario, but that there was a lot of this. At the packing house they did not know the reason. Among other suggestions, the one given by William David was that barnyard water, of which there was a lot this year, would cause the trouble. Hens will pass clean water and drink from puddles in the barnyards. This seemed a very good reason, and Mr. Matthews was glad he had come to find this out. Speaking of this afterwards, one of the village women said that hens drank the dirty water for ammonia or minerals, and if a few drops of ammonia were put into the water, or a piece of rusty iron, the hens would not pass the clean water so often.

Mr. Matthews explained some of the necessities to get Hydro. If an average of three farmers to a mile would sign for it, it could be brought to Warsaw. The company puts in the main line, the farmer puts in the poles from the main line to his buildings, and also puts in the wires, and equips his buildings. The service charges for a farm of 100 acres are $13.50 per annum, and extra for electricity as used. The cost in village houses is about $2.50 a month. The charges here would be exactly the same as those just outside Peterborough.

Fred Crowe recited, and Mrs. Foster sang "It's a Mighty Good World." Between several of the numbers, there was singing of factory songs led by Mr. and Mrs. Foster, with Mrs. George Taylor acting as accompanist. With the service of refreshments, the evening was brought to a close.

SEE CANADA FIRST.

The twin coastal cities, Vancouver and Victoria, at this time of the year appeal with endless charm to the holidaymakers, wanderers, and tired business men and women, for the weather is ideal and the foliage in the gardens and parks of wondrous color. Not a day passes, too, but sees the twelve golf courses gay with happy and enthusiastic players while riding in the early mornings and afternoons is particularly favored. There are splendid motor highways on Vancouver Island, and innumerable ones running into Vancouver City from all directions. The winter season's attractions include theatres and concerts of the highest calibre, while the Hotel Vancouver at Vancouver and the world-renowned Empress at Victoria are the centres of the social and commercial activities of the two cities and districts. During the winter the Canadian Pacific Railway operates the only through train to Vancouver from Toronto. The "Vancouver Express" leaves the Union Station every night at 9.00 and reaches the coast four days later. Comfortable and convenient connections can be made with all western points by using this famous train.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Another "Thinker" Declares Women Are Wrecking Civilization

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind,
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind

MARMORA.

Affiliated with the North Hastings district of Women's Institutes is the flourishing branch at Bannockburn, which came into existence in the year 1921. The branch was inaugurated with a membership of sixteen. Mrs. Ernest Munroe was the first and Mrs. Sam Munroe was the first president, and Mrs. Sam McEwen the first secretary. The branch, like others in the district, meets monthly. In the summer months, the C. O. F. hall is used for meetings, but for the rest of the year the homes of members are in turn visited. Varied programs are given at the meetings, and a free-will offering taken up. Other sources of revenue have been bazaars, sales of home cooking and plays. During the past few years, the institute has been instrumental in having the interior of the C. O. F. hall decorated and also furnished the fine organ which was installed there. In 1927 the branch thoroughly furnished one of the rooms in the Bancroft Hospital at a cost of over two hundred dollars. Wash-basins were donated by them to two schools, Best's and Blakely's.

Mrs. Joseph Donly is the present president. The secretarial duties are being undertaken by Mrs. John Cawley, who was president for the two previous years. The membership now stands at 24, a creditable number for so small a village. Through the efforts of Bannockburn branch, a new branch was started in September at Cooper for residents of Cooper and Remington.

WARSAW.

All great gatherings seem to have a dominant note. At the recent institute convention held in Toronto, the idea of making oneself better able to fulfill the work God has put us on earth to do, seemed to run through everything, every address, and every discussion.

Religion as a topic was not discussed. Even the subject of teaching religion in schools could not be touched, but one could not fail to notice how very often reference was made to the teachings of our Lord. Very few failed to show that spirit.

It was also noticeable that the women who were there were women who looked well to the ways of their household.

Those who appeared on the platform, from time to time, were typical of all they were chosen from among the whole. They are rural women. The majority are now, or have been in farm-homes, and their interests lie there.

They did not wear the advance extreme styles, but they were fittingly and well gowned. Not a single pair of spike-heels appeared. Fully half wore oxfords of the natural tread, or some other good quality. Even the girls of the junior institutes, while prettily and girlishly dressed, were not extreme. They wore more fancy foot-gear; still, on the afternoon when they appeared on the platform, only one pair of black satin shoes with spike-heels appeared, and their dresses were not the extremely short.

In the discussions there were differences of opinion, but no bitterness. All seemed agreed on the great evil of intemperance, but there was a little difference of opinion about dancing.

However, all were made to feel that Canada is a democratic country, and that the majority must rule. Notwithstanding, if the minority would be injured, or hurt, or driven away, for conscience sake, it is well for a majority not to push too far.

Membership on the Provincial Board does not long stay in one county. The aim is to have the offices go around as much as possible; consequently, this year it has gone to Victoria County. Peterborough held it for two years. It appears that, in some cases, members of the Confederated, or Provincial Boards, have considered they had the right to dictate to branches. The subject was brought up at the convention, and every branch is a law unto itself, except for the few regulations laid down in the hand-book. However it is considered that when the larger body decides on some course of action, or requests something done, they do not do so without studying the matter from all sides, and it is expected that, as a rule, the branches will fall in line.

Much was read about conditions in the North. Clothing is needed most. Mr. Putnam read four letters which came by one mail from there. The people do not want charity. They are asking for work. Several years' failures have left no money for clothes, and any one, or any branch, wishing to assist may write to Mr. Putnam for the most-needed place. Your correspondent sat beside a delegate, Mrs. W. Jenkins, Trout Creek, Ontario, who told of the terrible distress among the people around her. She, I understood, did not come at the expense of her branch, and told that many other places were worse off. The crops were good, but our rains here were nothing to what they had.

MILLBROOK.

A practical suggestion along publicity lines is this, since the new programs for the East Durham Institutes are now ready for distribution, have these given women in the community other than Institute members, and see if there will not be some additions to the membership rolls of the various branches within the next few months.

A practical suggestion has been made in the development of the 'Four H' program, in which each Institute is at least supposed to be actively interested, that if the teen age girls can be interested in sewing, say for a busy mother, or on garments meant for a babe to go to some needy point for Christmas, the cutting and putting together of clothing or piecing and quilting warm quilts, will come under the department of 'head' since the mind is certainly at work; of 'hand' for both these members will be busy; and of 'heart' because the whole of the activity grows out of the fact that the desire to help prompts the labor, and the emotions are stirred.

The intended Short Course for the junior farmers, both boys and girls, to be held here this winter, lends point to the point made by Miss Langton, when addressing the Women's Institute convention recently held at London, when she said: "The senior members of the Institute should be seized with the importance of getting every girl, in the community in training through the Short Courses, household science, home economics, judging, and any other which the Department has to offer. Bring out especially the shy and retiring girls of your neighborhood. The great calamity of life, for a girl, is not having just one talent, but rather in not using that talent."

Mr. Putnam summed up the work of the Institutes very forcibly when he spoke of the customs which they have established, listing such things as: The determination to be healthy and efficient, instead of pale and pampered; health service is now constructive and preventive, rather than repair work; the insistence upon the fact that one's education is never finished—the eighty-year old is just as keen for additional knowledge as the miss of eighteen is to expand her intellectual horizon; the constant practice of rendering help to the community, and to those in need; and the ideal of making homes convenient, attractive, and healthy, eating for health, and having practical knowledge of nutrition.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

During the Women's Institute convention held in Toronto November 27, 28, 29, one of the features worthy of note was the tendering of a banquet to the convention delegates by the Robert Simpson Co., at which many prominent speakers were billed to attend. On account of so many important functions clashing in time Premier Howard Ferguson and cabinet ministers were unable to be present. Owing to illness, D. H. Gibson, general manager of Simpson's Mail Order Department, could not be present. His place was filled by Frank Hay, secretary of the Mail Order, who most delightfully told of his knowledge and appreciation of work done, especially in Canadianizing foreigners by women's institutes.

Mrs. J. W. Stone, president of the Federate Women's Institutes of Ontario told of progress accomplished and of future visions of what might be achieved. Other speakers were R. S. Duncan, Department of Agriculture, who eulogized the development in home and country resulting from the Women's Institutes and last, Miss M. L. Marks of St. Joseph's Island, who brought a vivid message of life in Northern Ontario. "We do not hibernate like bears, women are too active and busy for that, in winter ski-ing and other modes of social enjoyment are amongst popular pastimes. Few can realize the boon of women's institutes are in far off districts like this," she concluded. After the banquet the delegates were driven down in specias buses, where they visited the Royal Winter Fair.

During the convention the following resolutions were passed:

Whereas the members of the Women's Institutes have benefitted greatly through the literature, lectures and demonstrations provided by the Department of Agriculture and other departments of government and whereas the improvement in household conveniences, equipment and labor savers, has not kept pace with the advance in farm machinery.

Be it resolved that the program of National and Provincial Research Councils include the housing, clothing and feeding of the family and that special consideration be given to nutrition, labor savers and household conveniences.

That school books be not changed so frequently. That school be supervised at the noon hour.

That mained men sentenced to prison should be given paid work, the pay to go towards the support of their families.

Resolved that we have compulsory school supervision at the noon hour.

That the Ontario Government should support the Old Age Pension Bill.

South Essex—Whereas we have a federal statutory to call ourselves Canadians, therefore we petition the Provincial Government, asking that in the matter of vital statistics, registration of births, issuing of death certificates, etc., the word "Canadian" shall be designated to those born in this country or those who become citizens of this country.

Simcoe County—Resolved that as Canada is taking her place as a self governing nation in the British Empire we ask that we be recognized as Canadians and not by the name of the country from which our fathers came.

Sparrow Lake— Whereas under present laws, children born in Canada of other than British parents cannot be registered as Canadians, but must take the name of the country from whence their forefathers came, and

Whereas this said law does not foster the spirit of patriotism, but rather detracts therefrom.

Resolved that we, the members of East Simcoe Women's Institutes, assembled in convention do petition the Federal Government to pass legislation allowing Canadian-born children whose parents were also born in Canada to be registered as Canadians.

Whereas it is most desirable that music be taught in the rural sections of the Province, and

Whereas the Women's Institutes have, under great handicaps, assisted in providing instruction in music in a number of rural schools.

Be it resolved that the appreciation of the Women's Institute be extended to the Department of Education for additional assistance that has been provided recently for this service.

And be it further resolved that consideration be given to providing a limited amount of musical instruction for all rural schools.

Omagh—In as much as music has been taught in the schools in some rural districts and the educational benefit to the child is a recognized fact, we would like to place the matter before the Department: "That a grant of equal value be given to the school boards for the societies financing the musical education of a school, as is given for Domestic Science or Agriculture.

Wakerton—Resolved that we, the delegates to the Women's Institute convention put ourselves on record as endorsing the stand which the Department of Agriculture is taking for sound education and honest methods among the pupils in the school fair competitions, and would urge the co-operation of the parents in seeing that the work is done by the pupils. Carried unanimously by standing vote.

Moved by Mrs. W. B. Moore, Lion's Head, seconded by Mrs. G. Cruikshank, Wingham, that we request the Government, through the Department of Education, to take steps to see that the dangers of drinking alcoholic drinks are taught to all children in our public and high schools, and that all school inspectors be instructed to see that the teachers in their inspectorate ar teaching those chapter in the Government Health Book, which deals with tobacco, alcohol and other narcotic drugs.

That we ask the Federated Board to send a small committee to interview the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission to hear their points of view on the question of hydro rates, and to discuss how the difficulties and objections of the rural consumers and would-be consumers can be met.

That a cablegram of sympathy and loyalty be sent King George in his serious illness from this convention, and that we pray for his speedy recovery and that the expense of the cablegram be defrayed by taking up a collection.

Resolved that a note of sympathy be passed with Mr. Sidney Banks in his recent tragic loss of his wife. The women's institutes recognize the big debt of gratitude which they owe to the untimely energy and fearless thought of Mrs. Banks and realize that on them devolves the responsibility to carry to fruition causes, like that of temperance education for the young and medical attendance for the sick to which Mrs. Banks gave her life.

Sympathy with Mrs. Coghill, convenor of Historical Research for Western Division, stricken with sunstrokes, resulting in partial paralysis and partial blindness.

That we assembled here express our sympathy to Miss Stuart, president of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada, in her affliction and trust that she may experience an early and complete recovery and thus be able to continue her capabl, kindly leadership.

SONGS OF LOVE.

"Dear Marion,— Would this little poem do for the "Love Songs Corner." It is not original. I have had it in my scrap book some time.—B.B."

GIVE ME YOUR HAND.

Give me your hand, child,
You've a long way to go,
There are turns in the road
That you do not know.
Give me your hand, dear,
You've so much to learn,
And objects ahead,
Are hard to discern.
Give me your hand
And I'll lead you on
'Ere the end of the trail,
The day may be gone.

GLYCERINE RINSE.

MARION'S MAIL

DEAR MARION,

In your asinine column some days ago I saw where you took a 'rap' at a man who stood up for the rights of men; where you poked fun at a man who told the truth about his wife; and, in fact, it seems that you have your knife into the men. I have no doubt but that you are an old maid.

In the first place, I know I'm foolish to bother trying to put you right, and in the second I know quite well you will never print this. You DO print, though, every letter that says anything nice about your puerile page. However, I'll have the satisfaction of getting something off my chest.

What 'Thinker' said was quite right, only he didn't go far enough. Men ought to insist on having the 'obey' left in the marriage ceremony, and upon its being lived up to. That is the basis of living upon which our present civilization is built, and if women start breaking away from it now they can blame only themselves for the chaos bound to result. I may remark that they are well on the way.

One need not go any farther than women's dress to show the decadence of the sex. We see women on George street every day between whom and 'September Morn' the only difference is they don't stand the same way. If a man went out dressed in georgette pants cut off at the knee so as to display about three dollars' worth of silk hose (transparent) he would not only get double pneumonia, but three months on the hill. If he kept on his hat in Church he would be excommunicated—but women take their hats off in the choirs, nowadays, in direct contravention of the same rule that sends a man into the place of worship bareheaded.

Women are kicking over the traces too hard. They are not following natural development. They desire all men's freedom without any of man's responsibility. They wish to play with fire and still have the man take care of them.

I suppose that away back in the early days of the women's suffrage movement you were out with the best of them, smashing windows, throwing pepper in policemen's eyes, and going on hunger strikes. Now you are, forty years after, still trying to incite your sisters to 'equal rights.'

I suggest that you get married (if you can get anyone to marry you), and try doing a little honest work for a change. There is enough bitterness in life now without adding to it.

I mightn't write so much if I thought there was any chance of this being printed, but, as I say, I've studied your page and find that only complimentary things are printed. Which shows good judgment on your part, but a depth of deceit, too, only too evident in the schemes you women get up in your foolish claims to man's place in the sun.

Yours affectionately,
Another Thinker."

So there IS another one, after all!

I'll take your letter paragraph by paragraph, Mr. Man, just as I did that of your illustrious predecessor of a fortnight ago. I am not going to bother setting you right on every point, however; the depth of your ignorance is too abysmal. I will remark, though, that there are no "Old maids"—there are some women who have too much sense to get married.

I'm glad to disappoint you by printing this letter. I have no objection whatever to printing criticisms, and it gives me real joy when the letter happens to be as amusing as this one.

Our present scheme of civilization is tolerable, since women have a greater freedom than in past eras, but it is not yet perfect. There is no sign of the chaos you predict. It is true that women have now clothes that do not hamper their movements, that do not distort their bodies, and that permit them to enjoy exercise unknown to their sisters of a couple of generations ago. This change did not come suddenly. The first woman to appear on George street in a "Harem" skirt was mobbed by a bunch of ignorant men. If men changed their dress gradually, they could, in a few years, be as sensibly dressed as women are now—and haven't you started? Aren't plus-fours the forerunners of "pants cut off at the knee?" I'd like to encourage you, you see.

I confess I am not sufficiently well-versed in ecclesiastical affairs to excuse women for breaking some law of ages past, but I do suggest for consideration the idea that many old-established doctrines and habits are archaic and outworn.

There is a great difference between the expressions of opinion by women on this page and the work of the early advocates of women's suffrage. Consider for a moment that practically every writer to this column is a wife and mother in Peterborough district. Does that carry any weight?

As for the alleged deceit, may I suggest that this is libellous statement? If you are a business man (as your writing paper with the heading carefully trimmed off would seem to indicate) you should know better. I have only suppressed one letter besides those personal letters which the writer did not desire published. In the former case the correspondent wrote later thanking me for my good judgment.

I am seriously thinking, though, of barring all so-called "Thinkers" from these columns, because we cannot afford the space. The object of this page is to be helpful to women—and your arguments are neither helpful, inspiring nor sound. I suggest that you read, in order to learn, "A Vindication of the Rights of Women," published in the Humboldt Library of Science in 1890; "Why?" by Elizabeth Robins; and "The Subjection of Women" by John Stuart Hill. I have no doubt but that you can obtain these at the Library, or they may get copies for you.

"Dear Marion,

I would be pleased if you would send me the helps which I have checked on the coupon if you have not yet run out of them.

I am a regular reader of your column in The Examiner and I certainly think it is very helpful indeed. I especially liked the Armistice Page, it was so interesting to hear what way it affected different people. I should have liked to have written a letter myself but I was very busy that week and I didn't think I would be capable of anything worth while reading. I am not a native of Canada, I was in England at the time of the Armistice, so that anything I could have written would have been different, if not very entertaining.

This is the first time I have ever ventured to write you and I can think of nothing just now which would be of any value to your page, but should I do so I will try to write again, but I am the mother of three young children and consequently have very little time on my hands.

I shall, however, very much appreciate the helps I have mentioned and I do hope your page will continue to gain in popularity as it certainly deserves to do.

Apologizing if I have taken up too much of your time and thanking you.

Yours sincerely,
A Regular Reader."
City.

Thanks for your nice letter, "Regular Reader." Children ARE a lot of work, but don't you often notice that the mother who has several to look after often has more time than the married woman who pets a dog or a canary? I hope the helps DO help you, and I'll be glad to learn how your work turns out.

"Dear Marion:

Would you kindly send me checked off helps?

I think your page is very interesting. I shall have to show my appreciation for helps later on as I am very busy this morning.

Yours truly,
M. V. B."
City.

I'll be looking for those helps you promise, "M. V. B." sometime when you can spare a few minutes.

"Dear Marion:

Here I am again to congratulate you on your splendid success in getting such interesting numbers on Armistice Day. Some of them were really inspiring though they were all just fine. The whole edition was real good, and my congratulations go to the editor also for such a nice big number.

I was not old enough to remember anything of the war or Armistice, but mother tells me things about it.

I received the autumn hat instructions and many thanks as it was just fine. Would you please send the folder on making Christmas gifts at home? Thanking you beforehand and wishing you continued good luck, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
Rose Marie."

To prevent clothes from freezing to the clothesline wipe wire with a cloth dipped in strong salt water.

When your oven is too hot and burns your cake on the bottom don't try to cut it off with a knife. A coarse grater will take it off quickly and much more neatly.

Your hints are really fine, "Rose Marie." I'm SO glad the neighbors liked the Armistice number, it really represented a lot of work both by the neighbors who contributed letters and by the editor.

That Body of Yours

CITY CHILD AND COUNTRY CHILD.

Perhaps you have had the idea that if you could afford it or if the schooling were as good, you would like to bring up your children in the country. There with the fresh air, the outdoors, and good milk, and the little chores in gardening or looking after farm stock, the children would grow strong and rugged, and free from the childish ailments that afflict so many city children.

Now what is the truth in this matter?

Alfred E. Parker tells us that this belief that the country boy "working out in the open, building his muscles chopping wood or following the plough was just naturally healthier and stronger than the city boy" was all wrong and it took the World's War to show it. Of the millions drafted for war in the United States (and Canada was almost the same) one-third were physically unfit for war services. Invariably the larger percentage of men physically unfit for war service was found among young men from the country.

Why?

Two reasons were given.

"The country boy seldom received medical attention or advice. Many men from the country had infected tonsils and adenoids; their eyesight defective for years, which could have been corrected in early youth, was seriously defective when tested for the army. Where disease did hit the country man, it hit him hard, for the weak spots in his body reduced his vitality to such an extent that he was unable to throw it off readily.

The second reason for the country man's unfitness, was the lack, before the war, of physical education in the country schools. In other words although farm work exercised certain sets of muscles it lacked the all round development that city boys get in their body building exercise given at school, and the group games in which all the children indulge.

While a generation ago, it would have been true that country boys make the healthiest men, now with school medical inspection and supervised play, the city boy has the advantage.

Mrs. J. M. McCulloch, president of the Afternoon Branch of the Women's Auxiliary of All Saints' Anglican Church, was honored by the presentation to her from the members of a life membership pin in the Auxiliary. The presentation was made at this week's meeting of the society, which took the form of a pleasant wind-up to the season's work. The ladies met in the guild room and, after packing the bale for the school at Lac Laronge, Saskatchewan, made the presentation to Mrs. McCulloch, the gift being presented by Mrs. S. Harris and Mrs. M. Latimer. A social half hour and the service of refreshment brought the afternoon to a close.

On Friday evening, in the auditorium of the Prince of Wales school, a most clever and amusing entertainment was given by the Peterborough Women Teachers' Guild. There was no audience save the guild members, the staff of each city school giving its quota towards the program, and seven practically all-star casts 'performing'. Central School gave one scene from "The Birds' Christmas Carol," and professional performers could have done no better. The Queen Alexandra and Normal School staffs combined for an exquisitely humorous interpretation of "Lochinvar." The King George School brought down the house with their skit, "No Trains To-day," while the Collegiate Institute staff staged two wonderfully clever scenes from "Alice in Wonderland." The Queen Mary and King Edward Schools put on delightfully funny charades, the latter working in some recent local history. The Prince of Wales people had one scene of a mock trial, proving to all in doubt that women make "good" jurors. The Women Teachers' Guild has been asked to put on a part of this entertainment, later, for an audience chosen by invitation, as was done some years ago in their "Midsummer Night's Dream," but as this organization is bringing to the city, early in the New eYar, the Dickens' Fellowship, there is little probability of the former undertaking.

ENTERTAINING

FIFTEENTH ANNIVERSARY

Crystal gazing, if properly done, would make an ideal program for the Fifteenth Anniversary or Crystal wedding. Someone who is, of course, equal to the occasion, must be chosen for the role of seeress.

When one such as this was being held not far from Peterborough recently, the guests arrived to find the house in total darkness, but knowing the host and hostess quite well, they thought they would ring the door bell anyway. They were received by the host and hostess draped in loose black robes, but who said not a word. The guests were motioned to put aside their wraps and were bade to enter a dimly lighted room, which some of the guests recognized to be the living room. In the centre of the room was a small table covered with a black velvet cloth on which rested a small crystal ball.

When all the guests had arrived the room was totally darkened for three minutes, and three minutes seems just a little longer than usual when you are sitting waiting, then a tall candle appeared on the table which was the only light. One by one the guests were made stand and gaze into the ball while the seeress, who was clothed in a red gypsy cloak with a gay red and gold bandanna tied about her head and her face hidden by a black mask; told in a sing-song voice what she could see in the ball. As the hostess had chosen someone who knew all the group intimately, and was more or less clever at twisting all she knew of their special fads and fancies into a quick patter of apt prophecy—that 'hit home' rather close,—the crystal gazing proved to be a decided success, and provided plenty of amusement.

When the last guest had her future read, the gypsy blew out the candle and the room remained darkened for several minutes. When the lights were turned on, the dark shades had disappeared and the centre table and a number of small card tables were scattered about the room, equipped with score cards, cards and pencils.

An hour or two was spent in cards before the hostess led the way to the dining-room.

Lunch was served buffet style, the dining-table was entirely covered with cotton batting, and was generously sprinkled with snow dust which gave it a frosty glitter. In the centre a narrow, oblong mirror had been placed with the batting banked around it. Fifteen wee dolls dressed in white, woolly sweaters were set on the edge of the bank.

Above the table, hanging from the chandelier was a huge white bell, with the number 15 written on both sides of the table. From the bell hung a white ribbon for each guest and was pulled to the outer edge of the table, being held in place by a heavy crystal bead. At the end of the supper, the guests were allowed to pull one string at the end of which they found a fortune.

The menu consisted of chicken salad, with celery and nuts; small hot biscuits, split and buttered and filled with melted cheese; hot chocolate with whipped cream; vanilla ice cream topped with pineapple, and last of all a white-iced wedding cake, on which rested fifteen candles. The necessary cutlery and glass dishes were placed on a side table.

The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion

(Copyright)

I HAVE an idea! Brain-waves come to some people so often that the advent of another is not worth mentioning, but when I get an occasional one I like to stand right up in meeting and tell about it. So here goes:

* * *

You know, neighbors, I have received a great many letters from girls in their teens asking advice on love matters. I haven't wished to include them in the "Mail" column, because they don't seem to "fit in."

* * *

And then, too, I don't feel qualified to give advice in every case—and THAT'S being honest, isn't it?

* * *

It is too bad, I think, that these letters should be ignored, because so many of them are really sincere, and lots of girls have no one to whom they can go for advice.

* * *

Out of my regret has arisen the idea for a "Big Sister" column, which will be unique. I have never heard of such a department being conducted in the way I propose to try, but I have every confidence in my good neighbors, and so I am not afraid to make the experiment.

* * *

Letters on topics which I think suitable for reply through the "Big Sister" Column will be typed by me, so as to preserve the secret of the writer's identity, and the typewritten copy sent to some neighbor who will write the answer, giving such advice as she would give a younger sister.

* * *

The answer will then be printed in the "Big Sister" column, with the pen-name of the neighbor who gives it.

* * *

I have already asked several of the neighbors if they are willing to act as "Big Sisters," and they are enthusiastic about the idea.

* * *

This solves two problems, and has an added virtue. It preserves the "Mail" column for use by neighbors to gossip, pass on ideas, express opinions, and generally chatter as good neighbors should, at the same time providing a column for younger girls, where they can discuss and obtain advice on those problems that particularly interest them.

* * *

The virtue to which I referred is the chance given the neighbors to help. It is a real experience, neighbors, to have the opportunity of answering such letters as I receive; you will profit by it.

* * *

And then think of the varied experiences represented in our neighborly circle—no one woman, however bright, and mature, could carry it all in her head. All of this is made available to the teen-age girl.

* * *

Will you help? If you are willing to be a "Big Sister," just drop me a line to say so, giving your name, address, and pen-name. Your identity will be as carefully preserved as that of the inquirer.

* * *

And you girls, feel free to send in your letters, if not for "advice," then just to "talk things over." If you prefer a personal reply, enclose a stamped, addressed envelope, and if you would rather have me try my 'prentice hand, say so and I will do the best I can.

* * *

And now, having started writing about our page, I might as well keep on in the same strain. Do you notice how hard it is to call them "pages" instead of it "page"—or how should one put such an involved statement?

* * *

For two weeks, now, we have had two big pages every day, and, if I wish to catch up with my piles of mail, I'm afraid the editor will have to give us MORE.

* * *

The "Daily Reading" column met with instant favor, and quite a few suggestions for selections have come in. Please note that you need not copy out the extract you suggest printing. It is enough if you give the title, author's name, and the part you would like to see printed, if the whole is too long. Extracts must be brief, so that they can be read in a few minutes.

* * *

If you have any suggestions for bettering our pages (I got it right that time!) please tell me. These ARE really OUR pages, and every neighbor should feel a proprietory interest in them.

* * *

There is offered, this week, a pattern diagram of a bed jacket that can be easily made up as a Christmas gift, or, if you do not know anyone else for whom it would be suitable, you might give it to yourself.

* * *

There are still a few of the Christmas helps left—one telling how to make gifts at home, and the other, by Laura, telling games and recipes for Christmas parties.

* * *

Isn't it strange how little one appreciates things to which one has become accustomed until they are drawn to attention by an outsider? Just for instance, though I have a copy of Miss Crawford's poems on my book shelf, I never really appreciated them until Mr. MacDonald told about them.

* * *

Since then I have found in this little volume of eighty-six poems some real treasures, and I hope some day soon to pass on some of them to you.

* * *

Then, a couple of weeks ago, a speaker at Kiwanis Club, whose address I read in the paper, sent me right back to Dickens' stories with an enthusiasm I haven't felt for years.

* * *

Perhaps the neighbors will find the Daily Reading column working similarly with them. In hunting up suitable things to include there, I have found such a wealth that choice is difficult.

* * *

And, oh dear!, how hard it is to tear myself away from the book from which I am taking an extract! Books ARE like that!

* * *

"Knowing I loved my books, he furnished me,
From my own library, with volumes that

—Shakespeare.

* * *

I hope we all find new treasures among our books through the Daily Reading.

* * *

To quote Trollope: "This habit of reading, I make bold to tell you, is your pass to the greatest, the purest, and the most perfect pleasures that God has prepared for his creatures . . It lasts when all other pleasures fade."

* * *

And Hamerton: "If you are reading a piece of thoroughly good literature, Baron Rothschild may possibly be as well occupied as you—he is certainly not better occupied."

* * *

This will be a very "bookish" paper to-day. I noticed just a little while ago that the Secketary Hawkins page has two or three columns of essays on "My Favorite Book," written by children. It would be a very difficult problem for an adult to tell the title of his favorite book because so much depends on the mood one is in.

* * *

There are times when I do not hesitate to pick "Helen's Babies" for my bedtime reading; at others nothing lighter than Macaulay is satisfying. I would never DARE say that of ALL books any ONE is my favorite.

* * *

I hope you all like our new serial, "The Luckiest Lady" by Ruby M. Ayres. There will be more time to read, now that winter is here with its stay-at-home atmosphere, and you should start this serial right with the first installment.

* * *

Maybe you would like to know what it's all about, so here's a synopsis. Marna Paget—the luckiest lady, her adopted daughter calls her—has everything that money, youth and beauty can bring her, including the devotion of an adoring husband.

* * *

But Marna is unhappy, for she married George Paget without loving him, and three months later met and loved Hugh Hubbard. Though they acknowledge their love for each other, Hubbard and Marna are too fine, too loyal, to do anything to hurt Marna's husband.

* * *

So they go through the years unhappy, but true to their idea of the decent thing to do. And George lives on happily, unsuspectingly, his only thought his wife's happiness.

* * *

Then one day an embittered man who is himself infatuated with Marna tells George the truth—that Marna and Hugh have loved each other for years. And before he sees Marna again, George dies—in front of an automobile from which he has rescued a child.

* * *

At last, never knowing that her husband had learned her bitterly hidden secret, Marna is free. Is she the luckiest lady?

* * *

You'll enjoy every one of the chapters, which will be printed in big installments of 1,500 words a day.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Wide jeweled bracelet as worn over the coat sleeve. The coat is of black velvet and the bracelet is of gold with green and red stones.

Americans and Europeans who have recently been traveling in northern Africa have revived the fashion for that heavy hand-wrought silver jewelry that women of Algiers and Morocco have worn for centuries. Some of the best pieces to be had are two hundred years old, but even the modern pieces cling to the traditional decorative motifs that make them look so primitive.

It was when I was looking at a really notable collection of these necklaces, plaques and bracelets recently brought back from Northern Africa and reflecting on how very much more modern and more appropriate to modern daytime frocks they were than the sugar-coated jewelry made in this country a generation ago—that I learned for the first time that bracelets really have had a place in the scheme of things of primitive women aside from their mere decorative value.

These wide silver bracelets with their finely hammered decorations all have knobs—four or five or six good hard knobs on each bracelet—knobs as big as gooseberries made of solid silver. And these knobs, I understand, were very convenient devices for settling scores with the over-aggressive men folk of the community when mere sharpness of tongue was of no avail.

These North African bracelets are really most attractive—even when you know why the knobs are there—and I understand that Algerian jewelry is in great demand for sports wear now in Paris. The long wrought silver pins used by the desert folk to fasten their burnooses on their shoulders make effective decorations for the side of a simple, soft plain felt hat.

There seems to be no doubt of the continued vogue of the bracelet. The tendency at present seems to be to wear one very wide bracelet instead of the collection of four or five or six that were recently in favor, and a new trick in Paris is to wear one of these wide bracelets outside the sleeve of the coat or suit jacket.

FAVORITE RECIPE.

Ingredients: Cold roast turkey. For the devilled butter, 1 ounce of butter, ½ a saltspoonful of cayenne, black pepper, and curry powder, a pinch of ground ginger, and piquant sauce.

Method: Mix the ingredients for the devilled butter together on a plate. Divide the turkey into pieces convenient for serving, remove all skin, score the flesh deeply, and spread lightly with butter. Put aside, and let remain for one hour, or longer when a highly seasoned dish is desired; then grill over the fire (about eight minutes), and serve with a suitable piquant sauce.

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dear Marion:

Coming of Scotch ancestry, I don't waste even the ends of wax candles!

I have found that I can make them into the most scrumptuous furniture polish. I melt the ends and mix them with turpentine. After applying the polish to the furniture I rub it hard with a soft cloth—and you'd be surprised at the splendid result.

With all kinds of good wishes.

For the woman who makes an occasional practice of getting rid of surplus articles of clothing and house furbishings, here are two cases of actual need in the city:

A woman with four children and another baby expected soon has a husband who has been sent to the penitentiary. She has no source of income except the amount received from the City's Charity relief fund.

The second case has to do with a family of eight children and a ninth to arrive shortly. The father is the only bread-winner and has steady work which gives him a nominal return. Expenses of food, heat and rent eat up most of the income here, and the clothing of the children takes a second place. Bed clothing also is a need.

One of the interesting little bits of luxurious appointment for the table noted in a visit to local Gift Shops for Christmas is a novelty in the form of rose ivory knives. The same lovely pink ivory that is used for toilet articles has been placed on these knife handles and they would make a beautiful adjunct to a table arranged with rose-colored linens and flowers.

A jaunt which should prove both pleasing and educational was that undertaken by several members of the Art Study Club of the Women's Art Association, who went to Toronto this week to view a special exhibit of pictures at The Grange.

The Art Study Club is a branch of the Women's Art Association, and has been functioning for five years past, with fortnightly programs throughout the winter season, devoted to a study of the works and lives of great painters and sculptors, past and modern. Mrs. R. J. Kidd is this year's convenor.

Yesterday and today, the Ladies' Aid Society of St. James' United Church is conducting a sale in Jay's store on George street. This is an annual effort of the members, who specialize at Christmas time in plain and fancy articles of sewing and sales of home-made cooking and candy.

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. James' Church is an exceptionally energetic organization. They were responsible last year for the payment of $1,000 towards the Building Fund of their church, and they have also done the usual renovation and re-modelling of the parsonage on the occasion of the arrival of the new pastor. The president, Mrs. A. Wilson, is absent from the city at present. The convenor of the sale is Mrs. F. Pratt.

The Salvation Army, who had their usual Christmas sale this year, with exceptionally pretty arrangements of the booths in the Young People's Temple, depends, as do so many of the churches, on the women for the success of these annual events. Members of the Women's Home League and of the Young People's Legion prepare busily for months ahead of time, and the success of the sale is their only reward for much patient labor.

The Women's Home League does a great deal of relief work amongst the needy, during the hard winter months. On Monday evening, this organization will have a visit from Mrs. Henry, wife of Colonel Henry, chief secretary for Canada East, who will speak to them on "The Triumph of Love."

The Young People's Legion is a society of girls, with about forty members, who are taught to do sewing and fancy work in their regular meetings. Mrs. F. Robinson is their president and Mrs. J. Pammett is president of the Home League of Women. Together, the societies co-operate with the men of the Army in sending out the baskets of Christmas cheer, which totalled over seventy last season.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

It would be far fetched to say that faithful Rover counts the days till Christmas and really expects to be included in the general holiday merry-making. And yet the house dog, so keen to note change in household routine, so ready to respond to high spirits of his human associates, must realize at this time of the year that there is something going on, and if he has passed a number of Christmases with you there must be something pleasantly familiar to his nostrils about the smell of the Christmas trees and the aroma of plum pudding. His eyes gleam more brightly and his tail wags more frequently, because somehow he enters into the spirit of the approaching holidays.

I have been told that the late Queen Alexandra of England, who was a notable dog lover, always went the round of the kennels on Christmas morning to wish each dog a merry Christmas and to see that he was being well cared for.

House dogs may have a much more intimate share of our Christmas cheer than is possible for dogs in kennels. Of course, there should be a big red bow to be worn on the collar on Christmas Day and special occasions through the holiday week.

And, not to leave the faithful hound out in the distribution of gifts, there are a number of possible things that you might get for him. A new collar or a new leash, a brush, a special dish for food or water, a small blanket or a new sleeping basket might be chosen.

PADDLERS TO MEET MARLBOROS IN FINAL

TORONTO CANOE CLUB WINS 3-2 TILT IN S.P.A. SEMI-FINALS

Experience and Speed Counts For T. C. C. in Last Period.

TIGHT BATTLE.

TORONTO, Dec. 8.—Toronto Canoe Club and Marlboros, factors of the Big Four O.H.A. group, meet in the finals for the S.P.A. junior troph, Monday night, the Canoeists qualifying to enter the championship contest with a 3 to 2 win over West Toronto, in the semi-finals last night. Experience and speed put the Canoeists in the last round for the pre-season's laurels, although the West Enders made them use every atom of their advantage to get the victory, in one of the best games of the series.

The Junction team, composed of graduates of the outdoor leagues, have been moulded into a powerful machine by Bill Handcock and their battle to the last bell last night, is not only a token of preliminary success but also a prediction of championship chances for the regular winter campaign. It was the speed and ability to act in the pinch that gave the Paddlers the edge, although it was a close one and might have been reversed had the West Enders played more offensive hockey in the early stages of the game.

The teams:

Toronto Canoe Club.—Goal, Miller; defence, Foster and Robertson; centre, McIntyre; wings, Brydson and Anderson; subs., McManus, Huggins, Graydon, McNeil and Nell.

West Toronto—Goal, Geddes; defence, Bignal and Hearn; centre, Ewens; wings, Thorne and Phillips; subs, Kressler, Woddington, Doran, Lampart and Morrison.

Referee—Wm. J. Walshe.

Second Period.

3—Toronto C. C., Brydson, (Robertson) 4.00

Final score—Toronto Canoe Club, 3; West Toronto, 2.

HAMILTON WINS FROM TORONTO

Manager Morris is Star of the Game in Which Winners Show Class.

BY 3 TO 1 SCORE.

HAMILTON December 8. — Plugging a gaping hole in the defence with his own body and that of young Paddon, former Owen Sound junior, Bernie Morris led Hamilton to a 3 to 1 triumph over the Toronto Millionaires in the second Canpro fixture on the local ice this week. Morris promised several days ago that in the event he was unable to secure an experienced defence man to fill the gap that had been responsible for four or five losses, he would try himself, and with the aid of Paddon, the veteran leader rendered such valiant service that the Millionaires were not only well beaten on the scoreboard but they were completely shaded in every way.

AMATEUR PLAYERS MAY ACCEPT CASH PRIZES IN SOME CASES

A.A.U. of Canada Passes Resolution Allowing Further Leeway To Athletes.

GRANT PROPOSAL DEFERRED

PORT ARTHUR, Dec. 7.— (Canadian Press.)—Further leaway for amateurs competing in "pastimes" such as golf, cricket, horseshoe and quoits pitching and archery was granted by a resolution "allowing them to accept cash prizes in such competitions even against pros." by the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada here to-day.

The suggestion that instead of the Olympic committee obtaining a lump grant from the government every four years, one-fourth of sum annually be received by the A.A.U. of C. to set aside at interest, was deferred.

Judge J. A. Jackson, of Lethbridge, construed the move as criticism of the Olympic committee and demanded an outright vote of lack of confidence if such were the case.

Judge Jackson also sponsored a resolution asking complete re-organization of the Olympic committee to ensure all Canadian representatives.

OLYMPICS DEFEAT CATARACTS BY 3-2

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 8.—Before 3,000 fans, the largest crowd so far this season to witness a Canpro game, Detroit Olympics continued their triumphant march by defeating the Cataracts 3 to 2. The game was fast and replete with heavy, legitimate body checking.

Olympics were the better team on the night's play. Led by Brydge, Foyston, McCade and Bellefeuille, the invaders had many more chances to score than the Lalonde-coached team. After a one-all finish at the end of the first period, the Olympics took the lead early in the second stanza, and had a little margin on the play until the end, except for a noble Falls spurt in the third chapter that did not long.

Brydge Plays Cleverly

Brydge on defence was a tower of strength to the invaders. He also did some fine rushing, and his goal in the second period was a strong and worthy effort. Frank Foyston played clever hockey on the front line, as did Bellefeuille and McCabe. McInenly, a relief man, was a big help to his team. Williams, Cain and Kelterborn were best for the Falls, while Herrington showed aggressiveness when on. Farrell in goal made many clever saves.

Detroit — Goal, Stuart; defence, Brydge, and Hinsperger; centre, Goodfellow; wings, Bellefeuille and McCabe; subs, Foyston, Gillis, McInenly.

Niagara Falls—Goal, Farrell; defence, Duggan and Cain; centre, Quesnel; wings, Godin and Kelterborn; subs., Prestia, Steele, Madden, Herrington, McLeod, Williams.

Referee—Rodden.

The Summary

First Period

1—Detroit, McCabe (Goodfellow) 6.00
2—Niagara Falls, Godin 7.00

Second Period

3—Detroit, Brydge 5.00

Third Period

4—Niagara Falls, Herrington 2.00
5—Detroit, Foyston 2.30

Penalties—First period, Williams, Prestia, McCabe, Goodfellow; second period, none; third period, Prestia 2, Brydge, Hinsperger.

CHAMPIONSHIPS GO TO ALBERTA

A.A.U. of Canada Decides To Hold Future Meetings in September.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., December 8. —Canadian Press. — The question of devising ways and means of re-organizing the Canadian Olympic committee so that every portion of Canada shall actively participate in the executive work of the said committee was introduced yesterday at the A.A.U. of C. meeting by means of a resolution from the Alberta branch.

The motion was fathered by Judge Jackson of Lethbridge, who stated frankly that he had no solution to offer, but thought that something should be done so that the extreme east and the extreme west could have more direct touch with the affairs of the committee.

Cecil Duncan of Ottawa said that his branch had not been consulted in the appointment of the Olympic representative from that district, Harvey Pulford. Mr. Duncan thought there should be a reconstruction and reorganization of the committee. He suggested that the Olympic committee might be eliminated altogether, and that the A.A.U. office should function itself in Olympic matters through the president of that organization.

Webb Fraser, president of the maritimes said that the Olympic representative to that section was always in close touch with the affairs of the committee, and the branch worked harmoniously with him. Mr. Fraser praised the Olympic committee and its members for their splendid work during the past three years.

James Morkin, Winnipeg, Manitoba, representative on the Olympic committee, said there was always the closest co-operation in his province, and it was realized there that the committee had functioned splendidly and was entitled to the congratulations of the meeting.

Chas. Higginbottom, Toronto, said that the branches should co-operate with the committee and should be furnished with all and full information of its affairs.

M. M. Robinson, Hamilton, said that was just a question of geography. Canada is a big country and the distances are great. He suggested that in future if the representatives of the far west and the far east could not personally attend the Olympic committee they should designate some resident to represent them.

The discussion continued until adjournment and will be resumed at the meeting of the Canadian Olympic committee later.

It was decided in future that the general meeting of the A.A.U. of C., be held in September, instead of in December.

The track and field championships for 1929 were awarded to Alberta. It was decided to institute national indoor championships, and they were awarded to Ontario as were the national gymnastics and tug-of-war. The boxing and wrestling championships were awarded to Thunder Bay. It was recommended to the incoming executive that British Columbia be granted the Dominion championships and Olympic trials in 1932, if both are to be held together.

A proposal to provide for re-instatement for professionals five years after the offence, was defeated.

It was decided on the suggestion by the Ontario branch that amateur athletes, who compete for prizes, cash or otherwise, in indoor bowling, golf, archery and horseshoe pitching would not jeopardize their amateur standing, these being listed as pastimes rather than athletic sports.

A. L. KILLALY ADDRESSES CLUB

At Present Time Water Is Being Stored in Back Lakes, Says Speaker.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 8. — The perfect attendance record which the local Rotary Club has enjoyed since its formation was broken to-day when one member was absent on account of sickness. The meeting was held in the dining room of the St. Lawrence Hotey, and the speaker for the day was A. L. Killaly of Peterborough.

As superintendent of this division of the Trent Canal, Mr. Killaly was able to speak on the subject which was exceptionally interesting to the members of local club. He explained that if the water supply was required to be handled for navigation purposes only, the duties of the canal would be lessened by at least one hundred per cent. But it was necessary to maintain as nearly as possible, a uniform flow for power development purposes. This required skillful manipulation and not a little hard work. In the winter months, the logs in the dams were sometimes frozen to a depth of seven and eight feet, and to remove these or add to their numbers was the work of hours and often days. It was unusual at the present season to have the freshet conditions which prevailed along the waterway. As this time of the year, water was being stored in the upper lakes to guard against the winter shortage. Later in the season, the lakes would be drawn to a low level to take care of the spring freshet brought on by the melting snow. Each man in charge of the dams along the system was advised from time to time at what level to keep the water in the stretch above his dam. These orders were issued after carefully consulting the records dating back thirty and forty years. In this way, and by means of the storage made possible by the Kawartha Lakes, the uniform flow for power development purposes was made possible.

DAILY PROGRAM

psychology of approaching prospects and segregating them into divisions, according to what they are likely to purchase of life insurance, governed by their circumstances.

Self Discipline.

"Another plank that I would suggest, is the recognition of self discipline by the insurance man," continued the speaker, "for it is more a problem to go to those people with a specific story worth their while listening to, than to merely pick out prospects. We should have a specific analysis of what best suits a prospect's circumstances and responhibilities and never put off until to-morrow, what should be done to-day."

The importance of adding new names to one's list of prospects, was stressed by Mr. Anderson and he pointed out the necessity for avoiding old habits of thought. In conclusion, he urged his hearers to organize their work and lives that they may maintain the insurance business as one of which they may be proud.

The vote of thanks to the speaker was ably moved by John I. Allen, who touched on the various points of the address just concluded, as they applied to his own business.

Mr. Wray, of the Metropolitan Company, seconded the vote of thanks and in so doing, spoke of the value of keen competition and absurdity of one company's representative knocking another.

There were brief remarks by Mr Ray and by others present, including some of the officers, prior to the closing of the meeting.

BISONS WIN FIRST GAME

HEAVY PENALTIES.

KITCHENER, Dec. 8.— Playing fast and decidedly strenuous hockey the Buffalo Bisons broke into the win column at the expense of the Kitchener Flying Dutchmen here last night in the Canadian Pro League by a score of 4 to 2. It was the first win of the Buffalo team in seven starts and it was the first loss of the homesters in four games.

The Buffalo team had an "on" night and put up a checking barrage that played havoc with the homsters, the visitors getting two drives on the net for every one of the locals and their shots were of the more dangerous variety. Percy Lesueur's men well earned their win, going into the lead early and only being menaced on one occasion, that being midway through the second period. Then with the locals up two men they tallied to reduce the lead to one, but the Buffalo team opened up again and in less than four minutes they flashed the red light twice to clinch the verdict.

The game was noteworthy for two things, first the wonderfully consistent playing of Gordon Brydson for the visitors. He played a beautiful game and was unfortunate to be held to a pair of goals, only the great goalkeeping of Moore, who saved the homesters from a bad beating, keeping him to that number.

The other feature was the number of penalties, 23 being handed out with the homsters grabbing off 12. Each side got a major and both came in the final period. McFarlane got his for a cross-check, while a few minutes later Hughes did not like the way Berlet stopped him and he waded into the Kitchener player with his fists. Hughes got the major and Berlet two minutes.

Referee—Bobby Hewitson.

The Summary

First Period.

1. Buffalo .....Roth 3.42
2. Buffalo .....Roth 15.18

Second Period

3. Kitchener....Palangio (Hillier), Skinner) 9.10
4. Buffalo .....Brydson (Roth) 2.35
5. Buffalo .....Brydson (Frew) 1.00

6. Kitchener....Savage 10.20

Penalties—First period, Lederman, Berlet, Hughes, Savage; second period, Skinner, Hughes, Lederman, Huard, Skinner, Miller, Lederman, Hughes 1, McFarlane; third period, Roth, McFarlane (major), Berlet, Hughes (major), Miller, McFarlane, Hughes.

SHORT COURSE

that it lay in his power to give, and urged the young people to take the fullest possible advantage of the opening for increasing their understanding of farm activities and problems which this course offered to them.

Reeve W. T. Wood, of Millbrook, had left earlier in the evening to attend another meeting, but had given Mr. Kellough assurance of the sympathy and practical support of the municipality and the council in making the proposed month's course a success.

Professor James H. Neilson, extension specialist in horticulture, next addressed the meeting, stating that he had visited at least one hundred short courses in the past four or five years, in an official capacity, and always considered it a privilege and a pleasure to do this work.

Two benefits, specially, were pointed out as resulting from taking the lectures and doing the practical work, one of these being an increased earning power. "Get new ideas, and up-to-date methods, and make these your own, and you will have better returns from your farms, and an actual cash value from their use." Some concrete instances in this regard were given by the speaker, from personal knowledge of the facts mentioned.

"There is, however, something more valuable than money, and that is inspiration. A new world will be opened up to you, and you will learn where to get information when you want it, and also how to apply it to the problems in which you are most interested. Your outlook will be widened, and your horizons set ever farther and farther ahead."

Making progress by the use of one's own abilities was stressed by Mr. Neilson in his closing remarks, not depending too much on other people but learning to look within, and face hard, cold, disagreeable facts, if need be; help from without is all right, providing we make it our own and apply it in a practical way.

First Held in 1914.

Mr. Kellough spoke of the first agricultural short course held here in 1914, from which some of the pupils are still reaping practical benefit; then came the one in 1922, when F. C. Paterson, now of Norfolk County, was the local representative; it too was successful; "and now in 1929 we are offering the third short course in agriculture and the first in home economics and we want to make it surpass all others in attendance, interest, and help received. We would like to have at least forty or fifty boys enrolled, and as many girls, so we may keep our minds alive, and our information up to date. The conditions of farming are changing and we must learn the new methods if we would keep right up to the times."

The subjects in home economics include: Food values and cooking; laundry, house planning and decoration; household administration; sewing; home nursing and first aid.

The course in agriculture includes: Live stock, field crops; dairying; soils and cultivation; farm drainage; fertilizers and manures; poultry; fruits and vegetables; bee-keeping; weeds and weed seeds; insects; farm accounts and management; business methods and public speaking; special courses, and joint lectures on poultry, farm dairying, horticulture, apiculture, English and public speaking will be arranged for, and a literary society will be formed which will hold its session on Friday afternoons during the month, the program being in the nature of debates, singing, etc. There will be special prizes in both classes for general proficiency, regular attendance, and possibly on other counts.

School days and school hours will be the rule—from Monday to Friday each week, and from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1.30 to 4 p.m. A fee of fifty cents will be charged to cover any breakages, since the town furnishes the place of meeting and the heating and lighting, and some material will probably have to be bought, in connection with the girls' classes in cooking and sewing.

Before dismissal on Wednesday night, Mr. Kellough announced the Junior Farmers' Conference to be held at Cobourg on December 13, beginning at 10 a.m., when Mr. Duncan and Mr. Whitelaw, of Toronto, will be the speakers. Dr. Reynolds of the O.A.C. addressing the young people at the banquet at noon; and at which he urged that this vicinity have a good representation present. The "Farmers' Day" at the Canadian Packing Plant, Peterborough, on Friday, December 14, when practical demonstrations will be given, was also announced, and an invitation extended to those present to attend.

It is expected that Miss Hopkins, of Lindsay, who was so popular with the girls when coaching them here last summer for the judging competitions, will be one of the instructors during the short course in January; "Don't miss the first three days," was Mr. Kellough's closing challenge. "If you do not return after that it will be our fault, but if you do not come then what you miss will be your own fault."

Inside Sportin' Dope—By A. Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, since my last the hockey schedule makers has been busy, and looking over their work, it is a cinch to see that we ain't going to suffer from no lack of hockey this winter. While some of the names suggests we have dropped outa the big time into the kerosene circuit, still they oughta be a kick in most of the games, even if they ain't hardly of Allan Cup calibre. They is enough games on the cards in Jan. to keep the real fans entertained nearly every night in the week, with already 8 jr. and 5 intermediate battlers lined up and the Collegiate kids in their own Interscholastic family row to give a collegiate touch to the doings. The celebrated Havelock entertainers ain't playing on this circuit this season, but Marmora jumps in to fill the gap, and as they are playing their home games on the local ice-box, some hectic clashes with the Lakefield battlers will enliven the dull winter evenings.

Them that don't take their hockey two serious oughta get a lotta enjoyment out of next month's program.

Our graduates into the ready-money circle, Mac, has been doing themselves proud. Our Mister Bert McLeod is captain of the Kansas City club and Mister Biffer Ranger is a regular on the same outfit. Mister Newsy Bailey scored 2 of the Leafs' 3 makers against Canadiens in Montreal the other night, and Mister Babe Bogardis starred for Buffalo against the Toronto Millionaires in the Can-Pro circuit. All of which does much to confirm the suspicion that the Peterborough ars. of three years ago was a pretty tidy hockey machine. Mister Bailey incidentally is up near the top of the scoring heap in the N.H. loop, and the way he's going oughta get a nice fat renewal of his contract when the present 3-year agreement runs out this season. Experts like Mister Charlie Querrie place Mister Bailey well up in the list of pro stars at the present time. Peterborough fans is glad to hear of his success, for Mister Bailey always give his best to the Petes every time he was dropped out.

Well, Mac, the football season is about ended, and the Hamilton Tigers, which is about the only team of any kind that was able to come through and win after I had called them to do so, are the boss team of 1928. Even Mister Mike Rodden sez the Tigers is good, and them Regina fellows ain't likely to start a argument to the contrary. The Westerners didn't show anything new Saturday except bars legs, and the girls beat them to that long ago. However, the lads from the great open spaces deserve credit for a game fight, and that 30-0 score doesn't so much make them look bad as it does make the Tigers look strong. They ain't been many more powerful football machines working on this side of the border since the old game of knock-'em-down-and-drag-'em-out was first introduced, and Regina in taking it on the chin has the consolation anyway of knowing that everybody else what met Hamilton this season took it in exactly the same place.

Up to the time of writing, the weatherman ain't produced nothing that looked like ice-making climate, so the local puckchasers is still outa action. With games scheduled right after Christmas the boys will have a battle to get into shape for the 1st clashes, but if they's nobody with a hundred grand to sink into a ice plant they ain't nothing that can be did about it.

Well, Mac, everything else is normal. The guns ain't back in the park, yet the gas pumps is still on the street, the Mayor has had a vote of confidence from the Council, and I ain't got my Christmas shopping started.

Hoping you are the same.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F. D. C.

One of the hardest battles fought by that great Peterborough hockey club of 1902 which brought the first Intermediate O.H.A. championship to this city was the game with the Port Hope Ontarios in Cobourg on Jan. 30, 1902, which the Petes won 4 to 3 and which decided the championship of the district and sent the Petes on their way to the highest honors.

By reason of dropping their first game of the season in Lindsay the Peterborough club found themselves in the position of having to defeat Port Hope twice to grab the district title. They won their home game 5 to 2 but the Ontarios showed enough to be regarded as most formidable opposition for the return fixture which was played in Cobourg.

The 1902 Peterborough team was composed of three hockeyists of intermediate exerience in Goalkeeer Wasson, Rollie Glover at point and Chris Graham on the forward line and four brilliant members of the championship Colts, the Junior O.H.A. winners of the year before, and this combination of mature steadiness and youthful dash and fire proved a winning machine throughout the season.

Both Port Hope and Peterborough ran excursions to Cobourg for the great battle, and the crowd was a record one. There were seven packed coaches in the Peterborough excursion train, and the battle song of that year came into being that night. It ran something like this:

"Oh we'll beat Port Hope and we're after the cup; Say, old woman, is your rhubarb up?"

and this refrain was heard with appropriate variations all through the season.

There was a terrific jam at the rink. For a long time the players could not get in, and after they had finally been passed through and were ready to start, the crowd had overflown on to the ice, and there was a long delay until the spectators had been shoe-horned into every available space along the side. The writer, one of the youthful fans who accompanied the Petes on that occasion, watched the battle from an uncomfortable and not particularly advantageous position on a ledge at the main door of the rink from where only the end of the ice could be seen, but anyway, he saw the winning goal scored, and was too happy to worry over missing one of the details.

It was a stubborn, hard-fought, wildly exciting contest in which the Petes were always in front and the Ontarios always dangerous. Port Hope depended almost altogether on body checking to stop the Petes, and they played the man all the way through. Referees were not as strict in those days in this respect, and the Port Hope tactics meant a gruelling battle for the Petes ,who had to take a lot of punishment. Fortunately it did not begin to be felt until the ultimate champions had set up a three-goal lead, and they were able to stay in front when the effects of the hard body checking became noticeable in the second half.

Fred Whitcroft, former junior rover, and perhaps the greatest hockey player Peterborough has produced, scored the first goal of the game after 23 minutes' exciting play- the Ontarios' defence and beat Bobby corner he stickhandled out around the Ontarios' deefnce and beat Bobby Mercer at close quarters. Whitcroft was also responsible for the Petes' second goal, giving Harry Morgan a perfect pass, on which the young centre player made no mistake.

It was 2 to 0 at half-time, and seven minutes after the second half opened Harold Armstrong, one of the most brilliant players of his time and one of the few men in the history of O.H.A. hockey who played on championship junior, intermediate, and senior teams, made one of his characteristic rushes through the whole Port Hope team for the most spectacular goal of the night.

With a three-goal lead for the Petes the battle looked to be over, but the fighting Ontarios came to life and scored twice in the next five minutes. Harold Armstrong then tallied what proved to be the winning marker, but not by a rush this time, but by a long, accurate heave from centre ice that Mercer failed to glimpse.

It was a fortunate goal for the Petes, who dropped back on the defensive to hold their two-goal lead, and succeeded in doing so, although the Ontarios got another marker before the hard struggle ended, leaving the final score 4 to 3.

The line-up:

Referee—Hugh Jack, Toronto.

MORKIN MAY SUCCEED LAMB

CONVENTION ENDS TO-NIGHT

PORT ARTHUR, December 8. Canadian Press. — After one of the most momentous meetings in its forty-one years' existence, the sessions of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, are expected to conclude to-night, when the new president will be at the helm.

Among those likely to succeed Dr. A. S. Lamb, most prominently mentioned is J. I. Morkin of Winnipeg.

The paramount question of the meeting, the controversy between Dr. Lamb and F. J. Mulqueen, chairman of the Canadian Olympic Committee, and M. M. Robinson, manager of the Olympic track and field team, remains to be settled to-day. Dr. Lamb was severe in indictment of the two Olympic officials, and Mr. Mulqueen in reply yesterday was equally severe. Mr. Robinson is to present a written reply to the charges to-day.

VIEWS ON SPORT

The players of the Peterborough Hockey Club had a practice on the ice at the canal this afternoon.

With a practice on the canal this afternoon and another slated for the Sacred Heart Rink on Monday evening, the Petes may be said to have started the hockey.

There was a big meeting of junior players at the Albion Knitting Company's plant last evening, and important matters were discussed. A committee of eight of the enthusiastic players was nominated to work in conjunction with the officers of the club in protecting the harmony between the members of the team. These men will see that every man who makes the team, works and earns his position, and that he continues to play for the good of the team as a whole.

Jim Coursey was elected manager, with Lou LeBarr, Jr., as assistant, and both are keenly interested in sports, the former doing a deal of service for the Raybestos ball team, and everyone knows that the LeBarr family have always been to the fore in their support of local teams.

With the large crowd at the meeting and the feeling of co-operation that was expressed, it may be expected that the team will develop smartly.

Matters pertaining to the last Canadian Olympic team are being thoroughly aired at the annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada being held at Port Arthur. Dr. Lamb, in his address, praised the spirit and glorious achievements of the Canadian athletes at Amsterdam, but condemned as deplorable the tactics and bickerings of some Canadian Olympic officials. Some of the things said at the meeting were far from friendly or flattering to members of the Olympic Committee, and it seems regrettable that after the worthy successes won by athletes things should be tarnished by the committee and is behavior a the Games

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHOR'S CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

It is on suggestion of D.C. that I print, to-day, an extract from the Satires of Horace.

Quintus Horatius Flaccus was the most popular of Roman poets. He was born in B.C. 65 and died B.C. 8.

December 8, 1928

(Charitable Judgements, Horace, Satires I. 3)

"True love, we know, is blind; defects, that blight
Nay, pass for beauties; as Balbinus shows
A passion for the wen on Agna's nose.
Oh, with our friendships that we did the same,
And screened our blindness under virtue's name!
For we are bound to treat a friend's defect
With touch most tender, and a fond respect;
Even as a father treats a child's, who hints,
The urchin's eyes are roguish, if he squints:
Or if he be as stunted, short, and thick,
As Sisyphus the dwarf, will call him "chick!"
If crooked all ways, in back, in legs, and thighs,
With softeninw phrases will the flaw disguise
So, if one friend too close a fist betrays,
Let us ascribe it to his frugal ways;
Or is another—such we often find—
To flippant jest and braggart talk inclined,
'Tis only from a kindly wish to try
To make the time 'mongst friends go lightly by:
Another's tongue is rough and overfree,
Let's call it bluntness and sincerity:
Another's choleric; him we must screen,
As cursed with feelings for his peace too keen.
This is the course, methinks, that makes a friend,
And, having made, secures him to the end.

I agree with "D.C." when she says "There is a real lesson in these lines for every woman. We have the name of being "catty"; if we just take "Charitable Judgements' to heart no one can in future accuse us in that way." It isn't necessary, "D.C." to write out the extracts you desire printed, if I can obtain them in my own library or at the Public Library. I'll send out an S.O.S. for any I can't find.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSIONER TO SOUTH AFRICA IS BANQUETED

est parts of the world ever seen, with its soil tremendously fertile, and diamond, gold and copper found in a profusion that puts Canada's mining area to shame. This true rich land of Africa, lying north of the Union, between the desserts and the Delta of the Nile.

"Why has this country not been opened up? The answer is the tsetse fly which has ruled the land for a thousand years and more. The tsetse fly, by the filth of his long biting bill, has carried sleeping sickness and disease in all this rich land. The land was only settled by small villages separated by a distance that was never penetrated for fear of the tsetse. If a native left his village to visit another he was killed by the witch doctor on his return because he carried evil spirits and the poison of the tsetse. One settlement living on a river lived on a diet of fish for a thousand years and five miles was another settlement on a hill who ate nothing but maize for the same period of time, and the distance between was never crossed. One never took its produce to the other because of the dreaded tsetse. This is why the zebra was never trained as a beast of burden, why there was no cultivation, no civilization and why the whites never penetrated into the plentiful land.

Overcame the Fly.

"The process of waking Africa came with the overcoming of the tsetse. Motor cars which the tsetse cannot destroy with his bite have gone into and opened up the territory. The route into the hinterland is now easy and it is well travelled.

"With the awakening of Africa comes the big problem of the blacks, who number 30 millions, to the two millions of whites. Think of Canada with a population of 150 millions of Indians seeking employment and control. Some of the tribes which have been meat eaters are very intelligent and vigorous, such as the Zulus, who gave the British so much trouble. There are no reasons why these should be regarded as lower mentally than the whites, and they are above the descendants of the negroes of the West Coast, which are taking such a big place in the life of the United States to-day so soon after slavary. Some whites have the attitude that the native must be kept in subjection and never trained to allow him to enter into competition. They feel that treating the blacks as a peaceful enemy grouped in compounds is the only way to safeguard their country for their children. But this is not the attitude of the Colonial Powers who rule most of Africa. The six British colonies are ruled from Downing Street, and the natives are considered subjects whose rights and lands must be held in trust. The French are training their natives to be Frenchmen and are planning to use them in their millions in the next war. The Belgians in the Congo are educating their peoples to take an active part in the administration of the territory.

"The danger of a clash between the whites and the blacks looms over Africa and the cloud will not be dispelled. The liberal ideas prevalent in the colonies is contrary to the hard conservative rules of the Union. Sooner or later is felt that a fight will come.

Trade Is British.

"Trade in Africa is so far British. Of an African's dollar 55 cents is spent in Britain, 15 cents in the United States, of which 12 cents is for motor cars and accessories, 5 cents in Germany and 3 cents of it is spent in Canada. The peculiar strength of the Canadian trade is that Canada is British and the British traders have won the confidence and respective of the African dealers for their fair and upright business principles. I would hate to think that for any reason we would disinherit ourselves of that British preference in the eyes of the African, and so long as we stand where we are, Canada's future trade with the continent is secure," concluded the speaker.

Enlarging Plant

James Dutton, president of the Chamber of Commerce, was chairman of the evening, and he expressed regret that more members were not present to hear Mr. Stevens, owing to so many other activities on the same evening demanding their attention.

"We came to Peterborough in 1911 to take over a plant that previously never made any money, and to-day we are enlarging the plant to take care of the ever-increasing business." J. M. Mackie, president of the Brinton Sarpet, in speaking of that firm. "Our aim has been to capture some of the British and European trade in our own line in Canada, as there are too many carpets and rugs coming into this country. We claim that we make in Peterborough the best rugs made on the continent, and a great deal better than the foreign rugs bought by Canadian housewives because they are foreign. Our yarns come from India, the same source of supply as that used in Persia, and our rugs are every bit as good. We are now in a state of the youth with growing pains and soon will have past this early stage and have a large plant in this city trading with every part of the Empire, including South Africa."

The following resolution was read by the president, James Dutton, and was adopted by the members:

Whereas it has been noticed that the City Council and many citizens have been especially interested recently in the beautifulication of certain parts of the City of Peterborough, and

Whereas we believe that the unified interests of the public should be paramount when matters which might come under the heading of "Town Planning" are under consideration;

Therefore, be it resolved that the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce recommend that the City Council assume leadership in the appointment of a suitable committee to make a thorough study of matters pertaining to town planning and modern building, with a view to bringing forth a definite and concerete proposal for the approval of the council and the citizens generally.

E. F. Mason, who represented the local Chamber of Commerce at the 17th annual convention of Ontario Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, in North Bay, read a very comprehensive report of the proceedings which has been previously fully reported in the press.

Arthur Reynolds, vice-president of the Chamber and who was a deelgate to the Dominion Convention of Chambers of Commerce held in Quebec, gave a brief survey of a few of the high lights of the conclave.

"God Save the King," sung with unusual feeling by all, ended one of the most successful general meetings in the history of the local chamber.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

The Canadian Juvenile Troubadors, Eight Clever Boys all Under Nineteen Years of Age, and Great Garbo in "The Mysterious Lady" Will Be the Big Attraction that Manager Stewart Will Offer to His Patrons, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, at Regular Prices.

To show his appreciation for the wonderful patronage being accorded the Capitol theatre this season, Manager Stewart has arranged to give his patrons a Christmas treat, in the shape of exceptionally fine stage entertainment, and some of the season's best screen attractions, at the regular Capitol admission prices. This extra special entertainment will take place next week, both the first and last three days. For Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the stage entertainment will be furnished by eight talented young men, all under nineteen years of age, who are known as The Canadian Juvenile Troubadors, versatile artists in rhythm and syncopation. This is an exceptionally clever troupe and they have a barrel of novelties. The stage entertainment for the last half of the week will be the personal appearance of one of the most popular stars of the screen—Baby Eleanor—star of "The Our Gang" comedies. We will have to more say regarding Baby Eleanor later.

The big screen attraction for the first half of the week will be "The Mysterious Lady," starring Greta Garbo.

In her latest film production, Miss Garbo is the heroine of a vivid plot centering about military intrigue that engulfed Europe before the World War, plotting the downfall of a young enemy officer, who she realizes that she loves after he has been disgraced.

Conrad Nagel plays opposite Miss Garbo as the dashing Austrian cavalryman who falls under the charm of the beautiful spy. In the stellar supporting cast are Gustav von Seyffertitz and Edward Connelly.

Fred Niblo, who filmed "The Temptress' in which Miss Garbo scored her first outstanding American film success, directed the new picture. Bess Meredyth prepared the screen play from an original novel by Ludwig Wolff, German author.

The new screen triumph, besides being one of the beautiful star's most enchanting romance, is a fascinating behind-the-scenes revelation of the espionage system that riddles continental Europe. How those network of intrigue operates, the part that women play in it, and the methods used to combat it, furnish the film with a thousand and one new thrills. fillDPvVs,¼p2345 345 456 45 345 34 33

AT THE REGENT.

REASONS ADVANCED FOR RUNAWAY GIRLS FROM MANY SOURCES

The number of missing girls has grown to such an alarming total that the question has become a national problem. Nearly every village and city in the United States has its cases of missing girls, more than 75,000 being reported in 1927.

Many reasons have been advanced for this epidemic, which is sapping the happiness of American homes, and prominent social workers and civic authorities have given the matter much serious thought, but the disappearances continue to be reported in increasing numbers from every walk of life. Exceptional publicity has been recently given to the cases of daughters of wealthy parents, but thousands of girls of less prominence receive but a mere mention in the daily newspapers. The fact that they have been swallowed up in the great unknown has bcome an everyday occurrence.

Many Solutions Offered.

Divers reasons for the strange actions of modern youth have been suggested. Noted novelists have given us stories of Flaming Youth and the Restless Sex. Peculiar conditions arising out of the Word War have been blamed; then the undress of the modern girl's attire, the Volsted law, automobiles and jazz.

Now comes a well known motion picture producer, Walter E. Greene, who has made a study of the situation for several years with a view to dramatizing the possibilities of this theme. He has produced a sensational photoplay, showing the perils and pitfalls of the modern flapper, without preachment, called "The Port of Missing Girls," which is the attraction at the Regent Theatre, for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

FEMALE VOICE CHOIR CONCERT

It was an appropriate ending to a career of usefulness that has extended over the past eight years, when the Female Voice Choir, giving its final concert at the hall of the Canadian Legion last evening, paraphrased the ending of the last song, 'Will Ye No Come Back Again?' to finish with the words: "No, we won't come back again." The singers in their quaint costumes of old-time flavor made a pretty picture on the stage, as they gave what might be termed their swan song. The Choir, which has done so much good in various ways with the funds derived from concerts given during the past eight years, made its adieu to the public in an atmosphere of color and light, for the stage was arranged attractively with lighted lamps and the ladies wore lovely gowns of the fashion of former days. There was a good attendance for the concert and the dance which ended the evening, with music furnished by D. Sproule and his "Lucky Five" orchestra.

The program, for which Mayor Denne acted as chairman, was comprised of a number of the favorite songs with which the Choir has made a name for itself and a variety of solo numbers which included instrumental selections, dances and recitations members of the Juvenile Choir, which Mrs R. Bugg, leader of the Female Voice Choir, formed as an auxiliary to the adult section, also assisted with several snappy renditions which included "Campbell's Dairy" an original composition by Mrs. Bugg, who wrote the music and words of the piece.

The musical numbers sung by the choir last evening were in especially good voice, the ladies singing softly and sweetly and receiving well-marited applause for their attractive coruses.

During the intermission in the program, Mayor Denne spoke in terms of warm appreciation of the work of Mrs. R. Bugg as leader of the Choir and the manner in which the organization had assisted in so many good works.

"Mrs. Bugg is certainly an asset to the organizations at the Veterans' Hall," said His Worship, "and is always ready to assist in every good work."

Program of Music

The program opened with the singing of "O Canada" and closed with the National Anthem. Applause was vouchsafed for each number and encores were generously given. Choral selections included "Believe Me, if All Those Endearing Young Charms," and "Annie Laurie" and the Choir also joined in the choruses of several of the numbers, in "Cockles and Mussels," with solo by Miss Lillian Groombridge and in "White Wings" with solo by Miss A. Barton. Both soloists responded with encores, the latter singing "Smilin' Thru."

The choir of children, fourteen in number, and dressed in appropriate costumes for each selection, sang "Nellie's Blue Eyes" with solo by Doris Sharman, and "Campbell's Dairy" with solo by Annie Fletcher.

In duett, Mesdames McKinley and Cairns sang "Clementine" and Mesdames Cairns, F. McKinley and A. McKinley, as a trio, sang "Will Ye No Come Back Again" with chorus by the Choir.

A piano solo by Miss G. Dafoe, "The Robin's Rturn" was a bright number, as were the Hawaiin guitar and banjo ukulele numbers by a quartette composed of the Misses Hamilton, Marvin Hamilton and Jack Clayton.

Little Annie Fletcher made a hit with her recitations, "Just a Boy" and "Baby Brother."

Miss E. Harrison gave a vocal solo, "Jeanine, I Dream of Lilac Time" with encore. Mrs. Cairns sang "Dream of Paradise" and Miss Minnie Allen sang, by request, "The Bluebird" with encore, "When Irish Eyes are Smiling."

Miss Jean Thorne played a Hawaiin guitar number, "Girl of My Dreams" and a fetching little Dutch courtship dance, in costume, was done by Edith Abraham and little Phyllis Pink.

Mrs. R. Bugg acted as director of the entire program and also played most of the accompaniments. Miss Margaret Flowers acted as accompanist for several solo numbers.

Members of the Female Voice Choir are as follows:—Mesdames F. McKinley, A. McKinley, A. Murray, J. Scott, C. Jay, Cairns, the Misses M. Berwick, M. Allen, E. Harrison, A. Barton, L. Groombridge, M. Wilson, M. Heard, J. Murray, D. Berwick, A. Simmons, R. Murray, J. Thorne, M. Burnham, B. Gray, J. Gray, D. Marshall, P. Irwin, M. Irwin, F. Smith and D. Gice.

The costumes used in the concert last evening were loaned by Mrs. J. Bacon of Edinburgh street.

More Blessed To Give

(By Adastia.)

Away off in the distance the lights of the town twinkled like falling stars 'twixt heaven and earth. But it was dark and quiet here on the farm, not the stillness of peace but rather of a sullen monster gathering strength for a leap. A dreary murmur stole through the pine boughs on high, looming against the dark, lowering sky. There would be a storm before morning.

It was Christmas Eve and as yet no snow had fallen to clothe the bare, frozen earth.

Ruth leaned, with folded arms, on the gate in front of the old farm house, a heavy old black shawl thrown over her head and shoulders. Her lips were set in a thin, hard line that spoke of the bitter determination which filled her soul this night.

Life was hard and tasteless; always the same. A monotonous round of menial talks on this poverty-stricken backwoods farm. The only life she had known for thirty years.

Now youth was gone, had been culled out long before its time for departure. She wondered if Rob would run over to see her to-night. The thought did not cause any uplift of spirit. She had waited too long for him—ten years during which her heart had slowly sickened with hope deferred.

There was no sparkle in her said brown eyes. No glint to the soft brown hair so carelessly brushed back from her forehead. There had been both when she had promised to 'wait' for Rob Bowen.

There was always something to wait for. New machines for farm work, new barn to replace the old one after a disastrous fire, and the mortgage was not paid off yet. Was there ever a farm without a mortgage? she wondered.

Rob had said when the place was clear then they would marry. This night she was recalling all the long, slow years of heartache and disappointments, all the full happy years of wifehood she had missed. The farm ten miles yonder had taken heavy toll of her young life.

Besides there was her father to be cared for, more exacting and as helpless as a child. It had been almost unbearably hard at first and she had not borne things well. She was not of a patient disposition but time had taken the edge off her resentment and now she no longer cared so intensely. All her young enthusiasm and eager anticipation of what life held in store, had been dulled by the long grinding march of years.

She saw Rob, not as the upright, honest well-meaning young fellow she had fallen in love with years ago, but as hard, mercenary, a dull plodder with his nose to the grindstone, intent only upon one thing. Then, too, he was mean. Perhaps after all she was no more unhappy now than had she married him ten years ago. "Mated to a clown," Christmas! Not even that day had power to stir him to a generous mood. "Too much fuss made over just one day" had been his brief comment on Christmas. Rob would never give until it hurt. "Old Scrooge" had never—out the narrow mess of his soul in any plainer terms than had Rob Bowen. Money was all he seemed to care for, his farm was a tyrant that drove him toiling through life with no respite.

Year after year at Christmas-time she had hoped in vain that he might present her with some little gift to show his thought of her. Somehow she had set her heart on receiving something from him, she hadly knew why. Not for the value of itself, certainly.

Her poor, little home-made gifts of mufflers, gloves, tobacco pouches had been accepted with indifferent thanks and always he had said, "You shouldn't bother, I don't believe in this Christmas present business."

Well, to-night her mind was made up. She was tired of her thankless task. She would go away, leave the old life, barren of joy, behind her. Already her ancient suitcase was packed with her humble belongings. She would leave word at the neighboring farm that she was going on an errand. Someone would stay with her old father until her return—and she would never come back. A note left for Rob would explain it to him.

Ruth Emmons had stood there in the cold of the starless night for almost an hour, thinking, her thoughts far away within herself, unheeding of her surroundings.

Now she came to herself with a start, realizing that her feet were numb. With a long drawn, weary sigh she retraced her steps up the stone walk to the old house, still and dark save for one feeble gleam in the kitchen. Her father had been in bed for hours. There remained nothing but to don her hat and coat, new five years ago, and make her way to the little station house across the frozen fields. Soon she was on her way. She felt no regret at leaving, no emotion of any kind save a fixed determination to go.

It could not have been more than half an hour after the shrill whistle had sounded lonesomely across the country, than Rob Bowen opened the same gate on which a woman had been leaning so short a time before. He was whistling, something new for Rob. But, to-night, he was feeling young again. He was not empty handed this Christmas Eve. He had a present for Ruth—the first in all the years he had known her. It was a title clear to his farm and because something heavy and binding had gone from his spirit he had bought another present, a little ring set with a single pearl. How a woman's heart would have rejoiced in it once!

Rob was thinking tenderly of his sweetheart to-night. His faithful quiet Ruth, whom he had watched grow from happy girlhood into a quiet, reserved woman. It had been hard for her. Women were always putting love before gain. That was not sense. But the way was clear now.

He wondered if she expected him. Surely. Christmas time she generally—no, always—had some little gift for him. Strange that she was not in the kitchen where she always sat in the evenings, her smooth brown head bent over some piece of sewing or some homely mending for the hired man who had gone home for Christmas the day before.

Wondering, he opened it, and read and read again. Minutes passed. He kept looking helplessly from the letter to what he held in his other hand, the little box containing the ring. An awful sense of loss possessed him. Then he thought of the old man. Noiselessly, lamp in hand, he mounted the stairs and when he stood over the old-fashioned wooden bed with its gay red and white log cabin counterpane, and looked down at the quiet, peaceful old face, with its fretfulness all smoothed out by a magic Hand, he knew Ruth had no need to have gone to the city for her freedom. It had come to her here—unknowingly. Ponderously still, he went down the stairs and stood at the open door looking toward the distant lights. A few flakes of snow came down from the darkness. Faintly, he could hear the Christmas bells, too far off to distinguish what they played. It would be a white Christmas after all. The thought wandered aimlessly through his bewildered mind.

Slowly he made his way toward the neighboring farm with his news of old John Emmons' death. He had reached the gate before he realized that he still held the lighted lamp in his hand. Ruth was gone! He must find her. He felt no anger, no resentment against her. He was beginning to understand what his selfishness had meant to her. Poor girl, she had a lot of happiness coming to her. Yet she should not have left like that.

Next morning the sun shone bright on a glittering world. But the blinds were drawn at the old Emmons' farm house and kindly folks had gathered to "do what they could" on this Christmas Day.

They were not sorrowing, the poor old man had been full of years, and moreover he had been too reclusive to make many intimate friends. A dim silent man was all they remembered.

Rob sat with his face white and stern, his mind full of his own loss. After this was all over he would commence his search.

Once more the door opened. No palling caller to pay his last respects, but a startled, tired-looking woman—Ruth! She looked around her in quick concern at the staring faces. Her words were addressed to Rob. "Oh! what is it? What has happened?" She was shaking, startled.

"Ruth," Rob was at her side, "don't you fret too much; it's your father. He died in his sleep last night." The suitcase dropped unheeded from her grasp. "I didn't know, I had to come back; I thought of him alone here, perhaps calling for me." Her lips were stiff, her face working. "I'm glad he never knew I went," she added faintly.

Rob's arm strong encircled the slim, bowed shoulders. What he said matters not to us.

A sleighload of happy carollers went by, and through the clear air of the day they could hear what the bells of the church were playing, "Joy to the World."

The sum of money given to Columbus by Queen Isabella is estimated in our money to be about $7500, the cost of the discovery of America.

Values Again Decline On New York Exchange

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 (Canadian Press).—A violent re-action in Radio Corporation Common and a few other high-priced specialties brought about another general liquidation movement in to-day's stock market. Prices opened irregular, with pools bidding up a few specialties, but the withdrawal of buying support for several of the so-called "blue chip" issues sent the market into another nose dive.

Radio Corporation Common, which established a new high record at 420, only last week, plunged downward forty-three points to 325. Dupont, which opened twenty-five points higher, quickly lost twenty points of the gain. A. M. Byrs moved up six points to 184, and then tumbled to 158. Case Threshing broke twenty-three points. Kolster Radio, Sears-Roebuck, Rossia Insurance and Texas and Pacific Railroad sold down five to eight points. Wright Aero broke twenty-five points to 216.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

WRIGHT-HARGREAVES

Despite reassuring news from the north that good ore continues to be put in sight by Wright-Hargreaves at a greater rate than mill requirements, the shares continue to show uneasiness on the exchange. A well-known consulting engineer is reported to be making an examination of the property at this time, and his findings and recommendations are being looked forward to with much interest.

COAST COPPER

Present indications point to more rapid development at this Smelters subsidiary on Vancouver Island. Preparatory to stepping up operations an order has been placed for additional generating equipment. The current belief in western mining circles is that already 3,000,000 tons of ore have been indicated, with indications of an average recovery of 5 per cent copper. As the operation is a hillside one, the expense of shafting will not be necessary.

GOODFISH

The secretary of Goodfish is reported to have said that mine conditions were never better. The latest advice from the mine is that the 300-foot level is looking well. The 450-foot level is high grade and the 600-foot level is showing faces in ore.

WEST DOME

According to recent reports, the mill of West Dome has been completely overhauled and stands ready to start at a moment's notice. Improvements have been effected which will increase the tonnage by 25 per cent. Recently an offer was made to West Dome shareholders to take up treasury stock at 10 cents a share, these finances for the purpose of aiding a further development campaign.

GILBEC

Following the advice of Schlumberger, Gilbec did some trenching northeast of their original find and now have a very interesting showing. Where trenched it shows two 4-foot widths of commercial grade chalcopyrite. These are divided by an 8-foot section of altered rhyolite. A mining plant is being sent to the property and a shaft will be put down on this new showing.

AMULET

We are informed that Amulet's new hoist has now been installed. Drifting on the 250 foot level is proceeding at the rate of about ten feet per day. The southeast drift to the C body and the northeast to E are each in about 200 feet. As the C body is some 400 feet from the shaft, it is not expected they will reach this zone much before the beginning of the new year.

MINING CORPORATION

We are informed from Rouyn that the Murray shaft has now reached a depth of 300 feet and there has been no change in mineralization.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

Death is spoken of in the Scriptures as a sleep. All the dead, figuratively, may be said to sleep in Jesus, for all the human race rightfully belong to him, He having provided the purchase price for all mankind. The clergy give us poor consolation when they tell us our loved ones who have passed away, are not dead, for such comfort is false. True comfort must be based on truth and must and does come from God Himself, and not from Satan. The word of God brings real comfort, for while it speaks in plain language that man (all that goes to make up man) dies, it also tells of the consoling truth of the day of resurrection, when all, who have died, shall come forth from the grave, and all shall have a full, fair opportunity of being obedient and live and not die the second time.

Why do not the clergy tell the people the heart-comforting truth of the resurrection? Is it not because they cannot preach Satan's lie: "Thou shalt not surely die," and preach the doctrine of the resurrection, also, on account of the two being diametrically opposed one to the other. Possibly some are so filled with their own self-conceit that they are practically blind to the real truth.—M. T. Butcher. 1d-35-4547

OLD RESIDENT PASSES AWAY

Mrs. William Bacon Lived Here Over Thirty Years Ago.

DIES AT LOS ANGELES.

Percy Blade of this city has received word from E. J. Bacon, now of Los Angeles, California, of the death of his mother, Mrs. William Bacon, which occurred there on Thursday, December 6. Mr. Bacon intimated that his father was also in a serious condition.

Older residents will recall that William Bacon lived in Peterborough and conducted a successful bakery business at the corner of Park and Bonacord streets, moving with his family to California about thirty years ago.

CALEDONIAN CLUB HOLDS NOMINATION

Business was the order at the Caledonian Club meeting held in the W.O.W. Hall last night. Robert Veitch occupied the chair, and a large number of members were present.

The present year is drawing to a close, and shows the Club in good standing as to members and finances.

Nominations were made for officers for the coming year, and elections will be held at the annual business meeting the first Friday of the New Year.

This social organization extends a hearty welcome to the Scotch people of this city to come and join its ranks.

After the business was over a social half-hour was spent, when refreshments were served, and Robert Gilmour, who so efficiently fills the post of musician for the dancing, was presented with a new melodeon.

A whist party will provide the entertainment next Friday night, when all the members ought to be on hand.

Noted Salvationist Will Give Lecture, "Two Armies On Two Continents."

LEGION INVITED.

The local soldiery and friends of the Salvation Army are looking forward with much expectancy to the visit, this week end, of Colonel and Mrs. R. Henry, of Toronto. The Colonel occupies the important position of Chief Secretary for the Canada East territory. Colonel and Mrs. Henry are Australians by birth.

Prior to his present appointment the Colonel was Field Secretary of Army operations in New Zealand. He served in various capacities of importance for many years in Austrlia. During the war he was commissioned a chaplain to the gallant men from the Antipodes, and was highly respected and much esteemed for his unstinting self sacrifice among them.

On Sunday afternoon he will be giving his lecture, entitled with "Two Armies On Two Continents." Those who have heard the Colonel in other cities concede the lecture to be brimful of interest and very informative. The members of the Canadian Legion have been invited to attend this service.

Why Do Chiropractors Claim Spinal Nerve Pressure to be a Cause of Disease?

Because we know that the spine is the keyboard of vitality to all organs and parts of the body.

Because it is a scientifically proven fact that nerve force or vital energy passing over the nerves to the organs regulates their function—and when the nerves are severed all function in the organs they supply ceases. Also when nerves are pinched function of the organs is diminished in degree to the constriction of the nerves.

Because by examination of the spine the Chiropractor can detect nerve interference and he knows that disordered function in any organ is the first symptom of disease and that organic disease sets in after functional disorder has been established.

The Chiropractor knows that spinal manipulative treatments remove nerve pressure and restore normal energy to weakened tissues.

HAMMER FIEND SLAYS WOMAN

BEATEN BODY FOUND BESIDE AUTO IN LANE

California Police Seek Foster Brother Who is Former Convict

HUSBAND TELLS OF RIDE

Mate of Victim Bares Secret Correspondence; Charges Wife Left In Car

SAN FRANCISCO, December 10.—Discovery of the mutilated body of Mrs. Lucille Howsman, 35 years old, of 687 Ninth Street, Richmond, with her throat cut and head crushed by hammer blows, beneath a man's overcoat beside an abandoned automobile in a lonely ravine near Richmond, led police the other night to launch a search for Robert Jackson, 31 years old, former convict and foster brother of the woman.

The abandoned auto, police ascertained, was Jackson's. Harry E. Howsman, the husband, identified the overcoat thrown over the body and a man's raincoat, trousers, shirt, shoes, watch chain and ring, found in the car as Jackson's.

Releases Husband.

Evidence on the shirt indicating that the sleeves had been rolled up after they had become blood soaked, led to police theory that Mrs. Howsman did not meet death where her body was found.

Howsman, after being questioned, was released. Police said they were satisfied with the story of his movements since his wife and Jackson went for an automobile ride two days before and failed to return.

While the husband first told police he had no reason to suspect his wife's relations with Jackson, a possible love triangle was injected in the case when it was ascertained Howsman twice recently had made ineffectual attempts to obtain a warrant for her arrest on a charge of abandonment.

Howsman finally admitted this. He said his new-found suspicions had been strengthened when he discovered that his wife secretly had rented a private post office box, where, under the name of Gussie Jackson, she had received mail since April 22, 1925, one month before her foster brother was paroled from San Quentin where he was serving a term for manslaughter.

Experts Called In

In this postoffice box was a note signed by his wife, giving instructions that under no circumstances should mail be delivered to any person except the renter.

While a description of Jackson was being wired to other cities and while Richmond police possescoured the hills in the belief that he might have wandered off, after killing Mrs. Howsman, to end his own life, a carpenter's hammer and a razor case found near the body were turned over to finger-print experts.

At the same time announcement was made that these experts will examine the grewsome interior of the automobile, showing evidence that the woman might have been killed in the machine or her body transported in it while she was dying.

Early in the afternoon Howsman walked into the Richmond police station saying he had been looking for his wife in Oakland when he read that her body had been found.

"We always considered him one of the family," he said. "He had been adopted by Mrs. Howsman's parents in Chico when a boy. He and my wife grew up together as brother and sister. For the last two years, ever since being paroled from San Quentin, he has visited us frequently and always stopped at our home when he was in Richmond. The idea of suspecting there was anything wrong in their relations never occurred to me until she disappeared."

Mr. Akhurst has never ridden in a motor car and says he never will.

HOW BRITISH FREEDOM GREW

Joseph Wearing Traces Development of Liberty Within the Empire

ADDRESSES ROTARY

"We should know more about the five great charters of British freedom, talk about them more in our homes and pass them on to our children," declared Kiwanian Joseph Wearing in the course of an eloquent address upon "The Growth of Freedom Within the British Empire," before the Peterborough Rotary Club to-day.

Introduced by Rotarian V. J. McElderry, the speaker said, in beginning, that the most wonderful feature of the evolution of British freedom was that it had been brought about with a minimum of internal disturbances and with but little shedding of blood in fratricidal warfare.

In order that his hearers might draw for themselves the parallel, Mr. Wearing sketched briefly the history of the Roman Empire to show that its decline and fall had been the result of the passing of authority from the people into the hands of one man. The weight of this imperial throne alone had been sufficient to crash down through the structure that had originally been built upon the sound foundation of democracy.

The development of the British Empire, the speaker said, began with the conquest of England by the Normans and what followed was the constant struggle of the tillers of the soil, the yeomen of England, to free themselves from the bond of autocracy. Mr. Wearing traced the progress of that struggle, naming some of the most important milestones along the way,—the Magna Charta, the Petition of Rights, Habeas Corpus, the Bill of Rights, and Act of Settlement; the trial of the seven Bishops, which refuted once for all the theory of the divine right of Kings; and other great forward steps in determining the liberty of the British people. The five great charters, he declared, should be better known, talked over in the home, and passed on to our children.

The speaker next dwelt with the development of the principle of self-government within the British Commonwealth, stressing the prominent part taken by Canada in this evolution, and showing that this country was leading the way, with her pronouncements followed by the other Dominions.

In conclusion, Mr. Wearing referred to the manner in which the British Royal family had adapted itself to the status of a limited monarchy, pointing out that what had been lost in constitutional authority had been much more than made up for by the affectionate regard of the people of the British Commonwealth of Nations towards their sovereign. No throne since Alfred the Great had been surer than that of King George, the speaker declared, amid applause.

Rotarian Dr. M. A. Morrison expressed the thanks of the Rotary club to the speaker.

President W. R. Morris, referring to the election of ex-Mayor John J. Turner, as president of the Kiwanis club, congratulated that body upon their service and declared that he was looking forward to a year of great service by Kiwanis under the leadership of Mr. Turner.

Referring to the gas plant purchase, President Morris remarked that it had been endorsed by the city council and the Chamber of Commerce. The Rotary club both as individuals and as a club wished to stand behind the Chamber of Commerce and city council in anything they undertook for the city's betterment, and he asked the public relations committee, headed by Rotarian Robert Abbott, to investigate the question and bring in a report.

Rotarian Fred L. Roy, chairman of the Christmas relief committee, submitted a report recommending that the club's Christmas work this year should be done through the agency of the Salvation Army, and the suggestion was unanimously adopted.

Past President Killaly was thanked for his services in acting as speaker at Friday's meeting of the Campbellford club.

COLONEL HENRY PAYS VISIT TO SALVATIONISTS

Addresses Large Audience At Local Army Citadel Sunday Afternoon

MAYOR DENNE PRESENT

"With Two Armies On Two Continents" is Subject Of Fine Discourse

With Colonel and Mrs. Henry of Toronto, chief secretaries for Canada East, present, assisted by Major and Mrs. H. Ritchie, also of Toronto, the Peterborough Salvation Army has, over the week-end, enjoyed services of special blessing.

But of them all, the lecture, "With Two Armies on Two Continents," delivered by Colonel Henry on Sunday afternoon, was perhaps the most interesting. Colonel Henry was an esteemed Chaplain with the Australian forces on active service in the Great War, while his association with the Salvation Army dates from 1893, so that the large gathering which greeted him, including His Worship Mayor Denne, Alderman Lowe and representative business men of the city, enjoyed a most authoritative discourse.

Major Ritchie presided during the afternoon meeting, which opened at three o'clock, and in his opening remarks, extended a welcome to the city officials and all present.

Colonel Henry.

Drawing from a boyhood experience the axiom that an explanation aids to the understanding of what is seen or heard, the speaker began his lecture, "With Two Armies on Two Continents," by explaining that the two armies were the Australian Imperial forces on active service and the Army of Blood and Fire, while the two continents were Australia and Europe. Then, going back into early history of Australia, Colonel Henry related of its discovery, its abandonment by Dutch and Spanish explorers and its final discovery by Captain James Cook, who called that portion of the east coast, New South Wales.

Colonel Henry declared that Australia had gone through her Cinderella experiences, and had passed through gold-mad days. He believed that Canada and Australia, as sister Dominions, have something in common, though they are opposite so far as geographic and therefore seasonal features are concerned.

96 Per Cent. British.

"It is thirty years ago now since Australia declared for a white policy, and to-day," proudly declared the Colonel, "we are a nation 96 per cent. British, developing a wonderful continent under congenial conditions of life." He went on to tell of first seeing the Salvation Army as a very young boy, near the home where he was born in Scotland. His teacher had, about that time, told him that if he dug a hole sufficiently deep, he would reach Australia—he had proceeded to do so, and when twelve years of age, landed in Australia, though, needless to say, not by the hole-in-the-ground route.

There, too, he had found the Salvation Army doing its work. Though it was a small institution at that time, to-day, after sixty years, its flag floats in 82 countries while its members and magazines speak in between thirty and forty languages.

The Australian Forces.

Defending the Australian soldiers against the common belief that they were an undisciplined lot, Colonel Henry went on to tell of that day in August, 1914, when word reached the city of Melbourne that Britain would enter the war; and Australia, within whose borders no shot had ever been fired in warfare, swung to the support of the Motherland. With her army, the Salvation Army had asked permission to ally itself and had begun forthwith to bless the soldiers with food for their bodies, social recreation for their minds and spiritual blessings for their souls, and with a sympathy and understanding of their needs.

To the landing, under most perilous conditions, at Gallipoli, and to its evacuation without the loss of a single man; to the destruction of the German raider Emden, and to their part on the Western front, the Colonel pointed as indications of the splendid type of men that composed the Anzac army and navy. Then he went on to relate instances of glorious sacrifice on the part of women and men of the Salvation Army, in France and elsewhere, always ready to respond to a call for any form of assistance, and carrying on during and after the war to save and bless the suffering.

Mayor Roland Denne.

Called upon, following the lecture, the Chief Magistrate received a most hearty welcome, the Salvation Army custom of hand clapping being pleasingly prominent. His Worship expressed his pleasure at being present, and recalled the last happy occasion

FIFTY-THIRD SESSION OPENS

"Big Three" Statesmen Meet In Conference at Council of League of Nations

WANT ARMY REMOVED

LUGANO, Switzerland, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—The fifty-third session of the council of the League of Nations opened to-day with a private session presided over by Aristide Briand, foreign minister of France.

A persistent rain which continued to the despair of Gustave Stresemann, German foreign minister, who has been ill and all the delegates, did not prevent a big crowd from assembling in the streets surrounding the Kursaal.

The council met in the Kursaal in a room decorated with exquisite mural paintings. It was decided to waive scruples that gambling had occurred in the building and might occur there again now that the people of Switzerland had voted to restore the gambling tables.

"Big Three" Meet

The meetings of the "Big Three" statesmen, who formulated Locarno Peace Pact wre to-day expected to do much to lessen tension in Europe. Dr. Gustav Stresemann, German foreign minister; Aristide Briand, French foreign minister and Sir Austen Chamhberlain, British foreign secretary are holding conferences in connection with the session of the League of Nations council.

Question of removing the allied army of occupation from German soil has been causing some friction. Statesmen attending the council hope that the conference of British, German and French Ministers will disperse the feeling of distrust which has arisen between the three powers.

WHITE STAR LINER CELTIC RUNS AGROUND IN HARBOR

253 Passengers Are Said To Have Been Removed From Steamer

MAY BREAK UP

Attempts To Tow Vessel Off Rocks Have Proved Unsuccessful

COBH, Ireland, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—White Star liner Celtic which left New York, December 1 with 253 passengers, ran on the rocks at the entrance to the harbor early to-day and at low tide was held fast in fifteen feet of water, with the possibility that she might break up if she did not get off at next tide.

All of passengers were stated to have been debarked safely in tenders and started for Cobh, the liner which stove a hole under engine room was lying with a severe list.

Three tugs were removing some five hundred passengers from the liner Celtic which ran aground on rock off Roche's Point at the eastern entrance to the harbor early to-day. She was entering the harbor to disembark about sixty passengers when the accident occurred.

The tide was high when the liner hit and she remained upright and steady. It was stated that if weather became bad the vessel would be a total wreck. Attempts to tow the ship off proved unsuccessful.

LONDON, Dec. 10. —(Canadian Press).—Press Association despatch says that twenty-seven survivors of Vestris disaster were on board the liner Celtic when it ran ashore at Queenstown to-day.

The Celtics passengers are expected to arrive here to-night by train and will cross the Irish Channel by special steamer to Liverpool, reaching there to-morrow morning.

MANY THEFTS ARE REPORTED NEAR LINDSAY

Local and Provincial Police Of Victoria County Are On Lookout

SEVERAL STORES ENTERED

Thieves Take $500 Worth Of Dry Goods From Cannington Merchant

LINDSAY, Dec. 10.—Local police as well as the Provincial police of the county have been notified to keep a sharp look out for a gang of burglars who have been quite active for the past few days in this district. Word was received from Cannington that Sam. Sturman's general store was entered on Friday night and about $500.00 worth of drygoods carried away. The burglars beat a hasty retreat after Mrs. Charles Whiting fired off a gun in order to arouse the villagers.

A report was also received from Fenelon Falls that the home of Andrew McFarland was entered a few evenings ago and the sum of $57.00 stolen. Chief of Police Lawlor was notified Saturday afternoon to keep a sharp lookout for robbers who entered a dry goods store in that town and carried off goods to the value of $500.

PORT PERRY, Dec. 10.—Thieves broke into Brock Brothers' store, Queen Street, early Saturday morning and stole $200 worth of merchandise, consisting chiefly of men's sweaters, socks, neckwear and ladies' scarfs. This is the second store robbery to occur here during the past four days, the shop of Alex. Tilboard having been entered early last Tuesday morning, the thieves escaping with a haul valued at $400.

Although Brock Brothers' store is protected with a double-bar lock, the thieves were able to remove it and secure entrance through the front door. They confined their operations to the ground floor, and did not ascend the stairs to the second floor, where a stock of clothing is kept. They made their escape by the front entrance, as the back door had not been touched. Brock Brothers, dealing in clothing, dry goods and groceries, is one of Port Perry's largest stores, and ranks among the oldest-established retail firms in the county.

United States Uses 10 Million Yule Trees

OTTAWA, Dec. 10.—The demand for Christmas trees in New York City amounts to about 2,000 carloads a year, writes Frederick Hudd, Canadian Trade Commissioner in New York City, in The Commercial Intelligence Journal. It is estimated that 10,000,000 trees are used every Christmas in the United States, and Canada is called upon to furnish about 4,000,000 of these, of which New Brunswick alone supplies about 500 carloads, or 1,000,000 trees.

CROWN WOULD ELECT LORDS

New Scheme Would Abolish Hereditary Membership To Upper House

LABOR WILL OPPOSE PLAN

(Special Cable by Henry Somerville, Copyright.)

LONDON, December 10. — The Conservative party is flying another kite to test the wind of opinion on the reform of the House of Lords.

Lord Clarendon will expound a new scheme to-morrow when he suggests that the peerage should elect one hundred and fifty members of its own order to sit in the House of Lords, and that the Crown should nominate one hundred and fifty other members belonging to the different political parties in proportion to the strength of each party in the House of Commons. These nominated members would sit only for the term of Parliament. The Crown would also nominate a limited number of life peers, members of the second chamber, who would be called Lords of Parliament, and have the letters L. P. after their names.

Abolishes Hereditary Membership.

Clerendon's scheme abolishes hereditary membership of the House of Lords, but it allows hereditary peers to elect at least one-third of the House of Lords from their own ranks. This would give the second chamber an overwhelmingly Conservative bias.

The scheme will be stoutly resisted by the Labor party, while the government is anxious to learn how the proposals will be viewed by its own supporters. The last attempt of the government to fly a similar kite was smothered by the Conservative members of the House of Comomns. The Government on that occasion put forward proposals regarding the powers as well as the composition of the second chamber and proposals were such as to make the Lords stronger than they had been before. Conservative M.P.'s insist that no reform on the House of Lords can be accepted in these days that does not ensure the supremacy of the House of Commons.

The test of the Conservative party feeling at this juncture will guide Premier Baldwin in framing a policy to be put before the country at the general election.

Three Weeks' Illness Has Severely Taxed His Majesty's Heart

PERSISTENCE OF FEVER HAS PRODUCED WEAKNESS WHOLE EMPIRE WAITS ANXIOUSLY TO-NIGHT

Whether Physicians Have Real Hopes Of Recovery Is Not Known—Queen Mary Did Not Leave Palace For Afternoon's Drive

LONDON, December 10 (Canadian Press). — England this evening was waiting with tense anxiety for further official bulletins on the progress of King George. Fleet Street, a great metropolitan newspaper centre, and the whole public have been reluctantly forced to the conclusion that the next two or three days will be critical ones for His Majesty.

The three weeks of grievous illness have so undermined the King's recuperative powers, and so severely taxed his heart that his life undoubtedly is in danger. Not that it eventually must be expected, but that it is distinctly possible.

Official bulletins have not given the public much upon which to base an accurate opinion regarding the King's condition, but use of the word "anxiety" was interpreted as a distinct warning that a grave condition existed.

Whether the King's physicians have real hopes of His Majesty's recovery is not known. As usual they are keeping views to themselves, those immediately connected with the Royal Family, and the Government.

Did Not Leave Palace.

Queen Mary did not leave the palace this afternoon, much to the disappointment of a crowd which was eager to show its sympathy. The palace officials watched closely the progress of the Prince of Wales as he neared home. Preparations were made to expedite his journey, and it was learned that the destroyer Perth had been placed at his disposal for the voyage from Boulogne, France, to the English Coast.

CAUSES ANXIETY

King George's condition is still causing anxiety the King's physicians made this clear in their bulletin this morning which otherwise was somewhat more encouraging than those of last day or two. They reported that his temperature was lower despite a restless night and that general condition was somewhat improved.

Admonition at close, however, that anxiety must continue held warning that royal patient was still very seriously ill and that the outcome was in doubt.

There was reluctance in the palace circles to comment on to-day's bulletin. It was understood, however, that this and succeeding days would likely be anxious. Doctor's consultation this morning lasted more than two hours, much longer than usual.

Anxiety Continues.

LONDON, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press). — Information that King George was somewhat exhausted by the strain of his long illness produced a feeling of uneasiness to-day. His physicians, however, referred to the exhaustion as inevitable and stated that his pulse was steady.

It was recognized that the King's constitution had undergone a severe strain. The hope was expressed that he had sufficient vitality left to enable him to overcome the results of this strain.

Those who had been near the King said that he was showing much courage and the will to get well.

LONDON, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press).—An Exchange Telegraph despatch from Brindisi said the Prince of Wales left for London at 12.30 p.m.

No Change in Condition.

LONDON, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press).—Lord Dawson of Penn and Sir Stanley Hewett spent forty-five minutes at Buckingham Palace this afternoon. Despite the special visit, it was authoritatively stated there was no change in the King's condition since morning.

Lands at Noon.

BRINDISI, Italy, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press).—The Prince of Wales, speeding homeward to the bedside of King George, landed from the cruiser Enterprise at 12.23 p.m., and seven minutes later left for London by a special train. He appeared healthy and well tanned by exposure to the African sun.

A force of 100 Italian sailors lined the short route from the ship to the train. In according with the Prince's request, no military honors were rendered.

LONDON, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press).—The progress of the King yesterday as shown by medical bulletins issued yesterday was less favorable than might have been hoped for, but was not altogether discouraging. The Royal patient has still been able to sleep and again had an undisturbed day, but the persistence of fever conditions noticed in both bulletins is producing the inevitable exhaustion.

This persistence of the fever shows that the local affection in the lung is still giving trouble. In the favor of His Majesty is the fact, twice announced yesterday, that the pulse remains steady, which would seem to indicate his exhaustion has not yet reached a stage reacting adversely on the action of his heart.

Another favorable point, in the view of the general public, was that only the two regular physicians were in attendance at Buckingham Palace. So far as is known neither Sir Farquhar Buzzard, Sir Humphrey Rolleston, nor Dr. H. Graham Hodgson was at the Palace yesterday. All of these had joined Saturday in signing a bulletin, and their non-appearance yesterday showed that further consultations are considered unnecessary at the present stage of the illness.

Sir Stanley and Lord Dawson, however, are still constantly in attendance, for, in addition to the morning and evening visits, they both paid a visit in the afternoon.

Pulse Remains Steady.

Their morning report was: "The King had several hours' sleep. The prolongation of the fever is having the inevitable effect of producing a certain measure of exhaustion. The pulse, however, remains steady."

Their bulletin issued at 8.30 o'clock last night was even more terse. It read: "The King has passed a quiet day, but there is no diminution in the exhaustion referred to in the morning's bulletin. The pulse remains steady."

For the first time yesterday in the whole course of his illness the pulse of the King was specifically mentioned in an official bulletin. This was done, apparently, not because of any special anxiety about the condition of the heart of His Majesty, but rather as a reassurance that the

COUNTY CLERK DIES IN OFFICE

United Counties of Northumberland and Durham Lose Clerk And Treasurer

SESSION WAS TO OPEN

(Examiner Staff Reporter)

COBOURG, Dec. 10—Overtaken by heart trouble while in his office in the County buildings here, Colonel Neil S. MacNachtan, County Clerk and Treasurer of the combined Counties of Durham and Northumberland, passed away in his son's arms at 2 p.m. to-day. His death terminated a municipal service that had made him known throughout the entire district, and a military career that had brought him recognition all over the Dominion and even overseas. Colonel MacNachtan was in his 80th year, having been born in Newcastle. The Counties' Council, for which he had prepared his work, had been scheduled to open its final session of the year to-day, but has adjourned for one week.

The late Colonel MacNachtan, whose father, E. A. MacNachtan, was appointed counties' clerk in the year 1863, assumed his father's duties being appointed to that office in 1894, and his son, E. L. MacNachtan, in turn, has been deputy clerk. However, wide as was his experience in municipal work, he became more prominent as a military figure, having joined the Cobourg Heavy Battery in the year 1868. His first commission came in 1891, and three years later, he became officer commanding of the battery. When the force of that unit was increased, he became a Major, and three years later in 1901, was appointed Brevet-Colonel and was transferred to command of the 14th C.F.A. Brigade. The year 1906 brought further promotion, for he

Each Country Blames Other For Trouble on Boundary Last Friday

NOTE DECLARED FALSE

Washington is Told Paraguay Finds Itself Forced to Break of Relations

LA PAZ, Bolivia, December 10.—This mountain city witnessed most stirring scenes on Thursday night, when 6,000 youths bearing lanterns and torches paraded through the streets calling upon the General Staff to enlist them immediately, shouting, "Viva Bolivia; meura Paraguay!"

The tempestuous youths were told they would be called only if necessary.

Meanwhile it was announced that Elias Ayala, Paraguayan Charge d'Affaires, upon arrival on Friday night at Viacha Station, instead of going to Peru, decided to go to Aregntina.

"Paraguay is provoking war; Bolivians, rally to the defence of your country to the last."

The newspapers published extra editions, and La Razon declared:

President's Reply.

The country is in a state of great excitement over the breaking of diplomatic relations with Paraguay, which followed a border clash between troops of the two countries las, Thursday. Demonstrators in the streets here on Saturday night shouted before the Presidential Palace:

"We want war, Mr. President!"

President Hernando Siles appeared on a balcony and replied:

"If war is necessary, we will all go."

Congress is in secret session, but it is learned that it has voted endorsement of the foreign policy of the Government, and applauded its stand. Two commissions of leading statesmen have been named to advise the Government. They will remain in continuous session to draw up emergency measures.

President Siles in his impromptu speech to the people said:

"Serenity and firmness are the attributes of great peoples; it is necessary to be in full possession of these. The government will do its duty. We

He is charged with manslaughter. The Coroner's inquest started Friday night and heard the story of the autopsy which reported a fractured skull, was adjourned for one week.

NEW LODGE IS FORMED

Doxsee Lodge No. 852, L.O.B.A. Holds Initiation Ceremonies at Campbellford.

MANY VISITORS PRESENT.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 10 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Another organization was added to the list already established in the town of Campbellford when the Doxsee Lodge Number 852, L.O.B.A., was formed with all due ceremony in the lodge rooms of the I.O.O.F., Ferris Block, loaned for the occasion. The lodge is named in honor of the late William Doxsee, first mayor of Campbellford, veteran of the South African War, member of L.O.L. 36, and a commissioned officer in the Great War who went overseas with the first Canadian contingent and was killed while fighting with the Canadian forces in the Ypres salient.

There were many visitors present at the organization and initiation ceremony, which lasted till after two o'clock in the morning. Mrs. Evans, Supreme Grand Mistress of the L.O.B.A. for British America, was present to direct the proceedings. Visitors from the Hastings Lodge were in charge of the initiation ceremony and the second degree was exemplified by members of the Stirling Lodge. After the lodge ritual had been completed, and the speeches made by the several officers present, lunch was served in the lodge rooms. Two beautiful gavells were presented to the lodge by Sir Knight Scriver of Hastings, as a token of goodwill and to express the wish of the friends of Hastings for the success of the new organization. There were more than twenty names on the charter issued for the lodge, but there were only sixteen initiated at the first meeting.

The officers installed were: Mrs. A. B. Levitt, W.M.; Mrs. Roy McGee, D.M.; Mrs. Robert Bibby, Chaplain; Miss Helen Jeffs, Recording Secretary; Mrs. I. W. Angus, Treasurer; Mrs. John Booth, Finance Secretary; Mrs. A. Ayrhart, Director of Ceremonies; Mrs. J. Jeffs, First Lecturer; Miss Amy Gibbs, Second Lecturer; Mrs. A. Smith, Mrs. J. Stillman, Mrs. J. I. Adams and Miss Georgina Gibbs, Women's Committee.

BREEDERS PLAN HOLSTEIN SALE

Twelfth Annual Meeting of Durham County Club is Held in Newcastle.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Over forty attended the twelfth annual meeting of the Durham County Holstein Breeders' Club held in the Community Hall, Newcastle, on Thursday, December 6th. A business meeting was held at ten o'clock when many important items of business were transacted, including the election of officers. In the absence of President H. I. Seymour, of Cavan, Vice-President A. J. Runnalls, Port Hope, occupied the chair. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, A. J. Runnalls, Port Hope; vice-president, N. I. Metcalf, Bowmanville; secy.-treas., J. H. Jose, Newcastle; auditors, N. Mutton and R. M. Cale; directors, Chris Cox, J. D. Stevens, Percy Seymour, Fred Fallis, Walter Reynolds, Mont Bickle, A. J. Tamblyn, A. A. Gibson.

It was decided to hold a sale at Bowmanville in the spring of 1929, and a committee was appointed to plan an excursion this coming summer.

A very successful banquet was held at 12.30. Short speeches were given by W. F. Rickard, Reeve of Newcastle; F. W. Bowen, M.P.; W. J. Bragg, M.P.P.; and Dr. J. B. Reynolds of Port Hope. M. C. McPhail, also gave an outline of the methods by which Perth County Holstein Breeders organized for showing a county herd at the C.N.E. His address was listened to with great interest by those present. R. M. Holtby, Port Perry, field man for the Holstein breed, was present, and gave a very interesting talk on the progress of the Holstein breed in Canada. J. Y. Kellough, agricultural representative, Port Hope, gave a short talk on junior farmer work in the county during the past year, when he reviewed some of the new lines of work and the successes in stock judging work. He asked that a silver cup be given by the club to the high boy in judging dairy cattle at the county competition. This request was granted. Some of the results of cow testing work were pointed out, and some of the benefits from this were outlined. The value of many Holstein herds in this county could be greatly increased if the owners would join the Cow Testing Association, and for a very small sum have their milk tested every month of the year.

The general feeling of the whole meeting was one of optimism regarding the future of dairying in this part of Ontario, and it is felt that Durham County is in a very favorable position to increase her production of dairy products.

CAR SKIDS ON ICY STREETS

BOY IS STRUCK

HASTINGS, Dec. 10 (Examiner Correspondence). — On Wednesday evening, at the conclusion of the concert in the Town Hall, the streets were filled with pedestrians owing to the icy conditions of the sidewalks. In an attempt to avoid the crowd at the corner of Albert and Bridge streets, Donald Keir of Campbellford, who was driving an auto, applied the brakes suddenly, with the result that the car catapulted over the sidewalk, striking the house occupied by George Lynch, and breaking off a metal platform guard post. The car then turned over on its side toward the street, and it was with difficulty that the occupants, Mr. and Mrs. John Cruikshanks, daughters Muriel and Ruby, and Gordon Fairman, with the driver, were set free. All escaped serious injury, but Mr. Keir is carrying his arm in a sling, owing to a severe bruise. When the car sideswiped, it struck Tommy Sofy, who was walking, and injured his arm also. Had it not been for the timely grasp of Stanley Stevenson, the boy would have been very seriously injured.

CONVENTIONS BEING PLANNED

Liberals Are Busy in Both North and South Victoria Constituencies.

LINDSAY, Dec. 10.—(Special) — While there are no signs of a provincial election in the offing, the Liberals of North and South Victoria are displaying considerable activity and talking of conventions in both ridings at an early date.

A rather private luncheon of the party stalwarts was held at Hotel Benson with representatives from the outlying districts present. A round table talk on matters political, especially the reorganization of the party forces in the ridings, took place. It was decided to hold another luncheon at an early date when the election of executives will take place and plans formulated for conventions. A feature of the luncheon was the presence of Mr. William Newman, M.P.P., South Victoria. Rumor has it that the Liberals will again endorse the canditure of Mr. Sandy when the next convention is held.

POWERS MEET IN DISCUSSION OF LUCANO PACT

Many Difficult Questions Await Settlement by League Council

EUROPE IS ANXIOUS

Premier Mussolini of Italy Is Absent When Other Nations Open Conference

LUGANO, Switzerland, Dec. 10.—Lugano last night began the job of proving that Locarno was right. The "big three' statesmen who wove the Locarno peace pact promptly got to grips in an effort to demonstrate to one another and to the world that, despite many ominous warnings from public opinion, the spirit of Locarno still animates Europe.

Aristide Briand, French Foreign Minister, took the first step when he called on the convalescent German Minister of Foreign Affairs, Gustav Stressmann, upon whom physicians still keep watchful and anxious eyes. Later M. Briand had a conversation with Sir Austen Chamberlain, British Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

On the eve of the fifty-third session of the Council of the League of Nations, statesmen admit they are disturbed and anxious over the European political situation. Personal contacts between leaders, which Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin of Britain recently advocated, were expected to do much at Lugano to lessen the general tension. The many Governmental representatives gathered here made no effort to conceal their hope in this connection. Herr Stressmann has publicly expressed his pessimism over the relations between his country and the allied powers, due to hesitancy in removing troops from German soil. It is expected that he will express his convictions and those of the government he represents plainly and vigorously to his fellow-Locarno architects, and ask them:

"What has happened to the spirit of Locarno?"

Reassurance Expected

The German Foreign Minister was expected to be reassured by Chamberlain and Briand, according to information in responsible quarters, that Locarno principles are preserved unchanged, and that the problem of the evacuation of the Rhineland would be settled loyally and simultaneously with liquidation of the reparations problem. In German circles many expressions of disapproval have been heard of the Parliamentary utterances of Briand and Sir Austen's declaration that Germany had no legal right to expect evacuation, but in British quarters there is a tendency to emphasize the significance of Sir Austen Chamberlain's later remarks, to the effect that evacuation of the Rhineland was being studied in pursuance of the friendly statement made by David Lloyd George, Clemenceau, and Woodrow Wilson when those three statesmen gathered in Paris after the Peace Treaty had been signed.

Arms Conference Failure

Persistent difficulties in the domain of reduction and control of armaments is another matter clearly causing apprehension in international circles. Failure of last week's preliminary conference at Geneva for the control and manufacture of arms is largely ascribed to the disinclination of several Continental powers to reveal to the world specific data concerning their armaments, and this is arousing dissatisfaction among countries who are not manufacturing themselves, and are obliged to buy arms abroad, thus disclosing all the secrets of their national defence.

The recent speech of Premier Mussolini of Italy, in which he declared the whole world was arming and Italy thus must be prepared, only served to emphasize the conviction that fruitful personal contacts are urgently desired. A meeting between Mussolini and M. Briend is still regarded as a possibility, although it was stated emphatically by a spokesman of the Italian delegation which arrived to-day that a visit by the Premier was out of the question.

Sir Austen and Lady Chamberlain were the last of the world figures to arrive and were greeted officially at the station and accorded an enthusiastic welcome.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

MRS. HENRY J. ABERNETHY

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 10.—Mrs. Henry J. Abernethy celebrates her seventy-fourth birthday to-day. She is enjoying excellent health and is an active member of her household. Mr. Abernethy celebrated his seventy-second birthday on the twenty-seventh of August this year. Both Mr. and Mrs. Abernethy are able to recall the events of many years ago which were milestones in the history of the town. The old wooden bridge, the frame hotels, the days when there were no banks here, the old stone school house and the ford which was one means of crossing the Trent river about two miles north of the town, are all vividly stamped on their memory. In remarking on the fact that there were no banks in Campbellford at that time, Mr. Abernethy smiled as he said they were not needed, since no one had any money, anyway. They also recall such incidents as the Trent River flood, which occurred in the seventies; the Front street fire, which destroyed the business section of that time, and the ox carts which were the chief mode of travel in the district.

It is a matter of regret by the many friends of the elderly couple, that after leading an active life for more than three score years, Mr. Abernethy should be suffering from rheumatism which forces him into comparative inactivity.

ESKIMO BOYS ENJOY PICTURES

Venerable Archdeacon Fleming Tells Audiences of Work in Far North Country.

PROUD OF FLAG

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, December 10. — Venerable Archdeacon A. L. Fleming gave a very interesting and illuminating address on his work in the Far North among the Eskimos, in the Queen Street Theatre on Wednesday afternoon and evening. The theatre was filled to capacity in the afternoon, with the juvenile element largely predominant; in the evening the attendance was not so large, but nevertheless very keenly interested.

Rev. A. W. Mackenzie introduced Archdeacon Fleming to the audience in a brief address. He would like to have brought the two little Eskimo boys down, but they retire early, and at this hour are fast asleep. They were present in the afternoon and were deeply interested in the pictures and commented to one another in their own language in a manner which showed keen enthusiasm.

Ben saw his daddy's picture on the screen, and was delighted. There were a limited number of Archdeacon Flemming's book "Dwellers in the Arctic Night," which the speaker said could be purchased at a very low price.

Has Large Sale.

Archdeacon Fleming, in commenting on his book, said that its one purpose was to give an intelligent idea of the Eskimos, what they are and what they may become, and to educate people in the value of mission work for them. The book had a remarkable sale in England, and there is a strong demand for a second edition; the first edition of 3,500 copies is practically sold out.

The Eskimos are either pagan in their religion, Church of England, or Roman Catholic, as only the missionaries of the two latter bodies have reached them. They are a wonderful people, undeveloped, but not one whit inferior to ourselves. Some people don't want to Christianize them, but that is utter rot, for civilization is reaching them, and will demoralize them if they are not made Christian. They need saving in every sense of the term.

Heavy Liability.

The Arctic Mission is a heavy liability, with the scarcity of men and the enormous freight rates on the ships, but it is a tremendous work and worth carrying on. The freight rates are high because of the great hazards of the trip and the frequency of wrecks. The traders, explorers, and Mounted Police are all there, and in the main are fine fellows. The R.C.M.P. is one of the finest bodies of men in the world, but to every rule there are excep-

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

LADIES ELECT NEW OFFICERS

$273 BALANCE

CAVAN, Dec. 10 (Examiner Correspondence).—The annual election of officers and business meeting of the Ladies' Aid and W.M.S. of Cavan United Church was held in the basement of the church on Wednesday afternoon.

The president of the Ladies' Aid, Mrs. A. B. Kennedy, conducted the first part of the meeting and after the devotional exercises, reports were given of different phases of the work of the aid.

The first report was of the financial side of the fowl dinner. The door receipts were $317.30. The collections on the Sunday preceding the dinner amounted to $28.82. Some cash donations have since been received. The expenses of the dinner were $86.

It was moved and passed, that the Ladies' Aid pay for the new lamp in use by the choir.

Mrs. Ray Syer, the secretary, read a short report of the work of the society during the year. Nine meetings were held, and three suppers. New drapes were purchased for the windows of the basement of the church. The parsonage had been redecorated. The members had been divided into groups for entertaining the Aid at its regular meetings.

Raised Over $500.

The treasurer read a splendid report of the finances for the year 1928. The receipts for the year had been more than five hundred dollars, and the balance on hand was $273.

Two hundred and fifty dollars was voted for the board of managers to aid in the financing of the church.

President, Mrs. A. B. Kennedy; vice-president, Mrs. R. Matchett; recording secretary, Mrs. Ray Syer; Corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. W. Perrin; financial secretary, Mrs. Snider; treasurer, Mrs. James Douglas; devotion committee, convenor, Mrs. R. Matchett; parsonage committee, convenor, Mrs. D. J. Hunter; flower committee, convenor, Mrs. Carpenter; visiting committee, convenor, Mrs. R. S. Staples; pianist, Miss A. Tinney.

Mrs. Carpenter invited the Aid to meet at the parsonage in January.

W. M. S. Meeting

Mrs. R. S. Staples, president of the W. M. S. took charge of closing up the business of that society for the year.

The secretary's report was read by Mrs. J. W. Perrin in the absence of Mrs. Matchett.

Ten meetings had been held, with an average attendance of nine.

On invitation, the W. M. S. had visited the Fairmount branch and listened to an excellent address by Mrs. Moore of Peterborough.

A sectional rally of six auxiliaries had been held at Cavan, when Mrs. Melville Johnson, Springville, had given an interesting and comprehensive report of the W.M.S. Presbytery convention at Lindsay. Miss Rose, a returned missionary, had given a fine address at the rally and Mrs. Bookhout, Peterborough, conducted it.

The regular leaflets and study book had been used in the meetings.

Mrs. J. C. Swain read the financial report, showing that our allocation had been almost reached.

Mite boxes containing more than ten dollars were handed in; a few more are yet out, and when they come in, it is hoped the remaining three dollars of the allocation will have been reached.

It was decided to try holding joint meetings again next year, with each society being allowed one hour and fifteen minutes for business. This to be followed by lunch and a social time.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 10—(Canadian Press).—The export trade in grain here Saturday again of a very limited character, there being little response from foreign buyers to local offers. The domestic market was also quiet, the demand being only for odd cars.

A fair amount of business was done in spring and winter flour and values were well maintained.

The millfeed market continued active and firm. Prices for standard grades of rolled oats were steady under a fair demand.

The strength that characterized the butter market through the week was maintained Saturday and values were marked up another fraction. This was attributed to the good demand and the small supplies on spot. Receipts were 342 packages.

Extreme dullness again marked the trade in cheese and values were easier. Receipts were 291 boxes.

An active business was done in fresh and storage grades of eggs and values were unchanged. Receipts were 220 cases.

The trade in Prince Edward Island potatoes was good and prices were steady. Whites sold at 77c and Green Mountains at 85c per bag of 90 lbs.

Canadian beans old well at $5.25 per bushel.

WOMEN HONOR GRANDMOTHERS

Roseneath Institute Will Give Shower of Handkerchiefs for Old People.

INTERESTING PROGRAM

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, December 10. — On Thursday afternoon, the last meeting of the Women's Institute, held in 1928, gathered at the home of Mrs. Joseph Robins, to celebrate Grandmothers' Day.

Ten grandmothers were present of which two were great grandmothers.

Mrs. Albert Halstead, vice-president, opened the meeting, and dealt with the suggestions made and correspondences that were read.

It was decided that a shower of handkerchiefs be given to the aged people at the county home, at Cobourg. Mrs. C. W. Varcoe and Miss Jessie Johnston were appointed a committee to purchase and send them as a Christmas gift from the Institute.

A report was given from the trustees of S. S. No. 2, saying they were not in favor of hot school lunches for the children.

Mrs. Halstead addressed the grandmothers present by saying nothing is too good for a mother or grandmother, and hoped that other members, like herself, would appreciate their help in starting the Institute twenty-five years ago and has continued in its work ever since. She spoke of the Great War and how hard our Institute grandmothers toiled for the boys overseas.

President Returns.

The president, Mrs. Lottie Nichol, took charge of the program, thanking the Institute members for their kindness during her illness, and while in the hospital; she appreciated everything that the members and friends had sent and done for her.

State of Mind.

The first to speak on the program was Mrs. Mary Brown (Aunt Mary), the great grandmother of the Institute, taking the words, "As young as your faith". She said "Continued youth is not a time of life—it is a state of mind. It means a temperamental predominence of courage over timidity; over the appetite of adventure; over love and ease.. But when the wires are all down, and all the central places of your heart are covered with the snows of pessimism, and the ice of cynicism, then we feel we are growing old."

Mrs. Robins, the second oldest grand mother member, read a humorous story entitled "The Adventures of Jerry." Jerry was the mischievous pet pig.

The next grandmother, Mrs. Orra Varcoe, gave a paper that was greatly enjoyed, "Ascertaining the Will of God," saying, "Be not conformed to this world;" in other words, do not grow so attached to this world that in doing so we forget the will of God. That means us. It means your appearance upon the thoroughfares of our cities and towns. Solomon says of the virtuous woman, "She maketh herself coverings of tapestry." The curse of the present generation is the immodest dress of our women, and if there isn't a reform soon our grand-children will inherit a morality that is rotten to the core. God intended us women for something more than to pose as fashion plates. At fashion's decree some used to lace themselves so as to appear like the sister of a wasp, and caused the medical writer to add the disease known as corset liver to his latest editions. Then came the hobble skirts, and what they will put on, or how much they will leave off next, remains to be seen. But when Miss Fewclothes comes out on parade, the whole of which I would need to bandage a sore finger, I feel like going home to mother. Some may say, short sleeves and low necks are so much more comfortable. Possibly that is true, but were I to appear before you with my arms bare to the elbow, my collar off, and my shirt rolled seven inches below my neck, for comfort's sake, you would tell me that in the presence of ladies I ought to be respectable. That is what men think.

Elizabethian Days.

In the days of Queen Elizabeth the women wore collars so high that they had to cut notches for their ears; then the pendulum swung to the other extreme and the collars commenced coming down, and still down, until I understand that in some places they now wear them for belts. In the name of good, pure womanhood, can't you see where this thing is leading to?

When Eve ate of the fruit in the garden of Eden, she knew she was naked, and I think it is about time to pass the apple again.

I am opposed to this whole peek-a-boo business. It has come to the place where there is no need to peek any more. I pray the day is not far off when women will see they cannot be living in the perfect will of God by inviting the gaze of lust. The mother who permits her sixteen-year-old daughter to float around joy riding at all hours of the night with some self-conceited sport, possessing a weak jaw, and far weaker morals, opens the door of her home to sin, shame and disgrace. Mother, if that girl of yours is in such dire need of fresh air, you had better crawl into the back seat of that auto and get some too. "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, acceptable and perfect will of God."

Mrs. M. Davey gave a piece on Co-operation. Mrs. Lily Turner, who was sent to Belleville to represent the Roseneath branch, brought home with her a splendid report of the convention, with many new ideas in the Institute line.

Owing to the serious illness of our King the gathering stood for a brief silence, before singing the National Anthem.

A delicious lunch was served but it was extra from the rules—but why not, when only one day in the twelve months is reserved for our grandmothers. Nothing is too good for them. What do our grandmothers owe to the young people of this generation?

ENDS COLD QUICK WAY DOCTORS NOW ADVISE

Tempting Taste! Instant Relief —Then Cold Just Disappears When Treated This Way

No longer is it necessary for colds to cause needless misery or risk of pneumonia. For doctors are now advising a method that has given quick, sure relief—not only in the extreme hospital cases, but in home use among vast numbers in Peterborough and vicinity.

L. H. Phillips, for example, neglected his cold because it was mild at first. A day later congestion started to spread rapidly; he felt "achy" and feared pneumonia. On the advice of his doctor then he started using double strength doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a hospital-certified medication of wild cherry, terpinhydrate, and other ingredients now used by leading clinics.

Relief began instantly. With the first pleasant swallow he felt its comforting healing warmth—from his nose passages deep down into his chest. In a few hours the "feverish," "achy" feeling was relieved; congestion began to clear up, and in another day or so, the doctor reports, all trace of the cold was gone.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physician.

Just a few pleasant spoonfuls of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral now and you, too, will feel like a different person to-morrow. At all druggists 65c; or twice as much in $1.00 hospital size.

A CHANCE FOR THE COMMISSION.

The personnel of Canada's new Radio Commission, headed by Sir John Aird, will impress most Canadians as capable of useful public service in solving problems that are of great interest to this country.

Radio has ceased to be a fad and has become an outstanding source of education and amusement.

The quality of reception, the standard of programs and other features of radio broadcasting are matters of prime importance to a large number of Canadians, and if the new commission is able to bring about any improvement in these or other departments they will have earned the gratitude of hundreds of thousands of listeners-in.

In this connection the commission should find the division of time on the air alloted to the different Canadian stations a matter offering a profitable field for inquiry.

The present situation by which powerful stations capable of reaching all sections of the Dominion are given only part time on the air, while a much less powerful Toronto station receives the benefit of full time, is not in the interests of the radio public.

If full-time privileges are to be granted at all they should be granted to those broadcasting units most capable of service.

Any other policy deprives Canadian set-owners of the full benefit of radio broadcasting.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE MARK OF ORIGIN.

The movement to bring about the adoption of a mark of origin to be placed on goods produced within the British Empire promises to gain speed as a result of the United States election, and the promises made by President-elect Herbert Hoover that the tariff wall against Canadian products is to be increased.

Canadians, realizing that they are Uncle Sam's best customer, are inclined to resent such a program and to turn their attention to the desirability of buying Empire-made goods, thus smoothing the way for the introduction of the mark of origin proposal, mooted for some time and now taking a more concrete form.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association has recently taken the matter up with the British Empire Producers' Association in London, suggesting three different marks that might be considered suitable, and recommending that any action should be on an entirely voluntary basis.

"It is our strong conviction," the Canadian organization states, "that the use of such a mark must be left to the discretion of the company concerned, leaving to the various associations the function of disseminating information about the proper use.

The proposal to show the origin of British-made goods, according to the system proposed by the C.M.A., will interest Canadian business men, and the millions of Canadian consumers who are becoming increasing discriminating in their purchases.

A stamp showing the article to be a British product and then giving the part of Empire in which it originated would do much to encourage the development of Empire trade and offset the heavy buying of American-made goods.

WE PAY FOR WHAT WE GET—THAT'S ALL.

A comparison between Government expenditures in Ontario a decade or two ago and the $58,488,000 which the Provincial Treasurer announces was spent by this Province last year should cause some thought.

The expenditure in the last fiscal year was large enough to be arresting and, at first thought, to convict the administration of reckless extravagance.

Our governments cost more, our taxes are heavier, simply because we demand more and more services from the state because the old standards no longer satisfy us.

Ontario spent over ten million dollars last year in education; over a quarter of a million for forest protection; for the development of Northern Ontario, four millions and a half; for the maintenance and construction of highways and the enforcement of the Motor Vehicles Act, close to eighteen millions; and for mothers' allowances, nearly three millions.

Most of these expenditures were not dreamed of twenty or twenty-five years ago.

The automobile brought with it the good roads problem, and changing public opinion and public demand have been responsible for the social and economic changes that have resulted in such a rapid increase in the cost of government.

In Ontario next year we will assume further obligations in instituting a system of old age pensions, and will likely have to provide a couple of millions for industrial research.

Expenditures will grow in proportion to the demands made for new services, and after all the majority of people would prefer the present standards, even though they cost more.

The Ottawa Journal says "it is simply a higher cost to pay for a more complex, more civilized and more comfortable standard of living—and it is worth it," and most residents of Ontario will agree with that view.

SAVE THE MOTHERS.

"I have never lost a father yet." We recall this old standard joke of the medical profession in rebuttal of the suggestion of Miss Agnes MacPhail that there is sex discrimination on the part of the public or the authorities in the problem of safeguarding life. At the U.F.O. convention on Wednesday Miss MacPhail sponsored a resolution which urged Federal and Provincial governmental aid for maternal welfare. She cited the fact, which has been given publicity in a report of the Federal Department of Health, that four Canadian mothers died in childbirth every day in the year. "Don't think me bitter," Miss MacPhail said, "if I say that if four men died daily in Canada from preventable causes, there would be a row. But when a woman dies in childbirth there is a tendency to dismiss it as an act of God." The public and the authorities are, we believe, as keenly interested in saving the lives of women as they are in saving the lives of men. The safety campaign in factories applies to women workers as well as members of the other sex. Fathers are as worried about this problem as mothers. It is not sex discrimination, but apathy, which is to blame for Canada's neglect to grapple with the situation. And it is high time that public opinion was aroused.

Early in the year there was published the results of the survey taken by the Federal Department of Health, a survey which took three years to complete, and in which the medical profession co-operated. It was shown that in one year 1,532 mothers had died, and that as a result 5,072 motherless children were left behind. Of the children born when the mother died, one-half passed away in the following month. The tragedy of the situation is that half the deaths could have been prevented, and perhaps more than half. Over 1,500 homes are made desolate in Canada every year; over 5,000 children deprived of a mother's care. The time has come for Canada to take action. The report of the Federal department gave suggestions for reducing the death toll of motherhood. Better educational facilities are needed, it was said, more specialized training for doctors, and more maternity hospitals. Other countries are dealing successfully with the problem. The United States is said to have reduced the percentage of deaths in several States through improved educational facilities, made possible by Federal aid. A campaign in Denmark has cut the number of deaths per 1,000 births to 2.4. Compare this with Canada's rate of 6.4 per 1,000. It is not only in the rural districts where the death rate is high. Toronto has been doing a lot of explaining to show why the maternal mortality rate there was 7.7 per 1,000 in 1927. It may take an example from Huddersfield, Yorkshire, which reduced the toll from 5.6 to 1.7. Cold comfort may be derived from the alarm which Britain feels over the same problem. The rate in England and Wales is 4.1; it should be much lower.

The medical profession has shown a readiness to co-operate in this problem, for public-spirited doctors know that the profession is not blameless. There was one phrase in letters from doctors received by the Federal Board of Health which recurred constantly. "Doctors do not take these cases seriously enough," it was declared. Dr. A. M. Mendenhall, of Indianapolis, speaking in a convention at Toronto recently, drew attention to the fact that only 4 per cent. of the teaching hours in most Canadian and United States medical colleges is devoted to obstetrics, while 35 per cent. of the general practitioner's time is devoted to this branch. To the layman it seems that there is a wide divergence between the emphasis upon education and practice. It is up to all organizations interested in the welfare of mothers to overcome apathy, both public and official, in the pressing problem of maternal mortality.—Hamilton Spectator.

BRITISH NEWS IN CANADA.

In order to increase still further the amount of British news coming to Canada, the Canadian Press is sending Mr. George Hambleton to London to act as a staff correspondent. As a former parliamentary correspondent of the Montreal Gazette, with several years' experience as manager of the Canadian Press parliamentary bureau in Ottawa, and having covered in London the last sessions of the Imperial Conference, Mr. Hambleton is in every respect qualified for his new post. He will be assisted by Mr. Terry Champion, who has been in London for the Canadian Press for several years, and by a competent staff.

It is to be hoped that this decision on the part of the Canadian Press—taken at considerable expense to Canadian newspapers—will be noted by those British politicians who, following a recent tour of Canada, complained that Canadian newspapers carried little British news. It may lead them to look into the actual facts regarding British news in Canadian papers and Canadian news in British papers, with consequent regret for having talked such nonsense.

Perhaps it may induce them to carry their patriotism for the Empire to the extent of inducing British newspapers to do at least one-tenth as much for Canadian news as Canadian newspapers do for British news. For, as the position is, about all British publishers do about printing Canadian news is to indulge in decayed platitudes about it. A few years ago, we remember, Lord Burnham, then owner of the London Daily Telegraph passed through Canada on his way to Australia to attend the Empire Press Conference. He was president of the Empire Press Union, and every time that he rose to speak, which was often, he talked about the need of the Empire's newspapers printing Empire news. Yet at that very time the London Daily Telegraph, his own paper, had no correspondent in Canada.

To-day, outside of the London Times and the Manchester Guardian, there is not a daily paper in London that doesn't ignore Canadian news. True, they will print lots of letters from disgruntled harvesters, or the insipid, silly despatches of floppers they send out here to "do" Canada; but nothing more. You will find in them columns and columns from the United States, and all about what is going on in the Balkans, in Vienna and Constantinople and Bucharest; but when it comes to Canada, which does more trade with Britain than all those two-by-four so-called States in Europe put together, there is nothing. As a matter of fact—and this despite all the sugary talk about binding the Empire together—it was only a few years ago that the Canadian Press was successful in securing a seat in the Press Gallery of the British House of Commons.

When Mr. Baldwin and Sir Austen Chamberlain and other British statesmen come out here they talk about the vital need of Canada and England knowing more about one another. They are, of course, quite right. We venture to suggest, however, that the average Canadian knows twenty times more about England and what is going on in England than the average Englishman knows about Canada. And the Reason is the British press.

If it were practicable, we wish Mr. Baldwin could summon a gathering of those Fleet Street barons and politely tell them that instead of writing cheap platitudes about Empire unity they might do a little real work for it by printing more Empire news.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Only two weeks to go. That Christmas shopping should be completed as soon as possible.

Young Peterborough is learning that there was plenty of good hockey played here by the stars of yesteryear.

Red propaganda is being circulated in Toronto schools. The authorities should deal with that condition promptly and forcibly.

Fewer indictments of people who are beyond reach and more honesty and alertness along the border might do something to stop the flood of liquor into the United States.

A Thought

A CHRISTMAS WISH FOR YOU.

Stars in the dusk; and bells across the night;
Dim Hills against the sky; the faery foam
Of frost on glimmering windows in the light
Of hearthfires, flick-ring on the walls of home;
The cry of dreams in quiet hours apart;
And more than these—friends and a laughing heart.

GOD'S MINUTE.

* * *

O Lord, our Lord, Creator, preservor and bountiful benefactor of men, in Whom we live and move and have our being, we adore Thee for Thy loving kindness and tender mercies. With shame in our hearts we confess before Thee our many sins. Our lives do not meet Thy requirements. Our footsteps have wandered from the pathway of rectitude. Our Father, look upon us in mercy, and do Thou be pleased to have pity upon us in our sins. Look upon Thy Son, Who died for us, and do Thou for His sake accept us as righteous before Thee. Grant that our sins may not only be blotted out of the book of Thy remembrance, but that by the power of the Holy Ghost we may be enabled to die unto sin, and to live unto righteousness. Comfort the disconsolate, cheer the saddened, bring friends to the friendless, teach the ignorant, give visions to trembling faith, set the star of hope in the overhanging clouds, and hurry the forces of truth towards the consummation of Thy Kingdom. We can trust all to Thee. As our Shepherd, lead us to-day. As our King, defend us from the enemies that watch for our souls. As our priest, teach us the will of God for our salvation. O God, our Father, overshadow our pathway with Thy merciful providence, and let each one of us bear some part in the advancement of the Redeemer's glorious Kingdom. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

REALIZATION.

When you were here my heart forgot,
I fear, if you were here or not.
Here is my sight, here at my touch,
Perhaps I did not know how much
I had, and never knew until
You turned the corner, passed the hill.

But now that you are gone it seems
My heart has room and time for dreams,
And I remember things you said
To which I never turned my head,
And things you did I now recall
I did not know I saw at all.

And yet to you, my best of friends,
I do not write to make amends,
But more to tell a wondrous thing:
How absence oftentimes may bring
Us closer than our presence may
On what we called a happier day.

For then I had to look to find,
But now you're always in my mind,
And once I had to speak to hear,
But now your voice is always near.
A friend a friend has never known
Until a friend has walked alone.

THE LUCKIEST LADY

BY RUBY M. AYRES

THE STORY THUS FAR:

BIDDY SAUNDERS—the Little Flapper—always called MARNA PAGET, her young adopted mother, the Luckiest Lady. For what could any woman want that Marna did not possess—beauty, wealth, and the love of a devoted husband? But Marna was not happy. She had married GEORGE PAGET, who adored her, without loving him. Three months after the wedding she had met HUGH HUBBARD and given him her heart. Hugh fled to China. Now, after five years, he is home, and he and Marna find their love for each other stronger than ever.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

IV.—"I CAN'T BEAR IT!"

"When you are a little older I shall give a dance for you," Marna told the Little Flapper as she sat on the side of the bed for a few minutes before saying good-night to her. The Little Flapper squeezed her hand.

"Who are you giving it for this time, then?" she asked interestedly. Marna did not answer at once. She sat staring down at the toe of her dainty slipper, her lips set tightly. Then she gave a sigh that ended in a half laugh.

"Well, I suppose in a way it's for Mr. Hubbard—for Hugh," she said. "You see, he goes away next week."

"Are you sorry?" the Little Flapper asked.

"Tomorrow night you shall come and peep over the balusters," she promised. "And you may leave your door open, so you can hear the music. We're going to have a lovely band."

"Are we?" The Little Flapper always included herself in the family now, although it was only five months since that wet night in the rain when the woman whom she had known as Mother had been killed. But the Little Flapper seldom looked back to those days; love and happiness had already wiped them almost completely from her mind.

"I'm so happy," she once told Harnigan—"so happy that sometimes I think I shall burst!"

"I shouldn't do that if I was you, miss," Harnigan said reprovingly.

The Little Flapper chuckled.

"Why not?" she inquired, and knew beforehand the answer she would receive.

"Because it would be degradading to burst," Harnigan said. But tonight Biddy was not feeling quite so happy as usual, as she lay there in the bed that still made her feel as if she was floating on a cloud, and looked up at Marna's face, a little pale, it seemed, in spite of the fact that she was trying to smile. It made Biddy feel as if there was a crumpled roseleaf in her bed, a very tiny crumpled roseleaf, certainly, but still, it was there!

"What frock are you going to wear?" she asked eagerly.

"I've got a new frock for tomorrow," Marna said. "It's blue."

"And it's got a frilly skirt," Marna went on. "And I've got a big fan to match."

"You'll look beautiful!" the Little Flapper said earnestly.

"Do you think so?" Marna rose from the side of the bed. "I hope I shall," she added, with a sudden note of passion. "I hope I shall. I want to!"

And so she was beautiful—by far the most beautiful of all the beautiful ladies in the room, so Biddy thought, when, late the following evening, long after she ought to have been in bed and asleep, she hung over the balusters, trembling with excitement, gazing down at the throngs of people passing to and fro across the hall.

The Little Flapper's heart ached with love as her adoring eyes followed Marna to and fro. She was so sweet to everyone; she seemed to make everyone feel that they were the one person in the world whom she had wanted to see, and whom she was delighted to welcome.

George Paget stood beside her, very smiling and well-groomed, his monocle on a black silk ribbon—which intrigued the Little Flapper immensely, for as a rule he wore it attached to a thin cord—and his hearty voice rising above all the chatter and laughter.

"How are you? Delighted to see you! Am I going to dance—eh? Well, it's not much in my line, but to please Marna, don'tcherknow——"

That was like him—to please Marna was all he lived for. And then the band—how perfectly wonderful it was! There was one tune in particular that touched the Little Flapper's heart and made her want to cry. It was a waltz, so she discovered afterwards—a haunting, sensuous waltz-tune that haunted her for days afterwards.

It was long past midnight when she heard it played, and she knew that she ought to have gone back to bed some time ago, but—well, it was so fascinating, clinging to the balusters and looking down on the crowd, that she could not tear herself away.

But at this particular moment the big hall was deserted; everyone seemed to be dancing in the long drawing-room, although now and then a couple—tired, perhaps, or wanting to talk—wandered across the hall and ou int the big conservatory, which was full of lovely flowers and lit with shaded lamps.

Presently Marna came, with Hugh Hubbard. They were not arm-in-arm, as some of the others had been; they were walking a pace apart, almost as if they were not very friendly, and when they reached the foot of the big staircase Marna stood still, and the Little Flapper heard her say:

"This time next week you will have gone, Hugh."

"Yes."

Hubbard was standing with his hands clenched behind him, and his face looked all white and queer. "As if he wanted to cry," the Little Flapper told herself, with a sudden pang of unexplained compassion. Then Marna laughed.

"You'll be glad to go?" she asked lightly.

He did not reply to that, and she said again:

"You're not very polite. You might at least pretend to be sorry to leave—us—all!"

There was a queer little breathless pause between each of the last three words.

"There is no need for me to pretend—you know that," Hugh Hubbard answered. And then for a moment they looked at one another silently, and the Little Flapper's heart began to thump in a sacred sort of way, and she wanted to move and run back to bed, only she was afraid that if she did the stairs would creak and they would hear her; so she just stood very still, clutching the polished baluster-rail with both trembling hands.

And downstairs the band was still playing that haunting, heart-breaking tune, and Marna and Hugh Hubbard were looking at one another as if—as if—the Little Flapper did not know what it was that she could see written in their tragic faces, though it vaguely reminded her of a scene in a stage-play—something which always kept an audience quiet, and sometimes made them cry. Then Marna said in a high-pitched, unnatural little voice:

"Well, shall we dance?"

And Hugh Hubbard put his arm round her, and they took a few steps together, Marna's head a little downbent against his shoulder, as if she was either very tired or very sad, and Hugh Hubbard's steady eyes, hard as if with resentful pain, carefully avoiding looking at her.

Then suddenly they stopped, as if by mutual consent, falling a pace apart again, and the Little Flapper heard Marna say, as if she had reached the end of all endurance, and could bear no more:

"So it's all over, Hugh—all over!" And then, in a voice that was not like her voice at all, but like the voice of someone in mortal pain:

"Oh, I can't bear it—I can't bear it!" And Hugh Hubbard made no answer; he just looked and looked at her, with his face all white and quivering, till she broke out once more:

"Oh, don't go—don't go! Don't leave me alone again!" And the anguish in her voice seemed to stop the Little Flapper's heart, and to rob her of all power of movement, and for a moment the whole world seemed to stop, too, holding its breath until Hugh Hubbard answered that broken cry in a voice just as despairing and hopeless:

"Marna—for God's sake—don't you think I'm suffering, too?"

But that was all, for at that moment the music stopped, and people began to stream out into the hall from the ballroom, and in an instant Marna was herself again, smiling and self-possessed, and Hugh Hubbard turned away and began to talk to someone else who came up to him; but the Little Flapper fled upstairs and into bed, sobbing, though she did not in the least understand why, and the world went rolling on once more.

* * *

And a week later Hugh Hubbard went away; at least, the Little Flapper supposed he had gone, because he did not come to the house any more; and then Marna caught a bad chill, and was so ill that she had to go to bed, and when she got better George Paget took her away to the South of France, and they stayed away a whole month.

And then they came home, and though Marna was still a little thin and pale, she seemed almost her old self again—and life went on as it had done before, except that Hugh Hubbard was not there, and that his name was hardly ever mentioned until one day George Paget said cheerily:

"Never heard from that blighter Hubbard, have we? Odd that he's never written—eh, Marna? Don'tcher think so?"

"Why should he write?"

Marna's voice was quite calm and controlled, but she looked away from her husband as she answered him, and only the Little Flapper's loving eyes saw the sudden bleak look of pain that swept across her face.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1928.

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

This is a day when it is wise to follow beaten paths, according to astrology.

Women will find in the domestic circle their best field for activity while this configuration prevails. This is a time to express affection through mediums that assure physical comfort.

Food and diet should engage attention at this time when it is imperative to conserve the health.

Physicians and surgeons may expect a period of extraordinary work, for much illness appears to be foreshadowed.

While colds and their attendant maladies will be prevalent, nervous diseases will be on the increase, it is prognosticated.

Wise women will avoid sleep starvation and will nourish themselves sufficiently to prevent exhaustion and depletion.

Under this sway it is well to avoid shouldering heavy business or domestic responsibilities. Face the new year as free as it is possible to be.

All the signs seem to indicate for Congress and for the state legislatures (United States) many battles of brains over national issues of supreme importance.

While to-day is favorable to friendly reunions among lawmakers they are to engage in bitter contests over bills affecting the rights of the people, the seers prophesy.

The rule supposed to cause sudden deaths continues and many brilliant careers will close before the spring, if the stars are rightly read.

In this new era, life will reach its highest attainments and then close, it is foretold. The speed of achievement will curtail the number of years.

Progress demands as its price the constant elimination of the old to make way for the young, astrologers explain, and in the development of a race that belongs to the air there must be a quick departure of all who belong to the past.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of much interest in legal matters. There may be legacies as well as well-earned wealth in the coming year.

Children born on this day probably will be endowed with good minds and strong bodies. Many writers are born under this sign.

Theeatnce in the Rocky Mountains is so gra that the flapping of partridge wings myabe heard for several miles.

MISSION CIRCLE HOLDS MEETING

Twilight Group Has Enjoyable Social Evening in Sunday School Hall.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

The Twilight Mission Circle of George Street United Church met in the Sunday School Hall Friday evening for a supper meeting at six o'clock with a large attendance. Miss Verna Strong's group was in charge of the refreshments.

The tables looked very attractive, being decorated in the Christmas colors with red paper runners, red candles, and holly wreaths.

At the conclusion of the supper the business meeting was held with the president, Miss Helen Burns in the chair. After repeating the Lord's prayer in unison, the secretary, Miss Aileen Clarke, and the treasurer, Miss Vera Squire, gave excellent reports, showing that the Circle had gone over the top of its allocation, in spite of the fact that it had only been organized for nine months of the year.

Officers Elected

Mrs. E. W. Coon took the chair for the election of officers, and spoke a few words in commendation of the girls' excellent work. Mrs. W. H. Morton, the honorary president of the Circle also congratulated the girls and hoped for an even better and bigger year when they would havve twelve months to work in. Most of the officers were re-elected by acclamation.

The following is the result:

Hon. president, Mrs. W. H. Morton; assistant superintendent, Mrs. MacMillian; president, Miss Helen Burns; vice-presidents, 1st, Miss Vera Strong, 2nd, Miss Myrtle Stephens; 3rd, Miss Evelyn Routley; recording secretary, Miss Aileen Clark; treasurer, Miss Vera Squire; corresponding secretary, Miss Dorothy Wiman; press secretary, Miss Evelyn Miller; supply secretary, Miss Alda Bartlett; convenor of strangers' committee, Miss Lillian Stoneham; convenor of sick committee, Miss Lauretta Sedgwick; pianist, Miss Miriam Purdy; group presidents, Miss Verna Strong, Miss Guelda Roseborough, Miss Margaret Deyell, Miss Lillian Wiman.

The newly re-elected officers took their seats and the business was resumed. It was decided to raise the supper fee.

The scripture lesson was read by Miss A. Wiman, after which Mrs. Morton led in prayer.

The first chapter of "Drums in the Darkness," was ably taken up by Miss Evelyn Routley and made very interesting with a map study of the locality.

Group D, with Miss Evelyn Routley, was in charge of the program.

Chinese Supper

Recently the Mission Circle held a very unique supper when the meal consisted of Chinese dishes served in Chinese style, the girls eating with chop-sticks, which proved very amusing. The courses were reversed from the usual order, beginning with tea and ginger candy and concluding with chop-suey and rice. Miss Vera Squire's group and Miss Lauretta Sedwick's groups had the supper in charge, while Miss Verna Strong's group arranged the program. This consisted of a talk on China by Rev. J. E. Todd and a Chinese spelling-match in which words weer supposed to be spelled backward. This created much merriment.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE WANT WHAT WE SEE

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

We want what we see. This is the secret of the wonderful display of goods that we see in the store windows. The store keepers know by experience that the more goods they display and the more prominently they display these goods the larger sales they will make. In some cases this matter of the proper display of goods is reduced to a science. For example in department stores the tables to the right of the entrance and some fifteen or twenty feet in attract the most attention because most people entering the store turn to the right and it takes them approximately fifteen feet to get to looking around. This is the most strategic place and is employed to good advantage by the shrewd manager. Moreover, the display must be near the level of the eyes. If placed too low or too high it will be missed.

We do not always see what we want, but we are likely to want what we see. The reason for this is simple enough. It is based on the fundamental law of suggestion. A definite concrete object before the eye is effective in capturing the focus of consciousness and to fill the mind so that, being an object of desire, it is difficult to resist it. You go through a store just for fun, but as you pass counter after counter laden with attractive objects you are likely to buy a good many things that you had no intention of buying. In this way we may buy things that we don't need. Every store keeper knows that goods which have been lying idle in boxes underneath a counter can be more quickly disposed of by being prominently displayed.

The appeal of the concrete, of what we see, is not confined to goods sold in stores. It runs all through life. We see a man act courteously towards a child or an old woman and within us is born the desire to be like him. Unfortunately the opposite attitude of crudeness and discourtesy is also contagious. We desire to possess what we see, to imitate an act, to follow an example because these things are vivid and concrete. They fill the mind and take possession of the mechanism which controls and directs our conduct.

The child is more strongly dominated by his environment and wants what he sees more strongly than the grown man because he has fewer counter-suggestions and a less strongly integrated personality to interfere with the suggestion produced by seeing something desirable.

Why we do what we do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, and send stamped envelope for reply.

The table was very attractive with its central flat bowl filled with holly and wreathed with silver dusted red tulle and its red candles in silver holders. Miss Cora Clark was in charge of tea arrangements, assisted by Miss Caroline Littlefield, Miss Violet McKeown, Miss Isabel Connolly, and Miss Cathleen McCarthy.

MINCEMEAT

(Contributed by Mrs. W. J. E. B.)

Dear Marion:

The following is a recipe for an inexpensive mincemeat which I have used for several years, and it is good. I had thought of sending this before I saw the request, but thought you would probably be flooded with recipes for mincemeat. However, here it is.

Chop 1 lb. of raisins in coarse bits, or put through food chopped, add 1 lb. of currants, 1 lb. of brown sugar, 1 lb. of finely chopped suet, 1 quart of chopped sour apples; ¼ lb. mixed candied peel. Add 4 teaspoons of mixed pastry spice, then ½ pint of good cider and mix well. This keeps good for a long time.

FAVORITE RECIPE.

PICKLING SILVER SKIN ONIONS.

(Contributed by Mrs. Mt. Julian.)

Put onions in a pan and pour boiling water over them. Peel and put in a crock. When all are placed in crock sprinkle a little salt on them; cover with boiling water, and then cover closely to keep in the steam. In the morning drain and cover again with salt and boiling water. Do this for three mornings. The third morning, cover with boiling white vinegar, sweeten to taste and add a few small red peppers. Cover closely and let stand until the second day. Then drain vinegar off. Re-heat and pour over onions again. When cold they may be bottled as desired. These are delicious, better than the boughten pickles.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

An acquaintance of mine who has just come home from a two years' residence in France says that she is trying to bear in mind that Americans are not much given to shaking hands. Her impulse now is to shake hands with everyone she meets, whenever and wherever she meets them. Sometimes, she says, her own hand goes flopping in the air because the person whose hand she expected to find outstretched before her never even thought of performing that little gesture.

Continentals generally are much more given to shaking hands than we are. If you have traveled abroad you may recall that English folk on the contrary are usually even more reticent than we are about it. Recently I had a business call to make on a cultivated Austrian whom I had never even met before. He rose from his desk as I entered, bowed ceremoniously, and shook my hand as cordially as he could have done had I been an old family friend. Yet his manner and speech during our brief business transaction were decidedly formal. Then when I rose to go he again rose, shook hands and bowed again.

In this country the rule is that when a man and woman meet it is for the woman to decide whether or not it is an occasion for hand shaking. Some women I know think it is rather bad form to shake hands under ordinary circumstances. It is, however, always perfectly correct for the hostess to shake hands with men guests, whether she instructs her daughters to do the same or not. To most Americans there is something rather crude about ostentatious hand shaking in public.

And here is a bit of etiquette concerning which mothers ought to inform their sons—in case father forgets or really doesn't know the correct procedure. 'A man tries never to shake hands with a woman with his gloves on. If, however, a woman offers her hand when he does not have an opportunity to remove his glove—he takes his part in the friendly gesture, withoutm aking matters worse by saying "Please pardon my glove."

The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion (Copyright)

CHRISTMAS surely is a merry time! When you go down George street, just think of all the happy joyous throng—pushing this way and that—but everyone cheerful. But then, who couldn't be at this glorious season of the year?

• • •

That reminds me of one of the stories Which appeared in the Christmas Number. The bachelor in mention couldn't content himself until he went out and spent some money for toys for some poor children!

• • •

I heard a woman explain last night, "Well, you would be a pretty selfish person in this world if you weren't making sacrifices. First it's for your own family, then somebody else's family. If you haven't a family of your own, there are always strangers."

• • •

I am sure we would forget the spirit of giving if we didn't have this season coming around every year. True we do give on birthdays and some holidays, but there isn't the same spirit with the giving, is there?

• • •

The wrapping of the gift package counts a great deal doesn't it? I am sure you appreciate just a little more the gift which comes daintily wrapped in colored paper and tied with tinsel cord or raffia.

• • •

Then we have the home-made holiday cards. If there is an artist in the family get him to decorate some for you. They certainly add individuality to the gift.

• • •

The verses may be composed for each gift, which makes it unique. I ran across some the other day and I thought they might come in useful for some of our readers.

With a Box of Writing Paper.
An Indian giver I'm hoping to be,
Because—if my hint doesn't fail—
I'll find that my gift is returning to me
Whenever I look at my mail!

With a Handkerchief.
A very useful gift indeed,
You doubtless will concede it,
And yet I send it with the wish
That you may never need it!

With a Shaving Set.
In the journey of life,
When you've dangers to brave,
May you always be lucky
And have "a close shave."

With a Pocket Book.
I've written for a magic spell
And when the fairies send it,
This purse is going to be so full
Of gold you'll never spend it.

With a Useful Gift.
I's "not to be opened till Christmas"
But after the gift has been found,
Don't put it away as a keepsake
But use it the whole year round.

With a Flashlight.
When you haven't any matches
And you cannot see a star,
May this "brighten the corner
Where—you—are."

With Lingerie Clasps.
You think that these are only meant
To clasp your lingerie
But they are really friendship clasps
To link your thoughts to me.

With Knife or Scissors.
"If you love me as I love you,"
So goes the olden rhyme,
"No knife could cut our love in two."
Which really sounds sublime.

So take this gift without alarm,
Though I'd be more content
If you would heed a mystic charm
And buy it with a cent.

With a Necktie.
To exceed your friendly greetings
I really couldn't try,
So we'll say that we are even,
And call the score a "tie."

With a Surprise.
Tell me what this package holds,
Speak in half a minute,
If you want the little gift
You should find within it.
(If you cannot guess it now,
You may have it anyhow.)

With a Hand-made Gift.
Every stick that's plain o'view
Marks my pleasant thought of you;
Every stick you cannot see
Adds another—all from me.

With a Bag.
Fill this bag with what you will
Many things or few;
Naught can crowd the wishes out
Packed inside for you.

An Acrostic.
M is for Merriment, ringing so clear,
A is for All that is jolly and pleasant.
S is for Santa who sends you this present.

With a Smoking Set.
May most delightful reveries
Your pipe of peace envoke,
And all the unpleasant memories
Go quickly "up in smoke."

With a Ring.
With many golden wishes
This little ring I send,
A token of regard that like
A circle has no end.

With a New Year's Remembrance.
If Christmas is for old friends,
Then New Year's is for new;
Here's good luck to both beginning—
Year and friendship too.

Unless they actually think that Santa Claus brings the Christmas tree decorations as well as the presents I am sure they will enjoy helping to make them at home.

This week's circular tells how to make a number of Christmas tree decorations that your children can help to make. There are suggestions for a number of Christmas favors also that can be made at very small cost. If you would like a copy of this circular, please send me the coupon.

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WIT H THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHOR'S CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

There's no particular reason for printing the extract I have selected for to-day except the excuse of its own worth. Whether the neighbors are young or old they will find interest in Cicero's discourse.

DECEMBER 10, 1928.

ON OLD AGE

When I consider the several causes which are usually supposed to constitute the infelicity of old age, they may be reduced, I think, under four general articles. It is alleged that it incapacitates a man for acting in the affairs of the world; that it produces great infirmities of body; that it disqualifies him for the enjoyment of the sensual gratifications; and that it brings him within the immediate verge of death. Let us therefore, if you please, examine the force and validity of each of these particular charges.

Old age, it seems, disqualifies us from taking an active part in the great scenes of business. But in what scenes? let me ask. If in those which require the strength and vivacity of youth, I readily admit the charge; but are there no other—none which are peculiarly appropriated to the evening of life, and which, being executed by the powers of the mind, are perfectly consistent with a less vigorous state of body? Did Quintus Maximus, then, pass the latter end of his long life in total inactivity! Tell me, Scipio, was your father, and my son's father-in-law, the excellent Paulus Lucius,—were the Fabricii, the Curii, the Coruncanii,—utterly bereaved of all useful energy, when they supported the interests of the republic by the wisdom of their counsels, and the influence of their respectable authority? . . . Nothing can be more void of foundation than to assert that old age necessarily disqualifies a man for the great affairs of the world. As well might it be affirmed that the pilot is totally useless and unengaged in the business of the ship, because, while the rest of the crew are more actively employed in their respective departments, he sits quietly at the helm and directs its motions. If in the great scenes of business an old man cannot perform a part which requires the force and energy of vigorous years, he can act, however, in a nobler and more important character. It is not by exertions of corporeal strength and activity that the momentous affairs of state are conducted; it is by cool deliberation, by prudent counsel, and by that authoritative influence which ever attends on public esteem,—qualifications which are so far from being impaired, that they are usually strengthened and improved by increase of years. . . .

If you look into the history of foreign nations, you will find frequent instances of flourishing communities which, after having been well-nigh ruined by the impetuous measures of young and inexperienced statesmen, have been restored to their former glory by the prudent administration of more discreet years. "Tell me," says one of the personages in that dramatic piece of Navelus called "The School," addressing himself to a citizen of a certain republic, "tell me whence it happened that so considerable a state as yours has thus suddenly fallen into decay?" The person questioned assigned several reasons; but the principal was that a swarm of rash, unpracticed young orators had unhappily broken forth, and taken the lead amongst them. Temerity, indeed, is the usual characteristic of youth, as prudence is of old age.

But it is further urged that old age impairs the memory. This effect, I confess, it may probably have on those memories which were originally infirm, or whose native vigor has not been preserved by a proper exercise; but is there any reason to suppose that Themistocles, who had so strong a memory that he knew the name of every citizen in the commonwealth, lost this retentive power as his years increased, and addressed Aristides, for instance, by the appellation of Lysimachus? . . . I never yet heard of any veteran whose memory was so weakened by time as to forget where he had concealed his treasure. The aged, indeed, seem to be at no loss in remembering whatever is the principal object of their attention: and few there are at that period of life who cannot really call to mind what recognizances they have entered into, or with whom they have had any pecuniary transactions. Innumerable instances of a strong memory in advanced years might be produced from among our celebrated lawyers, pontiffs, augurs, and philosophers; for the faculties of the mind will preserve their powers in old age, unless they are suffered to lose their energy and become languid for want of due cultivation. And the truth of this observation may be confirmed not only by those examples I have mentioned from the more active and splendid stations of the world, but from instances equally frequent in the paths of studious and retired life. . . .

The next imputation thrown on old age is, that it impairs our strength; and it must be acknowledged the charge is not altogether without foundation. But, for my own part, I no more regret the want of that vigor which I possessed in my youth, than I lamented in my youth that I was not endowed with the force of a bull or an elephant. It is sufficient if we exert with spirit, on every proper occasion, that degree of strength which still remains with us. Nothing can be more truly contemptible than a circumstance which is related concerning the famous Milo of Croton. This man, when he had become old, observing a set of athletic combatants that were exercising themselves in the public circus, "Alas!" said he, bursting into a flood of tears and stretching forth his arm, "Alas! these muscles totally relaxed and impotent." Frivolous old man! It was not so much the debility of thy body as the weakness of thy mind thou hadst reason to lament; as it was by the force of mere animal prowess, and not by those superior excellences which truly ennoble man, that thou hadst rendered thy name famous. Never, I am well persuaded, did a lamentation of this unworthy kind escape the mouth of Corunganius, or Aelius, or the late Publius Crassus: men whose consummate abilities in the science of jurisprudence were generously laid out for the common benefit of their fellow-citizens, and whose superior strength of understanding continued in all its force and vigor to the conclusion of their numerous years. . . .

As to those effects which are the necessary and natural evils attendant on long life, it imports us to counteract their progress by a constant and resolute opposition, and to combat the infirmities of old age as we would resist the approach of a disease. To this end we should be regularly attentive to the article of health, use moderate exercise, and neither eat nor drink more than is necessary for repairing our strength, without oppressing the organs of digestion. Nor is this all: the intellectual faculties must likewise be assisted by proper care, as well as those of body; for powers of the body, like the flame in a lamp, will become languid and extinct by time, if not duly and regularly recruited. Indeed, the mind and body equally thrive by a suitable exertion of their powers; with this difference, however, that bodily exercise ends in fatigue, whereas the mind is never wearied by its activity. . . . He who fills up every hour of his life in such kind of labors and pursuits as those I have mentioned, will insensibly glide into old age without perceiving its arrival; and his powers, instead of being suddenly and prematurely extinguished, will gradually decline by the gentle and natural effect of accumulated years.

Let us now proceed to examine the third article of complaint against old age, as bereaving us, it seems, of the sensual gratifications. Happy effect, indeed, if it deliver us from those snares which allure youth into some of the worst vices to which that age is addicted! Inestimable surely are the advantages of old age, if we consider it as delivering us from the tyranny of lust and ambition; from the angry and contentious passions; from every inordinate and irrational desire; in a word, as teaching us to retire within ourselves, and look for happiness in our own bosoms. If to these moral benefits, naturally resulting from length of days, be added that sweet food of the mind which is gathered in the fields of science, I know not any season of life that is passed more agreeably than the learned leisure of a virtuous old age. . . .

It remains only to consider the fourth and last imputation on that period of life at which I am arrived: Old age, it seems, must necessarily be a state of much anxiety and disquietude, from the near approach of death. That the hour of dissolution cannot possibly be far distant from an old man is most undoubtedly certain: but unhappy indeed must he be if in so long a course of years he has yet to learn that there is nothing in that circumstance which can reasonably alarm his fears: on the contrary, it is an event either utterly to be disregarded, if it extinguish the soul's existence; or much to be wished, if it convey her to some region where she shall continue to exist forever. One of those two consequences must necessarily follow the disunion of the soul and body: there is no other possible alternative. What, then, have I to fear, if after death I shall either not be miserable, or shall certainly be happy? But, after all, is there any man, how young soever he may be, who can be so weak as to promise himself, with confidence, that he shall live even till night? In fact, young people are more exposed to mortal accidents than even the aged: they are also not only more liable to natural diseases, but, as they are generally attacked by them in a more violent manner, are obliged to obtain their cure, if they happen to recover, by a more painful course of medical operations. Hence it is that there are but few among mankind who arrive at old age; and this (to remark it by the way) will suggest a reason why the affairs of the world are no better conducted: for age brings along with it experience, discretion, and judgment, without which no well-formed government could have been established, or can be maintained. But, not to wander from the point under our present consideration, why should death be deemed an evil peculiarly impending on old age, when daily experience proves that it is common to every other period of human life

"Dear Marion:

It was with difficulty that I resisted the temptation to nail my pen name and accept a year's subscription to The Examiner from Mr. Glover, but my innate modesty at length prevailed and I remain incognito.

The scene at our house was uproarious when the family learned that the letter signed 'Cinders' was written by mother. We all laughed together until tears rolled down our cheeks at the thought of 'mother' and 'Cinders.'

However, I feel as if the name is really mine by right. It happened this way: I have always kept a very careful eye on the coal bin and it broke my frugal heart to see coal going out via the ash can. So as a great joke the younger members of the family bought one of the old-fashioned, long-handled ash sifters (it cost them fifty cents, I learned afterwards) and after doing it up carefully in tissue paper and red and silver ribbon, put it on the Christmas tree (notice that I wrote 'Christmas,' not 'Xmas,' Marion). You can imagine the fun we had over it, but the joke did not end there, as I've used it religiously ever since, much to their disgust.

Now, Marion, I don't know just how the other women feel about the removal of those guns from the park but I certainly feel indignant, but scarcely more so than I did when they were plastered with gray paint. It certainly was a case of 'gilding the lily.' I feel that I have a right to speak, as nearly all my male relatives were at the front and some didn't come back. One brother spent nearly three years in a German prison camp and is still a wreck from gas poisoning. Those captured German guns, still covered with their original camouflage, were a source of inspiration and pride and we need and want to look at them often.

One other word, Marion, and I am through. I noticed your answer to 'Lonesome Blue Eyes' and think your advice for the use of the shingle is good. It is too bad it is not more prevalent, used with discretion, of course. Please do not let us demean our page with letters of that calibre, Marion. Let us keep it edifying and wholesome.

Sincerely yours,
CINDERS."

I'm certainly glad to learn the origin of your pen-name, "Cinders," and hope the family clubs together this Christmas to put a really up-to-date sifter on the tree—seeing that you are so set on using one. You HAVE a right to that name!

About the guns, what did you think of my suggestion that they should be again camouflaged and then periodically coated with some transparent preservative? The gray paint is not MY idea of beautifying the square!

In any case, there are things more important than beauty. Nothing can replace memories, and, even if they are at times poignant, memories are good for all of us.

Poor "Lonesome Blue Eyes"! She seems to receive not much sympathy on our page. Perhaps some day we may get someone to conduct a lovelorn column, but in the meantime our page is neighborly only.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

I am a stranger to your column and also to your city but thought I would like to let you know how interesting and enjoyable 'Marion's Mail' is to me.

We moved to this city in September and a week later I was overtaken with an illness which has kept me in bed almost ever since. Lately, I am glad to say, I am able to sit up 'part time.'

The reader's letters are all quite interesting. Of course, 'Thinker's' letter was a real joke in its absurdity. However, we women need not worry as we know that all GENUINE THINKERS, whether men or women, know better than to be influenced by his statements.

Surely 'Thinker' is lucky enough to have made the acquaintances of some women other than those who sit on cushioned chairs.

Thanking you for space and also for your interesting paper, I am,
Sincerely yours,
A SHUT IN."

Welcome to Peterborough, "Shut-In," and I'm sure the neighbors join me in hoping that you soon recover so that you may be up "full time."

"Thinker's" letter WAS funny, but the tragedy is I think he wrote the truth as he saw it. It's too bad there should be men who linger under that mistaken idea about women.

When you're sitting up, "Shut-In," use some of your time to write the neighbors a long letter.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

Many thanks for helps received some time ago. Find enclosed coupon for other helps, also some recipes to help.

We are enjoying the page, it is wonderful. The poems daily are a wonderful addition. The page is so full of a number of good things, I am sure we shall all be as happy as kings.

City. A. M. M."

I'm very glad that you find our page enjoyable, and that you like the new column. Won't you send along a suggestion for it?

• • •

"Dear Marion: A line to thank you for publishing my letter. I had fears about it, but you were better unto me than all my fears; thanks also for your kindly footnote. I am humbly thankful if any little word of mine has helped lift another's burden. There are many such, particularly those who serve the public, which is not always the rosy job it looks.

I am enclosing a few little items I have copied out of some little books I have. If they are useful for your 'New Column' any time you happen to get stuck, or out of 'classical' material, then perhaps you will like to fall back on them.

With all kind wishes for your continued success, I am,
Yours very truly, WATER LILY."

Thanks very much for your nice letter, and for the extracts you sent, "Water Lily." I can use the encouragement right now, and I'm sure the quotations will come in handy some time.

• • •

"Dear Marion:

I hope you will consider the enclosed good enough to print in your Christmas number.

Yours sincerely,
City. EVE."

Your name has been booked, "Eve," but it just runs in my mind there is some one else using the same pen-name. In that event one of you will have to register as "Eve II."

How did you like the appearance of your story in print?

• • •

"Dear Marion:

You were speaking the other evening about runners in your stockings. I wonder if you ever tried mending them on the sewing machine? Turn the stocking wrong side out and stitch up the runner. You will find a much neater job than if done by hand, and it only takes a minute or two to do it.

If the mother with the berry stains would pour boiling water over the spots before she puts the linens in the wash she will have no trouble keeping them looking nice. But it must be done before it is put in the wash water as the soap sets the stain and it is then much harder to get out.

Please send me this week's help: Christmas Gifts to Make at Home.

Hoping that these hints may help some one, I remain,
City. MABEL."

Thanks very much, "Mabel," for the hints you send. I'm sure the neighbors will appreciate them as much as I do.

• • •

'Dear Marion:

I live on the outskirts of the town but I always get The Examiner and your page is my favorite. You certainly give excellent advice to girls who think they are in love. Imagine being in love at 16. That's outrageous. Doesn't Freckles write a lovely letter? But I think her rather silly to call that writer 'Orchid' 'an ass' (Poor French as she says). I think she uses disagreeable langurage. Don't you?

Will you kindly print a good recipe for taffy? Not pulled taffy but the unpulled kind. My girls are 16 and 17 but thank goodness not foolish. Sincerely yours,
MRS. R. E. D."

Will some neighbor send a recipe for the taffy?

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

INCREASING YOUR BILE FLOW.

One of the little lessons I learned in public school physiology was that the bile manufactured by the liver not only broke up the fats for digestion but had an antiseptic power also. This means that when foods that are not just as fresh as they should be, or if the intestinal contents contain harmful organisms, the bile will destroy these organisms or other poisonous matter.

That is if the bile is in sufficient amount and strength to do so. Now, if the liver is doing its work properly, manufacturing plenty of bile, and that bile is going into the small intestine just at the same point as the food from the stomach, you can see what a good chance the bile has to get at this food at the very beginning of digestion in the small intestine.

Then, as it accompanies the food down the small intestine and into the large intestine, it stimulates movement as it goes along, and this prevents waste matter from remaining in one spot too long.

Bile is so valuable to that body of yours that if there is any lack of it there is not only going to be indigestion and gas pressure but a possibility of ulcer at beginning of the small intestine.

Dr. L. Jarno, of Berlin, has been experimenting on patients whose liver is not manufacturing enough bile, and he finds that by giving bile-beef bile—made up in the form of pills, that he is able to get much of the effect of the patient's own bile.

However, what you want to know is how to help your liver to make enough good bile for your needs, and how to get that bile flowing into the intestine from the liver and gall-bladder.

First, in addition to vegetables and fruits, see that you get plenty of eggs, milk, cream, and butter. This will help liver to make the bile.

This is done by exercise; bending exercises or any exercise that makes you breathe deeply because the lungs go down and press against the liver when you breathe deeply. A good brisk walk will usually be sufficient, that is, if it is brisk enough to make you breathe deeply.

FIRE-PLACE PAN.

If cleaning the fire place is such a chore you shrink from having fires often, why not measure it and have a pan made to catch the ashes. They can be made inexpensively at foundries, of tin, or even brass, with the back and slides two inches high and the front open so they will scarcely show.

KING GEORGE HAS UNDISTURBED DAY

Queen Visits Her Son

Queen Mary, who had remained at the Palace during the whole day Saturday and did not take her customary drive out, was yesterday evidently more satisfied with the condition of her consort, and ventured a visit to the residence of the Duke and Duchess of York in Piccadilly. She stayed there for luncheon, the first time since the King was taken ill that she has taken a meal away from the Palace.

On her return in the afternoon she had as visitors to tea the Marquess and Marchioness of Cambridge. The Queen and other members of the private chapel of the Palace in the morning.

Dr. L. E. H. Whitby, bacteriologist, who made an examination of the King in the early stages of his illness, called at the palace last night. He remained for ninety minutes in consultation with Sir Stanley and Lord Dawson, but did not visit the bedside of the Royal patient.

Sir Stanley will sleep at the Palace last night, as he has done for the past week.

Less Public Anxiety

Public anxiety about the King was yesterday much less than last Monday, which was perhaps the most anxious day in the whole course of the illness, but it was sufficient to attract many hundreds of persons to wait in front of the Palace for the issuance of both morning and evening bulletins. Yesterday was the coldest yet experienced in London this season, the temperature being a few degrees below the freezing point, with the parks were covered with frost. The weather however, remains bright and sunny.

will be as one in the defence of our country."

He was loudly cheered and then President Roman Paz of Congress, spoke:

"I have been deeply moved by this demonstration of patriotism," he said. "The legislative bodies will collaborate with President Siles until victory is assured. We will obtain sovereignty of our rivers, which have always been ours."

The note sent to Charge d'Affaires Elias Ayala of Paraguay Saturday with his diplomatic passport has been made public. It read: "In the absence of the Foreign Minister, I have been instructed by my Government to tell you in reply to your note of December 7 that official advices received in the Foreign Office prove without any doubt that the clash between Paraguayan and Bolivian forces near Fort Galpon took place in a very much different way from that described in your note.

"In view of this insolent attitude I have been instructed by my Government to send you your diplomatic passport, which is attached to this note. You must leave the capital on the train which leaves Viacha station at 4 p.m. An official of the Foreign Office will accompany you to give you all facilities and guarantees for your safe conduct.

(Signed) "Marino Zambriana, Acting Foreign Minister."

WASHINGTON, December 10. — The Paraguayan Legation here announced Sunday that its government had interrupted diplomatic relations with Bolivia, following the latter's action yesterday in handing the Paraguayan Charge d'Affaires at La Paz his passport.

"The Paraguayan Legation," the statement said, "received a communi that when its own Charge de Affstating that whe nits Charge de Affaires called on the Bolivian Government to present to the latter a request for the convocation of an investigating Commission, as provided in the treaty for the prevention of international conflicts, signed at the fifth Pan-American Congress, the Bolivian Government presetned him with his passport, with the order to leave immediately the territory of the said country.

"In the face of such an attitude the Government of Paraguay saw itself obliged to proceed in the same manner toward the diplomatic representative of Bolivia in Paraguay, presenting him in turn with his passport."

CAR SKIDS ON NORWOOD ROAD

Three Occupants In Autumobile When It Plunges Into Deep Ditch

NO ONE WAS HURT

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 10 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Three people had a narrow escape from serious injury yesterday afternoon when the car in which they were riding skidded on the slippery road and plunged into a deep ditch on the Norwood road about twelve miles east of Peterborough. Arthur Campbell of Campbellford, who was driving the car, said that he tried to hold the car from going too fast to turn the corner at the bottom of the hill, and suddenly it began to skid and he could not hold it on the road. He had left Peterborough driving a roadster, the property of Mrs. Athouse of Healey Falls. Mrs. Althouse and her daughter were with him. They were coming to Campbellford where Campbell would get his own car and return to Peterborough. Just as their car topped the rise, Campbell noticed the reverse curve at the bottom and tied to apply the brake just enough to hold the car from gaining speed on the down grade. But it started to skid, became unmanageable and finally took to the ditch just at the foot of the hill. No one was hurt, and with the exception of the right rear wheel, which was broken, the car was not damaged. Repair men from Peterborough were summoned.

The accident happened shortly after four o'clock in the afternoon.

BIG SNOWFALL NEAR LINDSAY

HEAVY IN HALIBURTON

LINDSAY, Dec. 10. —(Special).— While Lindsay is enjoying veritable fall weather, with an almost entire absence of the snow, the surrounding country is covered with a heavy mantle. Friday night a veritable blizzard hit Coboconk and vicinity and after it had subsided it was found to be between eighteen and twenty inches of snow on the level. Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon received a copious supply which ushered in good sleighing, but in some parts of the county the fall was so heavy that snowplows were requisitioned in order to keep the roads open. In Haliburton County the fall was particularly heavy, and commercial men who motored to the highlands cut their business trips short and hastened out of the storm area. Visitors from Washago today reported a tow foot snowfall in that district.

Backache

After ten months of suffering—after spending many dollars on other remedies—this woman gave Kruschen a trial. Now read what she says :—

"I am just writing a few words of praise in which the wonderful way your Kruschen Salts have helped me. May I say I have suffered with terrific backaches night and day for this last 10 months, and have spent many dollars on advertised remedies, without result, and decided a few weeks ago to give Kruschen Salts a trial, and I am thankful to say I am feeling better and better ever since I have taken them.

"I take Kruschen on rising, and if only people knew they would not spend the money they do on other materials when they could derive such benefit from Kruschen Salts. Wishing your firm every success." Mrs. J. V. F.

tions, and it is the exception which works mischief and makes the need greater for Christianity.

The Eskimos bring in a million dollars worth of fur each year, which proves a big item in our revenue. The country is barren and lacks vegetation, but gold, coal, zinc, mica, and graphite are to be found, and when developed will mean a big thing commercially. The airplanes went from Hudson's Bay to Mackenzie River last year, and next year it is expected that they will reach Coppermine River. Last year the Baker Lake Mission was established, west of Chesterfield Inlet.

The speaker has just returned from an 11,000 mile trip in the Western Arctic—it is a great country; Victoria Island is as big as England. Last year the Archdeacon took a tour through the Eastern Arctic, where Ben and Sam come from. The pictures shown were moving pictures of this latter trip, in five reels; between the third and fourth reels a series of still pictures were shown, showing an Eskimo building a snow house, each picture showing a new stage of the work.

The trip began at Montreal when the speaker set sail on the ice breaker Nascopie, a ship specially built for the perils and dangers of northern navigation where for many miles the journey is made through floating hummocks of ice and the stately and dangerous icebergs are numerous. Sam comes from Baffin's Land and Ben from Southampton Island.

Proud of Flag.

The trip went as far north as Pond's Inlet, the most northerly trading post on the continent, where there is a mission, a Hudon's Bay post, and a French company, also traders. This post is far beyond the Arctic Circle. Calls were made at Scott's Inlet, Frobisher Bay, Cumberland Sound, Fort Cheerio, in Ungava Bay, Chesterfield Inlet, Southampton Island, and other points, ending at Halifax. The Eskimos are very proud of their flag and loyal to their King, and when we remember that their flag and King are our flag and King, the title of the pictures, "Our Canadian Eskimo," brings with it a sense of responsibility and obligation in connection with these people. The pictures showed the barren land, treeless and bleak, but there are many outposts, Hudson's Bay, Royal Canadian Mounted Ponce, and missions where white men are serving King and country, and surely it is our duty in our sheltered land to send generously of help to spread the Gospel of Jesus Christ to these people, who deserve to be considered among our good citizens.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Musterole relieves the congestion and stimulates circulation. It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

First you feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief. Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

MEMORIAL FUND IS OPEN FOR DONATIONS

Contributions Are Coming In Slowly For Lakefield's New Cenotaph.

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 10.—Contributions are coming in to the Lakefield War Memorial fund and while things are not moving very quickly, it is perhaps owing to the fact that many who wish to help this worthy cause cannot give large sums and hesitate about giving small contributions. The idea is to have as many as possible share in this community cenotaph. When erected it will stand for all time a monument to those who answered their country's call and gave all, even life itself, in service to king and country. It will be a reminder to the men who came back that the sacrifice of Lakefield's soldier sons is recognized and honored and to all who pass by it will stand for perpetual remembrance and to posterity it will be a precious heritage. The amount of the contribution may be left to the giver and his or her conscience but no sum is too small to be added to the growing list and no contribution can possibly be large enough to be really worthy of the great cause. A great deal is said these days about service and the proposed war memorial will simply be a recognition of service and sacrifice for God, for King and Country.

Subscriptions to date are:—

Mrs. W. M. Graham $200; Lakefield Post. B.E.S.L., $100; Hon. G. N. Gordon, $25; Rev. J. J. Garvey, $10; A friend, $50; Clarence Duff, $2; A. W. Burrows, $3; Dickson's Store, $3; W. Clysdale, $1; F. H. Lingwood, $5; Mrs. A. E. Kennedy, $3.—$401.00.

He saves

MILLIONS

THIS GENTLEMAN is busy "talking telephones to death"—which is merely a way of saying that he is testing their transmission qualities.

He is a worker in the telephone research laboratories. He has a rack of telephone transmitters and a phonograph. He "talks them to death" by means of the phonograph to see whether the transmitters give satisfactory results.

There have been 95 different types of transmitters and 64 different receivers to obtain the instrument you are using today. And men are at work now to find one still better.

IN THE NEXT ROOM another man is using an apparatus which rubs a piece of telephone cord back and forth until it frays.

He is seeking a better cord. He is the man who found that the brown cord in your telephone today wears better than the green cord you used to have. You may not have noticed the change from green to brown but it has saved hundreds of thousands of dollars for telephone users.

That is the business of these gentlemen—to make a better telephone and save money in doing it.

THERE ARE NEARLY five thousand of them at work in the Bell Telephone Laboratories — the largest telephone research laboratories in the world — and the Bell Telephone Company of Canada owns a contract giving access to all the work they do.

That is why your telephone system now has the ingenious device known as the "loading coil" which transmits messages over wires fine as human hair. It used to be necessary to have heavy wires, increasing in size with distance. The heavy wires were costly. The loading coil has saved millions in telephone costs.

The underground cables developed in recent years are another of a score of similar benefits. They have wires to carry a vastly greater number of messages than they used to, but they are so compact and so efficient that they can be pulled through the original underground ducts. If cables and ducts had to be increased in size with the vast new traffic the costs of telephoning would climb sky-high.

THE NEW CABLES, like the brown cord and the loading coil, mean millions of dollars saved. These dollars are dollars in your pocket. Your telephone is being connected with thousands of new telephones across the country every week yet this increased value does not cost you more because costs are successfully offset by the economies which research accomplishes.

The gentleman testing the transmitter and the five thousand working in the laboratories with him are saving money for you every day and keeping the telephone adequate to serve the needs of Canadian progress.

Published by The Bell Telephone Company of Canada to tell you something about the telephone business and the people in it.

Regina Pats Are Junior C. R. U. Champions

WESTERN RUGBY CREW DEFEATS SAINT THOMAS BY 9 TO 6 COUNT

FIRST TIME WEST HAS EVER WON DOMINION RUGBY CHAMPIONSHIP

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—The Regina Pats and their officials left here at noon yesterday for Toronto, where they entrain to-day for their homes in the west, taking with them the Dominion junior C.R.U. title, won in a sudden death fixture here Saturday by a score of 9 to 6 from the St. Thomas Tigers. The Westerners are worthy champions and although the touch down that won the game was the result of a luckly break the general opinion is that the better team won. The light and speedy Tigers were a match for the heavy Westerners in the early part of the game but the visitors soon wore down their defence and they became unable to hold the champions.

This is the first time that the West has ever won a Dominion rugby title and it is expected that the victory will boom the grid iron game in the west. Next year the champions of Eastern Canada will have to go out to Regina if they want to get back their own. St. Thomas has hopes of achieving that goal some day as they have advanced steadily in the junior series. Two years ago they won the Ontario title but lost it to Montreal. This year however, they eliminated Montreal for the eastern Canada title and almost beat Regina for the Dominion championship.

Pats Overcame Lead

To win the national honors the Pats overcame a six-point lead in the game here Saturday. Fate favored the Tigers in the early part of the game and they, too, scored a freak touch-down in the first quarter, and Captain Stirling added another point by a dead line kick. But the Pats werent to be denied' and throwing their weight at the Tigers they swept up and down the field in the last half and added nine points which won the game. As predicted, it was the closest Dominion final ever staged since east has met west. The Regina Pats are rightful holders of the Atlantic-Pacific junior grid honors.

Arriving here last Friday the Regina Pats were treated royally by the city. A theatre party was staged Friday night, and after the game Saturday, the Regina Pats were guests of honor at a big banquet. Hal de Gruchy of Toronto; Coach Al Ritchie of the Pats; Captain Summer Stirling; Mayor William Stokes and others spoke. Coach Al Ritchie waxed eloquent in a splendid speech on the gridiron game and praised the sportsmanship of the Tigers who lost like real heroes. Hal de Gruchy thanked St. Thomas for allowing Reginas to use the junior players who had participated in the senior game against the Hamilton Tigers a week previous. This was necessary in order that both Dominion play-offs could be staged, he said. After the banquet there was a dance. A few of the players were suffering slightly from injuries when they left, but not serious.

BUFFALO SCORES SECOND VICTORY

FORT ERIE, December 10. Canadian Press. — After a six game losing streak Buffalo scored its second victory in two successive days in Canadian professional hockey league play, when, Saturday night, Percy London Panthers, 2-1, on the Bison's home ice in Fort Erie.

Thirteen minutes after the opening Primeau bounded the puck off Goalie Norfolk's skates and Foxwrothy rode in to hammer it home for the first score.

A wicked shot from Carl Voss's stick at centre ice, caught Norfolk on the left cheek, dangerously close to the eye, and forced him from the game, Bill Taugher going to the strings. This seemed to spur the Bisons to harder efforts, for Hughes taking the puck from his own territory went through the entire Panther defence, circled the net and eluded Joey Ironstone for the tying score. Time of the play was 16 minutes. Two minutes later, Brydson got the puck, and working a beautiful combination with Rolly Huard, who dexterously handled the stick, worked the rubber to the London net where Brydson drove it home. Hughes also sparkled in this play, going up in a defensive capacity for the passing duo.

Ironstone stood out for London, as twice, with only three men in front of him, he successfully protected the goal against what seemed certain Bison scores. "Speedy" Desy, procured from Providence of the Canadian-American group, made his debut with Buffalo in the secondary forward line and lived up to his name.

GEORGETTI-SPENCER WIN BICYCLE HONORS

Famous Team Crosses Winning Line One Lap Ahead of Field

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Fittingly enough it was a pair of champions that won New York's international six day bicycle race.

Fighting off every attempt to oust them from the lead Franco Georgetti and Freddy Spencer, crossed the finish line at Madison Square Garden Saturday night, a lap ahead of the field, a margin they had held continuously since Thursday night. Thus were added new laurels to Spencer, the United States sprint champion, who incidentally hails from Toronto, and Georgetti, the United States motor-paced title holder.

Second place went to the red-shirted Frenchmen Alfred Letourcer and Paul Brocarddo. Reffie McNamara, the famous "Iron Man" and Klas Van Nek, the giant Hollander, were third, a lap behind Letourner and Brocardo and 331 sprint points ahead of 18 year old Jimmy Galthour and 22 year old Franz Doulberg, who tied them in mileage.

Georgetti and Spencer covered 2,290 miles, 9 laps. Nine of the original 15 teams finished.

SENATORS DEFE AT LEAFS 2-1 TO TIE FOR GROUP LEADERSHIP

FASTEST GAME OF SEASON

Nighbor is Outstanding For Winners—Bailey Does Well

TORONTO, Dec. 10.—A long dropping shot from mid-ice by George Boucher after nearly six and a half minutes play in the overtime period on Saturday night gave the Ottawa Senators a 2 to 1 victory over the Maple Leafs after the fastest and best played game that has been staged here this season by National League clubs. The all-important lift by the Senators' captain, one of many that were made in the extra ten minutes, gave the visitors a somewhat lucky victory but it brought in its train quite a number of developments, so close is the race in the Canadian section of the major loop.

Up until the start of the overtime the pace had been a swift one and on the whole the Leafs seemed to have a slight edge and, but for the hardest of luck on a couple of occasions when Cox and Bailey hit the goal post with Connell beaten on the plays, would have won without the bargain session that was thrown in as a reward to pre-Christmas shoppers. As soon as the extra time started the pace slackened down and both teams appeared more or less content to make individual rushes with long range sniping at the opposing citadel. These efforts were more or less easy for the two custodians and with less than four minutes to play it looked as if the teams would reach the seventy minutes maximum with the score deadlocked.

Boucher made a rush half-way down the ice and lofted one in the general direction of the goal. Chabot saw the shot coming and played it, but just as the puck descended to the ice in front of the locals' goal it turned on its edge and angled off. The disc hit Chabot's stock but caromed into the twine. From then on the Leafs tried hard for the equalizer but the sudden reverse seemed to disorganize them and while several plays started in a promising manner they petered out when they reached the Senators' defensive area.

The teams:

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F. D. C.

The thrilling battle in which the Peterborough hockey club of 1902 defeated the Port Hope Ontarios and started their march to the first intermediate championship ever won by a local team was described on Saturday.

To-day let us glance back at the memorable series with Galt in the O.H.A. finals when Captain Rollie Glover and his fighting team, after being held to a 4 to 3 score on their own ice, travelled to Galt and won the championship by holding the crack Western team to a tie, Peterborough winning the round by the narrow margin of 7 goals to 6.

It took a team with all kinds of scrapping ability to turn the trick, and fortunately the 1902 Petes were just that sort of a hockey machine, a gang of battlers who cared nothing for hostile crowds or strange ice surfaces, and who were just as dangerous on the road as they were on their own small rink on Charlotte street.

Galt came to Peterborough for the first game of the finals on March 8 with all kinds of confidence. The conditions were thought to favor the Westerners. The weather had been mild for several days, and the ice was covered with slush and water, making it almost impossible for combination, and the Petes' team-work suffered.

The Galt team was led by the famous "Dutchy" Morrison, one of the best goalers of his period, and in the first game played three men back on the defence most of the time. In spite of the conditions the game was very clean and Lane of the Galt outfit was the only player penalized.

The Petes scored the first goal in 10 minutes on a rush by Whitcroft and a neat pass to Morgan. Five minutes later Morgan made it 2 to 0 on a pass from Chris. Graham, but Galt tied the score before half-time.

Early in the last half Morgan took a pass from Roy Armstrong to make it 3 to 2, only to have Hay score for Galt on a shot which glanced off Glover's stick into the net. The score remained tied until two minutes before the end of the game when Morgan batted in the winning goal on a rebound from Chris. Gramham's shot.

The second game in Galt, with ice conditions much the same, was another thriller. The Westerners were very confident, but the Petes matched their confidence with an invincible determination that was not shaken when Galt scored the only goal of the first half.

Early in the second half Roy Armstrong broke away for a nice rush and tied the score, and less than a minute after he put the Petes ahead on a pass from Morgan, making the score on the round 6 to 4. Galt, however, came to life and quickly ran in two goals, tieing the round and leaving them one up for the game. It was a great battle for the million dollar goal, and Chris. Graham finally secured it for Peterborough with two minutes to play, rapping the rubber into the net as Morrison rushed out and bodied him.

The line-up in both games was the same:

Galt—Goal, Morrison; point, Lane; cover, Twalts; forwards, Deeton, Hay, P. Deitrich.

CANADIENS BEAT BLACK HAWKS 2-1

MONTREAL, December 10. Canadian Press. — Canadiens improved their position in the standing of the clubs of the Canadian section of the National Hockey League Saturday night by scoring a 2 to 1 victory over Merb Gardner's cellar tennants of the American division, the Chicago Black Hawks. Ten thousand fans saw the fast skating Canucks hold a distinct fast skating edge throughout, but they also saw Chuck Gardner give one of the best performances that a National Hockey League goaltender has ever turned in on local ice. The Canucks margin of victory would have been much higher had it not been for Gardner's marvellous work between the Hawk posts. He allowed two counters to pass him, but he also stopped about seven that would have registerd against any ordinary goalie.

Howie Morenz and Albert Leduc scored for Canadiens, while Ty Arbour kept the Hawks in the running with a goal scored less than a minute after Leduc gave the Canucks a two-goal lead in the third period. Morenz opened the scoring in the first period when he beat Gardner with a fast low drive, following a typical swerving rush and shot from one side of the Hawk defence. Joliat, Canadian left winger, was serving a penalty at the time.

Although consistenely outplayed, Gardner's work in the Hawk net gave Chicago a chance to make a game of it, and led by Ripley, smart subcentre, the visitors worked hard throughout. Their offensive efforts however lacked that certain punch needed to carry them in to close quarters with Hainsworth.

March, the Regina junior, signed last week by the Hawks, subbed at right wing for them, and although it was only the fourth time this season that the youngster has been on skates he displayed a lot of natural ability. He is a little on the light side, however, and even his spasmodic displays of stickhandling would not carry him through the sturdy Canuck defence. The teams:

Chicago: Goal, Gardner; defence, Wentworth and Loughlin; centre, McKinnon; wings, Gottselig and Irvin; subs, Hoffinger, Ripley, March, Arbour and Couture.

Canadiens: Goal, Hainsworth; defence, Mantha and Burke; centre, Morenz; wings, Joliat and Gagne; subs, Leduc, Lepine, Gaudreault, Carson and Lesieur.

The Summary.

First Period.

1—Canadiens..Morenz 17.20

Second Period.

No score.

Third Period

2—Canadiens..Leduc 11.00
3—Chicago..Arbour (Irvin) 4.0

Penalties—First period, Loughlin, Joliat; second period, Wentworth, Gottselig, Loughlin, Carson, Burke; third period, McKinnon 3, Wentworth, Joliat, Morenz.

GEORGIA TECH ON TOP RUNG

Southern College Has Clear Record of Nine Consecutive Victories

TENNESSEE NEXT

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 10 (Canadian Press).—The south has closed its most exciting, if not its greatest, college football season with a flourish of strength that leaves no question of Dixie's claim to a fair share of any pigskin honors that may be passed around.

It's closed, that is, so far as the Southern Conference race is concerned, but there is still the final thrust to be made by Georgia Tech, the champions, against California in the intersectional climax at Pasadena on New Year's Day.

Close of the championship race finds Tech at the top indisputably, with a clear record of nine consecutive victories that is one of the best in the country, but the sensational young Tennessee team is only a step behind. Tennessee wound up its campaign Saturday with a single point, 13 to 12 victory over Florida, to clinch second place in the conference and end the winning streak of the "Fighting Gators" who had kept pace with Tech all season.

BOSTON BRUINS SWAMP MAROONS

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 10.—The Boston Bruins went on a scoring rampage here Sunday night and defeated the hard-checking Montreal Maroons, 5 to 1, in a game that thrilled 15,000 spectators.

Frederickson, the Boston centre, had one of the best nights in his long career, caging the first Boston score in the opening period, then coming back early in the second session to put his team in the lead again. The lone Montreal score was made by Phillips, and the teams were tied at 1-all when they quit the ice for their first rest period.

After Frederickson showed the way, Oliver and Gainer contributed a goal each, assisted by the sensational offensive play of Percy Galbraith. Clapper scored the Bruins' fifth and last tally in the closing period, when the Maroons were disorganized and their defence no stronger than a paper wall.

Canzoneri-Singer Match Features Card

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—With the Devos-Hudkins match off the books until Dec. 21, a ten round bout between Tony Canzoneri, former featherweight champion and Al Singer, of the Bronx, features the fistic card here this week.

Originally Tex Rickard had planned to start off the week by pitting Rene Devos, the great Belgian middleweight, against Ace Hudkins the Nebraska Wildcat, with the right to challenge champion Mickey Walker as the chief prize. But Devos was forced to ask for a postponement Saturday when he fainted during a gym workout from the pain of a boil on his neck. The bout accordingly was moved back to December 21.

The Devos-Hudkins postponement necessitated a complete shift in the Garden's boxing calendar. The Jimmy Maloney-Con O'Kelly scrap was set back from Dec. 21 to Dec. 28 and the Young Stribling - Joe Sekyra match from Dec. 28 to Jan 4.

Two Teams Battle Through Overtime For 2-2 Score

POSITIONS UNCHANGED

DETROIT, Dec. 10.—The Detroit Cougars and the New York Rangers fought three periods and an overtime session here Sunday night to determine the leadership of the American division of the National Professional Hockey League and at the end of the game their positions were unchanged with the teams tied for top place and the score 2 to 2.

The tie was bitter medicine to both teams for the Cougars saw a lead which they had little trouble in maintaining for two periods, wiped out when they were badly outplayed in the final period and the Rangers fought their way to the tie with the knowledge that Taffy Abel, star defence man, had injured an already troublesome ankle and probably would be unavailable for several games.

Bobby Connors, Cougar wingman, scored in the second period and passed to Cooper for the second Detroit score in the final period. Bill Cook scored for the Rangers in the final period and passed to Murdoch, who tied the score near the end of the game. Play was fast throughout and penalties were numerous.

ATHLETIC UNION REJECTS PLAN

Vote Down Proposal to Permit Amateurs to Mingle With Professionals

LOUDON IS NEW HEAD

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Dec. 10 (Canadian Press.) — Amateur Athletic Union of Canada at it closing session of its annual convention here on Saturday night, defeated a move that would have resulted in an alliance between the Amateur Union and the Dominion Football Association. A motion to permit amateurs to mingle with professionals in soccer without endangering their amateur status was voted down.

Prof. Thomas R. Loudon, of the University of Toronto, will head the A.A.U. of C. during the coming year, having been unanimously elected to succeed Dr. A. E. Lamb, of Montreal, who definitely announced his resignation at the start of the convention on Thursday morning.

The slate of other new officers follows:

Vice-presidents, A. B. Cheeseman, Alberta; Archie Johnson, Manitoba; Charles Higginbottom, Ontario; Major Stuart Forbes, Quebec; Jack Hamilton, Saskatchewan; Major Sid Wilson, Thunder Bay; D. Webb, Maritime; George Pushman, Ottawa District; treasurer, Claude C. Robinson, Winnipeg; secretary, John Leslie, Edmonton.

H. R. Davidson, of British Columbia, was named to be elected a member of the executive at a later date.

Delegates from Alberta, Saskatchewan, Thunder Bay, and the Maritimes favored the suggestion to permit amateurs and professionals to play side by side in soccer, but strong opposition was forthcoming from Ontario, while the Quebec forces were split.

SKATE FOR THE SHEER JOY OF IT

THERE'S magic in the skating stroke — exhilaration in the feel of those narrow steel blades skimming over the glassy ice, the wind on the cheeks, and the glow of warm blood pulsing through the veins. No wonder skaters feel gay, light-hearted, full of pep. They just can't help it. Skating makes them feel that way. It's the King of winter sports.

COMING FROM SCHOOL RUTH KING VANISHES; LEAVING NO TRACE

Is Reported Missing by Her Father, a Prominent Lawyer

Ruth King, daughter of Cyrus King, wealthy lawyer, disappeared from her home as mysteriously as any of the other 3,180 young girls reported as missing in New York last year, according to a recent interview with Captain John J. Ayers, head of the Missing Persons Bureau of the New York Police Department. Miss King's mother, who is a prominent club woman and social service worker, has often been called upon to assist others in locating their daughters, and when the same misfortune strikes her home she is prostrated with grief.

The above paragraph, with a change of names of the principals, might be duplicated in any one of a hundred American cities, when it is recalled that 75,000 young girls were reported missing from their homes in the past year.

What causes these girls to leave home? Where do they go? Who is to blame? These are the questions dramatically expressed in the photo-play, "The Port of Missing Girls," which authoritatively presents many thrilling phases of this social problem. Barbara Bedford and Malcolm McGregor are the featured players in this production, which is to be seen at the Regent theatre, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

AT THE CAPITOL.

All Roads Will Lead to the Capitol To-night When the Biggest Entertainment Value of the Season Will be offered—the Canadian Juvenile Troubadors, a Clever Company of Eight Young Men, and Greta Garbo in "The Mysterious Lady" Will be the Attractions.

It's the Capitol management's treat to-night when this popular theatre will offer a big stage and screen show all at the regular admission prices. The Canadian Juvenile Troubadors, a talented company of eight young men, all artists of rhythm and syncopation, will be seen with a barrel of novelties upon the stage, while Greta Garbo will be presented in one of the season's greatest screen attractions, "The Mysterious Lady."

In this screen version of Ludwig Wolff's fascinating drama of European espionage systems, the Swedish star is seen in a difficult role. She plays as a beautiful Russian spy who plots the disgrace of a young Austrian officer to gain a military secret for her own country.

With this unsympathetic part to sustain, Miss Garbo gives a vivid interpretation of the character she plays, and succeeds in winning sympathy by revealing the character's love for the man she has lured to misfortune.

"The Mysterious Lady" is Miss Garbo's first screen appearance since "The Divine Woman." She appears more accomplished in this latest picture than she has ever been before. This may largely be due to the excellent direction of Fred Niblo, who also directed Greta Garbo in her second American film, "The Temptress." He seems to have a knack of understanding the star's capabilities, and by making full use of this ability has created a vehicle for her that easily ranks among the year's best films.

Conrad Nagel, who has probably appeared with more feminine stars than any other leading man, in this picture makes his debut opposite Greta Garbo. The love scenes in which they appear together lack nothing of dash, verve and fire.

The story of "The Mysterious Lady" is one of engrossing interest. Miss Garbo as the Russian spy lures Nagel, an Austrian officer, to disgrace and exile, but redeems herself and displays her love for him by slaying the head of the espionage system which had enslaved her, convincing the Austrian of her true love for him and leading him back safely to the land which he had fled as a fugitive.

Travel facilities are of the best. Every day the year round "The Vancouver Express" widely known Canadian Pacific transcontinental train, leaves Toronto at 9.00 p.m., making the through trip to Vancouver in 4 days. Schedule provides for good connections to all western points and any Canadian Pacific agent will gladly arrange for reservations and tickets on request.

C.G.E. GIRLS' SHOP LEAGUE.

The Fractional Motor Girls on No. 1 bowling team battled their way to a two-game win over the Insulation No. 2 team in the final tilt of the first half of their schedule. The game, although hotly contested, failed to show many high scores, but one girl on either team reaching the 200 mark. Miss Dyman made 214. Jerry O'Connal performed in her usual brilliant manner and took high three honors by a considerable majority.

The Insulation No. 1 gang spurted away from their hard-hitting opponents, the Maple Leafs, who barely escaped a coat of whitewash as the Insulation bowlers took the first two games and dropped the third by only 13 pins. E. Jones for the winners and M. Ridley tied with each other for high three with 496 pins apiece, while Miss Jones, who has already earned a reputation as a consistent bowler, chalked up a high single score of 230.

The Smart Set swamped the Meters No. 1 with 2,278 pins in total pinnage against 1,691, taking three games and strengthening their position in the first half of the schedule to a considerable extent. E. Parkins and L. O'Toole ran a close race for second high in three games, the former winning with 459, while Miss O'Toole made 455. B. Thompson turned in the best scores of the night, making 179, 194, and 230 for a high three of 603.

The Pirates treated the Meters No. 2 to shutout taking every game in a very decisive manner, although the losers worked hard in the final game losing out by 30 pins. V. Langton carried off the high scores in this duel, making 186 and 489

The Jolly Fellows more than held up their end of the argument with Fractional Motors No. 2, conceding two games out of three although with the exception of A. Wright's score the totals made were rather low. Miss Wight made 172 and 408 to take both high scores.

WARWICK, Australia, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press).—The English touring cricket team easily defeated an eleven known as the combined country here by an innings and 169 runs. It was a two-day match and ended to-day. England scored 510 and the combined country 128 and 213, a total of 341. In the English innings, Ernest Tyldesley and Wally Hammond scored centuries, the former getting 115 and the latter 110.

GOOD TURNOUT AT PRACTICE

About Forty Players Tryout For C.G.E. Girls' Basketball League

NEED ANOTHER COACH

Judging from the turnout of young ladies from the C.G.E. for the basketball practice on Saturday afternoon at the Y.W.C.A. this branch of athletics has made a decided hit with the girls. It is estimated that between thirty-five and forty were present, which considering the short notice, was very gratifying to the executive who are boosting the game. Alex. Mitchell, Jr., has offered his services as coach, and gave the basketeers their first instructions on Saturday. Many of the players made their first appearance on the gym. floor, but show promise of developing into very good basket ballers.

The C.G.E. girls' team of last year are again trotting out the same lineup, with the exception of Mabel McLaren, who will probably play with the De Laval and Dot Mortimer, whose ability and pep will certainly be missed.

It is hoped that at least one more coach can be obtained from among the employees, so that the objective, namely, a three-team Shop League, may be organized.

The next practice will be held at an early date, and every lady member of the Social and Athletic Club who is interested is invited to attend.

McLEOD HEADS CAMPAIGN LIST

Team Has 26 Points in Supper Club Membership Competition.

BERT GRANIK IS SPEAKER.

The Friday Night Supper Club held another successful meeting in the Y.M.C.A. Friday night, when over sixty of the boys turned out to hear Bert Granik gave an unusually interesting address on the manufacture of gas. Terry Hall acted as grand master of the singing.

After supper Hector McLeod, who is head of the membership campaign, gave a report on the progress of the campaign. The standing of the teams is as follows:

Hector McLeod, 26 points; C. Halls and F. Hewett, 18 points; Bob Allin, 16 points; K. Copping, 15 points; B. Sangster, 14 points; T. Hall and B. Fraser 13 points.

With the exception of McLeod's team the teams are fairly well grouped and are going to put up some keen competition before the race is over. Besides having the race between the eight teams, two sides have been picked, with four teams on each side. The sides are known as the Reds and the Blues, with Jack Jennings, captain of the Reds, and Howard McDonald, captain of the Blues. Last week several of the P. C. I. boys were absent at another banquet at the Empress. Because of this, the boys who were at that banquet last week and were present at the supper last night shall count two points for their team instead of one.

Manufacture of Gas

Bert Granik, a graduate of McGill University, was the speaker of the evening. Bert proved the popular speaker when he ended his speech exactly on time. His subject on the manufacture of gas, proved an interesting one to all. Gas is manufactured for industrial purposes, especially for illumination and power. The main source of gas is from coal.

YOUNG PEOPLE ELECT OFFICERS

TEAMS ARE PICKED

The active manner in which the members and officers of the Young Peoples Association of St. Pauls Presbyterian church have launched their winter activities, gives promise of interesting meetings, weekly, for some months to come. As last years president, Tom Foulkes, and the previous president, Mel. Turner, both of whom were members of the executive, have left the city, during recent months, a reorganization became necessary with the result that at a recent meeting the following officers were elected:—

President—Dion Snelgrove.
Vice-president—Mary Grier.
Secretary—Mary Sedgwick.
Treasurer—Harry Chenhall.

And an executive of Mrs. Wm. Allan, Mr. and Mrs. A. McLeish, H. Chenhall, R. Adair, Misses M. Sedgwick, J. Cummings, Sybil Jackson, H. B. Cowan, and Wm. Hill.

Three teams have been picked with Janet Cummings, Arthur McLeish and Ralph Adair as leaders. Each week one of the teams has charge of the program and there is great rivalry on the part of the teams as to who will put on the best programs. Special events have been planned and real treats are assured to those who turn out.

At a recent meeting of he session W. B. Cowan was appointed to represent the session in an advisory capacity to the young people. Mr. Cowan has been co-operating with the young people during the last few years and is always available when they desire co-operation and advice in connection with their programs and activities. W. S Hill is also co-operating with the executive in the conduct and planning of their meetings.

FOURTEENTH ANNIVERSARY IS CELEBRATED

Bishop O'Brien In Charge Of Services At Immaculate Conception Church

SPECIAL SPEAKER

His Lordship Tells Congregation Debt On Parish Property Been Reduced

Hope that the congregation might be able to undertake in the near future the erection of their church as originally planned, was expressed by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien at the solemn celebration on Sunday of the fourteenth anniversary of the dedication of the Church of the Immaculate Conception. The debt on the parish property has been reduced to $9,000, and Bishop O'Brien congratulated the congregation and the Rev. Dean O'Sullivan on the very satisfactory condition that has been attained in their material corporate affairs. The recovery of Dean O'Sullivan from his recent illness was a great happiness to his many friends, His Lordship said.

Rev. J. J. O'Brien preached the anniversary sermon at vespers on the text, St. Matthew 1: 23, "And they shall call his name Emmanuel, which, being interpreted, is God with us."

"The natural condition of man is companionship with God." Father O'Brien said. "He created us in His Own image and likeness, and gave us those faculties of soul that reflect God's infinite perfection. He gave man reason that he might be able to know God, learn His truths and make him love, God more. He gave man free-will in order that he might not be a slave, but render his God a willing service. God found great pleasure in walking through the Garden of Eden and in talking with our first parents, and through the ages God has always been yearning for the companionship of man."

Led His People Through Desert.

Father O'Brien recalled that God had led His chosen people through the desert and was present with them in a cloud by day and pillar of fire by night. He fed them with manna from heaven and commanded Moses to draw water from a rock. God was jealous of the friendship of His creatures and would have no other king over them, and throughout those ages He alone was king. When the people envied the pagans and asked Samuel for a king, and God said to Samuel, "They have not rejected you but they have rejected Me." So He gave them Saul as their first king. When God visited the temple Solomon had built in Jerusalem, He said, "This is My house; whoever shall invoke My name here their prayers shall be heard."

By His incarnation, God found a means of drawing closer those bonds of friendship. He became man like us in all things except sin. God gave man an immortal soul that we might be His companions in eternity as well as in time.

"God in His infinite wisdom found another means that brought him closer to us. By the institution of the Blessed Eucharist, He becomes the bosom friend of each and every soul that believes in Him. By the holy sacrifice of the Mass, He has elevated the human race to be consorts of His divinity, who has deigned to be a sharer in our humanity. To you is given the privilege of having God's home in your midst, and that home dedicated to the immaculate mother of Christ who so co-operated with Him in working out man's redemption. Try to be good neighbors and companions to our divine Lord and may this church in His presence bring you every grace and blessing."

BASEBALL CLUB TO HOLD MEETING

The executive of the Peterborough Central Ontario League baseball club will meet at 5 o'clock tomorrow evening and on Thursday night at 7.30 o'clock there will be a general meeting in the Chamber of Commerce for the election of officers and reorganization for next season. All players and people interesting in baseball are invited to Thursday's meeting.

IN POLICE COURT

In police court this morning, Roland Sanderson, of Peterborough, appeared before the Magistrate on a charge of driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated. The case had grown out of an accident on Water street. His counsel, and the Chief of Police agreed as to his previous good record but the Magistrate saw fit to impose a sentence of ten days' imprisonment.

A north end resident appeared before the court, charged with allowing his premises to be used as a disorderly house on Saturday night. The police had entered, on complaint of a neighbor, who objected to the noise in the early hours of Sunday morning. He was fined $20.00 and costs.

A local man, charged with being intoxicated, was fined $15 and costs. He promised to keep the peace in the future, stating that he had not been long enough in Canada to know the laws (having come from England two years ago).

Charged with consuming liquor in a place other than a private residence, a young man was fined $10 and costs. In this case the police had dropped in on a stable on Brock street and caught the man in the act of consuming liquor.

The proprietor, appearing on court, was charged with allowing a disorderly house but as his counsel was absent, he requested an adjournment. The case will again come before the Magistrate on Friday, December 14.

Another man, charged with exposing or keeping for sale, pleaded not guilty and was allowed to go on bail, to appear on Friday morning.

A number of cases arising out of the theft of chickens in nearby townships, were laid over until Thursday morning.

ODDFELLOWS SET DECORATION DAY

Societies and Institutions Have Asked to Supply List for Old Home Week.

At a joint meeting of the members of the local lodges of the Oddfellows Order, held on Thursday night, it was decided to hold the annual decoration day, on Sunday, July 7th, which had been arranged for a date previous. This helpful action of the local lodges, Peterborough and Otonabee, and the district representatives, now leaves available Sunday, June 30th, on which to carry out the formal unveiling and dedication of the war memorial in Confederation Square; if such be agreed to.

In addition, the lodges agreed to supply to the general secretary, lists of all members of the lodges who have lived in Peterborough and are now located at points abroad in the Canadian provinces and United States. Once an Oddfellow, ever an Oddfellow. So those who are living will share in the general invitation to come back and see the folks they mingled and connived with in the years that have slipped by.

In this connection, it may be stated that fifty-four of the local societies and institutions in the city have been asked to supply lists of absent members and connections abroad. When these lists come in they will be plotted into the general mailing card system, and when literature extolling the Old Boys' and Girls' Home Week is sent out, from time to time, all will share in the distribution.

The coupon printed in The Examiner should be cut from the pages and filled in, at home, to find its way to the city building, where it will be recorded. Read the coupon carefully, and fill in as requested.

SCHOOL ASSOCIATION HOLDS BIG RALLY

Three Hundred Attend Meeting in Ashburnham Community Hall.

The King George Home and School Association made use of the splendid Ashburnham Community Hall to stage a very fine concert on Wednesday, December 5.

The program, which was enjoyed by about 300, was put on by Mrs. Ed. Wand, who was organizer, trainer and director.

The program consisted of songs, choruses, dialogues, drills and a 'kazoo band' novelty. The major part was taken by the pupils of the King George school, who all acquitted themselves well. Little Fern Agnew drew the major applause. Adult assistance was given by Miss A. Blanchard, who contributed two very pretty songs, and by Mrs. J. Ellis, and Miss J. Kelly accompanied at the piano. Principal J. E. R. Munro acted as chairman.

Home-made candy was on sale at a booth conducted by Mesdames Hamilton, Ebbs and Brady. Mrs. A. Craig, the president, took charge of tickets at the door. Messrs. Agnew and Perry were stage assistants. Assisting from the school were Misses J. Kelly and F. Pammett, and Messrs. T. Miller, S. Matchett and J. E. R. Munro.

At the conclusion of the concert a donation of $10 was voted to the Mark street Church building fund as a gesture of good-will.

The Harry Webb Company's large fireproof plant, situated at the corner of Kendall and Davenport Road, will be taken over and the new company will immediately proceed with the erection of a stable to accommodate 110 horses, on land already purchased opposite the present Webb plant. Although the Webb plant can take care of the large volume of new business expected large and up-to-date plants, modernly equipped, in every respect, will be erected at once in the east and west ends of the city.

DRAMATIC CLUB PRESENTS PLAY

THREE ACTS

The dramatic club of Mark Street presented their play, "Safety First," to a fair-sized audience in the auditorium of George Street United Church Sunday school hall, Friday evening, under the auspices of the Co-workers' Bible Class.

The play consisted of three acts and in the final act the curtain is lowered for a few minutes to indicate a lapse of three hours.

The cast includes—Jack Montgomery, Morgan Perry; Mable, Montgomery (wife), Beatrice Castle; Jerry Arnold, a friend of Jack's, Harold Agnew; Elmer Flannel, a cousin of Jack, Gordon Agnew; Zuleika, a Turkish girl, Mrs. H. Hunter; Abou Ben Mocha, Zuleika's father, Douglas Bethune; Virginia Bridger, Mrs. Montgomery's sister, Bernice Ferguson; Mrs. Barrington Bridger, mother of Mrs. Montgomery, Mrs. V. Boorman; Mary Hann O'Finnerty, the maid, Mabel Reynolds; Mr. McNutt, a policeman, Cyril Agnew; directress, Mrs. E. Wand; stage manager, Leonard Agnew.

The first act opens in the sitting-room of the Montgomery home. Mrs. Montgomery is weeping over the fact that ther husband has stayed out all night, and the maid, Mary Ann O'Finnerty, comes in any sympathizes with her mistress. She tells her she is sure her husband has been murdered or kidnapped and his body thrown in the river like a picture she saw in the movies. She acts her part throughout the entire play to perfection, and her real Irish brogue and amusing acting brings much favorable comment.

Elmer Flannel comes in wanting to see his cousin Jack, and tells Mrs. Montgomery about his love affair with a beautiful Turkish girl, who tells fortunes in a show. After he leaves Mrs. Montgomery phones for her sister to come at once, that she is in great trouble and soon her mother, Mrs. Barrington Brider arrives on the scene and is horrified to think her son-in-law has remained away from home all night. This part of the haughty mother-in-law is well taken by Mrs. V. Boorman. They all start out for the police station to see if they can find a trace of Mr. Montgomery. Meanwhile, Jack Montgomery and his friend, Jerry Arnold, return to the house badly beaten up as a result of a fight at Zuleika's home where Jack had gone to try and bribe her to give up his cousin Elmer. While there, the police come to arrest Zulika for telling fortunes and try to arrest the two men callers. This results in a fight and they make their get-away, hiding in a box car for the remainder of the night. They find out from the maid, Mary Ann, that the women have gone to the police station, so they invent a story of being at lodge and that Jack was initiated and made a Shriner. Before the ladies return, Mr. McNutt, the policeman, arrives and arrests them. Thev bribe him to allow them to tell their story to the women, and tell that they are going to a big Shriners' convention in California for a month, when they really have to go to jail for thirty days. When the ladies come in they introduce McNutt as a friend and Zuleika as his wife, she having come with the policeman to identify them.

Mary Ann comes in and is raging to find McNutt is a married man as he had been paying her attention, and the situation is very funny.

During the month that they are away, Mrs. Barrington Bridger discovers that McNutt is still working, never having been out of the city, and she takes her daughter, concluding that Zuleika has gone away with Jack Montgomery.

When the men are released from jail, they go home trying to tell a wonderful story of their trip, and rescue from a drowning accident. Their story is often badly mixed, and seems to lack sequence, and their mother-in-law is very suspicious, and refuses to believe them. Finally as a Safety First action, they decide to tell the truth, and all ends happily. Jerry and Virginia are to be married; Jack and Mabel are reconciled. Elmer and Zuleiker are married, and Mr. McNutt makes peace with the blushing Mary Ann, while even the terrible Turk, Zuleika's father, becomes quite friendly.

The cast are well suited to their respective parts and the play is exceedingly well presented. Mrs. Wand deserves great credit as directress.

The Sunday school orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. W. H. Cunningham, played a number of selections before the curtain rose, and between acts.

At the conclusion of the play, refreshments were served by the Co-Workers' Bible Class to the members of the dramatic club and the orchestra. A vote of thanks was proposed to the ladies by Leonard Agnew, which met with a hearty applause.

Rev. J. E. Todd spoke a few words of praise, and congratulated the Mark Street United Church young people.

MRS. J. SPEER IS ELECTED PRESIDENT

Mark Street Ladies' Aid Society Holds Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Mark Street Ladies' Aid Society was held on Thursday afternoon with the president, Mrs. O. Hurl, in the chair. The attendance was good with a very manifest spirit of harmony and optimism.

The treasurer's report by Miss Elda Whattam showed a prosperous year with a substantial balance in the treasury. Including the savings from previous years, $1,200.00 has been paid on their $2,000.00 subscription to the building fund.

Mrs. John Speer reported having sent flowers to many sick folk and told of expressions of appreciation received. All of the other committees had faithfully discharged their various duties during the year. Mrs. Doxsee was appointed to send Christmas greetings to the sick and aged of the congregation. It was decided to put on sale the various articles left over from the recent bazaar at the Boys' Athletic Club concert and bazaar, to be held in East City Community Hall on Friday, December 14.

Rev. A. E. Thornley took the chair and the following officers and convenors of committees were elected for the year 1929:

NO MORE PILES

Thousands Bless Dr. Leonhardt, the Specialist Who Discovered This Common Sense Remedy

If you think that the surgeon's knife is the only method of escape from the misery of piles, it's because you haven't heard of the internal treatment known as Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID.

J. S. Leonhardt, M.D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named this prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere with money back guarantee. It is easy to take, and McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

A Wonderful Pill For Kidney Trouble

"I have used Dodd's Kidney Pills and so has my husband," writes Mrs. John R. McIlmoyle of Young's Point, Ont. "We have found them a wonderful pill for Kidney Trouble. We would not be without them in the house. Have recommended them to quite a few people." Toronto Exchange Easier After Irregular Opening

TORONTO, December 10. — Canadian Press. — Following an irregular opening, the market took on an easy trend on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. There were no serious declines although fractional losses wre prevalent throughout.

Brazilian lost a quarter to 67 1-4, and Consolidated Smelters one to 3.50; Massey-Harris after opening unchanged, dropped 1 1-2 during the morning but at noon had returned to 83 3-4 for a net loss of 1-4. Cockshutt went down 1-2 to 32 1-2. Hiram Walker was active at 72 1-2, a gain of 1-2, as was Shredded Wheat at 75 up 1-2. Page-Hersey advanced one to 115. Bank of Commerce gained two to 320, while Dominion dropped four to 291, and Toronto three to 223. New International Nickel was particularly active, more than 12,000 shares changing hands, the price ranging from 34 3-4 to 35 3-8, but closing at noon at 35 without a change. Imperial Oil was stronger, ranging from 84 3-4 to 86, but closing at noon at 85 3-4, for a gain of 1 point. British American Oil gained 1-4 to 47. Goodyear Tire dropped two to 215, and Dominion Power three to 70.

Provisions Easier; Wheat Averages Lower

CHICAGO, December 10. — Canadian Press. — With exports of wheat and flour from the United States and Canada showing a decided falling off, wheat prices here averaged lower early to-day. Besides the amount of wheat on ocean passage continued materially in excess of a year ago.

Starting unchanged to 1-2 off, Chicago wheat later displayed but little power to rally. Corn, oats and provisions were also easier, with corn opening 1-4 to 3-4 down and subsequently holding near to the initial range.

Chicago. — Wheat, December 114 5-8; March 118 5-8; corn, December, 82 3-4; March, 85 7-8; oats, December, 47 3-4; March 47 7-8.

Favorite Stocks Fall Below Usual Levels

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press).—The "weeding out" process of over exploited stocks was resumed in the stock market to-day after an initial outburst of strength had carried many issues up three to twenty-three points.

Renewal of weakness in Radio, Montgomery Ward, Wright Aero and some of the other high-priced specialties turned the general course of prices extremely irregular before midday. In general, most of the high-grade, seasoned dividend-paying rails and industrials received good support.

Call money was renewed at 9 per cent. and dropped to 8, when a plentiful supply of funds appeared in the market. Banks called about $15,000,000 in loans but these were easily replaced.

The day's trade news also was less favorable than usual. United States Steel Corporation reported a decrease of 78,030 tons in unfilled orders last month. The Standard Oil Company of Indiana announced a cut of one cent per gallon in gasoline prices in Chicago, and the reduction was immediately met by its leading competitors.

Renewed selling pressure against high-priced specialties undoubtedly was influenced by the unofficial denials of widespread rumors that organized banking support had been provided for the market. Radio was hardest hit, breaking from an early high of 314 which represented a week end gain of eighteen points, to 275, but it quickly snapped back to 290. Montgomery Ward fell from 342 to 315, Wright Aero from 221 to 196, and National Tea from 330 to 310, while General Motors, Johns Manville, National Biscuit, International Nickel, Columbia Gramaphone, Packard Motors and Victoria Talking Machine fell four or more points below their early high levels.

C.N.R. EARNINGS

The gross earnings of the Canadian National Railways for the nine day period ending November 30, 1928, were $7,670,883, as compared with $7,291,176 for the corresponding period of 1927; an increase of $379,707, or five per cent.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

Crosscutting will begin on the 375 and 600-foot levels of the Granada-Rouyn some time next week, it is reported. Drifting on the No. 2 vein should also get under way on two faces some time this week and results of this operation will be watched with interest. There is a feeling on the street that Granada Rouyn shares cannot go far below 17 cents per share as it is said two large operators have an order in various brokers' offices to buy in all the stock they can lay hands on at this figure.

* * *

Assay results of diamond drilling at the lowerlevels of the Aldermac, according to Rouyn advices. There is a feeling in the camp that this ore does not grade as high as previous reports stated but its general appearance seems to be higher than the average for the rest of the property. The grade is now expected to run between 3 and 4 per cent, which is good concentrating ore—the remainder of the mine grades approximately 2 1-2 per cent.

Despite officials' denials given to the Financial News Bureau reports of a strike on the Robb-Montray persist. If correct this would be either as a result of diamond drilling or surface work as underground operations were stopped some time ago. No details of the reported find are available.

* * *

Nipissing owns 1,360,000 shares of Robb-Montbray, and a find on this latter property would, to some extent, be reflected in Nipissing shares. This has been the case recently and thus credence is added to the reports.

* * *

Continued operations on the recent discovery on the Pontiac group of claims of Pon-Dokis Mines, Ltd., located north of the Trout (Clarice) Lake in the Township of Pontiac, Ontario, are yielding encouraging results, according to official advices. The discovery has now been traced for a distance of approximately 1500 feet and officials state that a magnetic survey now shows the average width to be considerably over 135 feet. Further work has been confined to the western part of the discovery. Test pits have been sunk here over an extended area. In each case heavy mineralization has been encountered, with chalcopyrite replacing pyrrhotite and pyrite at depth.

* * *

It is reported that Astoria Rouyn have taken over 12 claims of the Lapierre Dasserat Syndicate, located in Dasserat Township, Quebec.

* * *

Recent surface finds made in prospecting on the claims of the Quebec Cupper Syndicate, in Duprat Township, are said to have warranted the purchase of a sinking plant.

* * *

Recently two diabese dykes were uncovered on the property and it is believed that important ore may be associated with these.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

Abana.

At a meeting of the directors of Abana Saturday Mr. F. M. Connell was made a director. In accepting the appointment Mr. Connell is reported as having said in part, "I consider there is a small mine indicated west of the large diabase dyke which intersects the ore zone and if the orebody encountered in the later development work east of the dyke continues to develop on a scale commensurate with the present exposures the property has good possibilities of becoming a large mine." Mr. Connell said further that he did not endorse the estimates of ore reserves as to tonnages heretofore reported as either blocked out or indicated.

Malartic

As previously reported by us, major development work has been suspended at the Malartic property to be replaced by a large diamond drilling campaign. We believe the present plans call for some 12,000 feet of drilling, consisting of 30 holes of 400 feet each.

Moffatt Hall

McIntyre is reported as having found a new vein on the Moffatt Hall property in Kirkland Lake. The deposit is reported as having been traced for 300 feet and is believed to be one of the more important so far found.

Graham Bousquet.

Present indications would appear to point to the completion of the Graham shaft to the 500 foot horizon by January 1st. At this time we believe lateral work will start from this level.

Towagmac

According to Rouyn reports no assay results are as yet available from the lower level diamond drilling. It is now believed that while this ore is not high grade, its general appearance seems to be higher than the average of the mine which is around 2½ per cent. It will probably run between 3 and 4 per cent which is good concentrating ore.

LONDON, December 8. Canadian Press Cable. — The depression and uncertainty which hangs over the city through the king's illness naturally has had considerable effect on the stock exchange, where things have been listless all through the week.

Apprehension of a rise in the New York rediscount rate caused dullness among British funds. Conversions into the new treasury issues are believed to have hung fire, although theer is a week in which the offer remains open and large interests may quite likely still extend considerable support.

Although the British railway companies once more present a depressing picture of heavy falls in receipts there is a feeling abroad that the government's porposals may prove valuable to the railways, and with talk of goods being held up to take advantage of the new freight rates, which are becoming operative already under the derating scheme, there has ben a small buying movement in railway stocks.

Mining Issues Regain Strength On Standard

TORONTO, December 10. Canadian Press. — Trading, though comparatively light, showed a tendency to return to normal on the Standard mining exchange to-day, following last week's soft markets. Noranda was active and went as high as 55.00 during early session, but by noon had receded to 53.50 for a net loss of 75c.

Wright-Hargreaves sold heavily and fell eight cents to 1.52. Barry-Hollinger dropped 1 1-4 to 29 3-4 and Crown Reserve four to 24; Goodfish 2 to 17; Kirkland Lake 5 to 1.30; Lake Shore 20 to 17.00; Sherritt-Gordon 5 to 6.45; Teck-Hughes 25 to 8.10, and Towagamic 5 to 3.40. Nipissing was strong at 3.90, a gain of 45c; Mining Corporation was up 5 to 3.70, and Sudbury Basin 5 at 7.00. Abana dropped 3c to 3.02. Hudson Bay was down 25c to 18.50; Big Missouri was up 1-2 at 65 1-2, and Pend-O'reille 10 at 9.50.

CHRISTMAS CHEER VOTED

VOTE OF THANKS

The usual Christmas donations were made by the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E. at the regular meeting of the society held in the green room of the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday afternoon. Sums of $10 each were voted to the Christmas fund of the Children's Shelter, St. Vincent's Orphanage and the Canadian Lgion. Having in mind the wide scope of work undertaken by the Salvation Army, $15 was voted to that organization. The sum of $25 was voted to the Relief Committee for local work, of which Miss Doris Burgess is convenor.

It was also decided to use $10 to fill bags for the Navy League, to be used as Christmas gifts for sailors, in the same way as last year. A committee to look after these bags is composed of Mrs. N. C. Staples, Miss Amy Beal and Miss Mayme Montgomery.

The chair was taken by Mrs. J. A. McNabb, in the absence of the regent, Miss Olga Johnston. Reports were given by Miss Florence Adams, secretary and Miss Violet McKeown, treasurer. As all returns are not yet in for the recent bridge party held by the Chapter in the Selkirk and Elliott showrooms, it was not reported on.

An invitation was read from the Salvation Army, asking the members to be present tonight at a meeting in the Temple, to be addressed by Mrs. Henry, wife of Colonel Henry, who is Chief Secretary for Canada East in the Army.

A very sincere vote of thanks was voiced by Mrs. McNabb and agreed to by the members, to be tendered Messrs. Selkirk and Elliott for the use of their rooms for the bridge party held there last week under the auspices of the November-December group and further expressions of gratitude were voiced to all who assisted and particularly to members of the Kiwanis Club, who helped materially in decorating and securing chairs.

On a suggestion made by Miss Mayme Montgomery, it was decided to lay a Christmas wreath on the Cenotaph and to have a wreath placed there by the Chapter on each Armistice Day, as is done by other organizations in the city.

George and Charlotte streets appeared to the towntown shopper in a blaze of many-colored lights for the first time on Saturday night, when the lines of lighting, put up by the Utilities Commission for the Yuletide season, were turned on. They added the very desirable "Christmassy" effect that was, perhaps, responsible for the heavy Christmas trade reported by many merchants.

INQUIRY FINDS OFFICERS WERE INCOMPETENT

Nautical Expert Says Crew of Doomed Ship Were Poorly Led.

ENGINEER BLAMED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—(Canadian Press.)— The cause of the hidden leaks that sank the liner Vestris remained a mystery of the sea yesterday. But in official reports of British and United States nautical observers at the Federal inquiry into the disaster there came more criticism of the late Captain William Carey and his crew for their conduct in the crisis.

Only speculative causes for the disaster were contained in the official reports of Captain Henry McConkey, British adviser, and Captain E. P. Jessop, American adviser to United States Commissioner O'Neill, who has been hearing testimony on the disaster since the week of Nov. 11, when the vessel foundered off the Virginia Capes with a loss of more than 100 lives.

Commissioner O'Neill took the reports under consideration as Federal Attorney Tuttle called before the Commissioner J. L. Crone, Supervising Inspector of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service, which examined and passed the Vestris as seaworthy three days before she sailed on her last voyage. The finding of the Commissioner is the next step expected in the investigation.

Both Captain McConkey and Captain Jessop agreed that Captain Carey should have called for help six hours before he sent his S O S on the morning of Nov. 12. Both agreed that one contributing cause of the disaster was the pumping out of the starboard tanks, which reduced the stability of the ship, and both severely criticized the lack of organization in the loading and lowering of lifeboats, two of which carried all the children and many of the women down with the vessel.

While Captain McConkey, however, said testimony indicated the Vestris was seaworthy at the start of the voyage, Captain Jessop declared: "Any vessel unable to stand a storm for eighteen hours is not fit to send to sea."

The Vestris ran into rough weather on Sunday night, and sank early on Monday afternoon.

"I don't believe that all seafaring history holds such an incident." Captain Jessop said. "The crew seems to have been competent if led, but it was not led. The passengers were the most tractable that could have gone to sea."

Officers Incompetent.

"The testimony inevitably points to the incompetence of the executive officers of the vessel," he said, adding that the master and chief officer must be "men of initiative, judgment and courage to handle a situation of this kind."

The Captain absolved F. W. Johnson, chief of the vessel, but bitterly denounced J. A. Adams, chief engineer, for attempting to fight the inrushing water with inadequate pumps.

While Captain McConkey made no suggestions in his report, Captain Jessop recommended, among other things:

That all ocean-going vessels carry wireless.

That all sea connections be located where they may be inspected at sea.

That a method of testing lifeboats for watertightness be inaugurated by the Steamboat Inspection Service.

That lifebelts be changed in design so as to keep an exhausted person's head and shoulders above water.

That executive ability be considered in the examination of officers.

Captain McConkey enumerated three possible causes for the disaster: fracture of the shell plating; opening of seams through excessive laboring, and fracture of a sea connection, such as a sanitary pipe outlet.

REWARD OFFERED FOR TWO BANDITS

Thugs Murder Aged Couple In Their Home at Eaton, Ohio

EATON, Ohio, Dec. 10 (Canadian Press).—Preble County commissioners have offered a reward of $5,000 for the arrest and conviction of two robbers who shot and killed Dr. Horatio Silver, age 55, and his wife, in their home, early Saturday morning. Police of two state are scouring the surrounding country in search of the slayers.

Mrs. Silver was instantly killed by a bullet through her heart when she arose from her bed as the intruders started to enter the room occupied by the slain couple. Her husband was shot through the stomach and died five hours later at a Dayton hospital. He was only able to give a meagre story of the tragedy before he expired.

A daughter, Hanna Mary, 13, sleeping across the hall from her parents, was awakened by the shots. Her screams attracted neighbors, but the intruders fled in an automobile before a description of them could be obtained.

IMPROVEMENT IN RADIO CONDITIONS

Wave Length Situation Gradually Clears Up, Reception is Better.

TORONTO, Dec. 10—That radio conditions have improved greatly since the change in wave lengths across the line is the general opinion expressed by local radio experts who listen in regularly.

One man believes that ten times as many stations are heard clearly than before.

WJZ and WEAF (New York) are both clear of interference and are received cleared than ever.

Several Chicago stations now find their way in this direction, as well as a great many stations that haven't been heard from for months.

It is true that several of the so-called "old favorites" have passed out of the picture, but these have been replaced by several new stations.

WMAK (Buffalo) and WTAM (Cleveland) seem to be two stations that have lost their "kick" in the change. Both used to be included in the previous list of "star" performers.

Since the change radio stations have been placed on even 10 kilocycles apart and for those who have broad tuning sets trouble is bound to be encountered.

However, most of the present difficulties found in tuning in stations no doubt will be remedied in the next six months. Several stations allocated specific frequencies have wandered off their channels, interfering with other stations close to them. The commission is systematically checking up on these offenders and it is believed that when the final "cleaning up" is completed radio reception will more than thrill the listener.

PREDICTS LARGE FEDERAL SURPLUS

OTTAWA, Dec. 10. —(Canadian Press).— Amount of surplus, which the Minister of Finance will have at end of the present fiscal year, will not likely be announced, until the Hon. J. A. Robb makes his budget speech in parliament. Figure of $60,000,000 mentioned by J. W. Rutherford, M.P., in speech at Chatham is the presumably estimate. Mr. Robb has stated that there will be a substantial surplus from public platform.

PRINCE MAY WIN RACE AGAINST DEATH

CHICAGO WAGES WAR ON VICE

Leaders Taking Rest

Politicians Go Down To Defeats At Recent City Elections.

GANG WAR CONTINUES.

CHICAGO, Ills., December 11 (Special to The Examiner). — Chicago's booze, vice, and gambling chieftains, and those charged with being allied with them, received a setback when politicians accused of protecting them went down to defeat. But they are far from being routed.

"Scarface Al" Capone, whose notoriety has gone the length and the breadth of the land, still sits in a lavish suite in a Michigan Boulevard hotel, surrounded by his lieutenants.

"Big Joe" Saltis continues to deny the police and Federal officials to take him into custody, though the former have been seeking him for six months and the latter nearly two.

Guns continue to pop in the gang war that won Chicago ill repute. But there's light ahead, Judge John A. Swanson on a platform pledging him to end the lawlessness that made Chicago a by-word. Efficient, honest men have been elected to the coroner's post and the sheriff's post, and William F. Russell appointed Commissioner of Police a few months ago, is showing progress. When Russell took office, hand books were almost as common as drug stores, and many of them were run quite as openly. The racing sheets were posted to the accompaniment of bally-hooers. "Boys, get your bets down" or "Seats open in the black jack game."

The rooms were crowded, the "play" both on the races and at the tables, was good.

Of late weeks the bookmakers have been receiving their clients in almost funereal quiet. Gone are the racing sheets and the bally-hooers. No more are there card games. Bets can be made, but the customers are not encouraged to loiter, a condition which has cut considerably into the bookmaker's business. Other gambling spots, the "ritzy" places given over to roulette, dice, and cards, were forced to close. Some continue to operate, but, as the underworld puts it, they are "sneaking," accepting the patronage of only a carefully chosen few.

FIRM TO ERECT NEW FACTORY

Gallagher Remedies Limited Need Larger Building For Increased Business.

Satisfactory progress in business is indicated by the intention of the Gallagher Remedies Limited, to erect a modern new factory at the property adjacent to the Fanning Laundry on King street, during the winter; occupancy to begin some time in May of 1929.

Walter H. Kidd, manager of the Gallagher company, in conversation with an Examiner reporter to-day, was reluctant to give details of the enlargement, but it is understood that a lot has been purchased from James Hamilton of the Peter Hamilton company, and that a solid brick, two-story building, 32 feet in width and 62 feet in length, with basement, will be erected.

While the matter of machinery for the purpose is of minor consideration, from twelve to fifteen men will likely be employed in the new factory. The Gallagher Remedies, Limited, will vacate their present quarters at 332 Water street in May, provided the new building is ready by that time.

Outbreak of Influenza In Northern Ontario

TORONTO, Dec. 11. (Canadian Press.) — While fortunately of a comparatively mild form, an extensive outbreak of influenza is reported in Northern Ontario, by the Ontario Department of Public Health.

Dr. W. J. Bell, Deputy Minister of Health, said to-day that the schools had been closed at Cobalt and that public meetings were being frowned upon.

Dr. Bell says the disease in its present form is not virulent, but is very contagious. He urges precautions in crowds.

There are many cases in Toronto and Hamilton, as well as in the north, he stated.

FIRE DESTROYS THREE STORES AND CONTENTS

Peterborough Department Answers Urgent Call to Warsaw During Night.

FLAMES SPREAD.

Fier Chief Gimblett Pays Fine Tribute to Efforts of Bucket tBrigade.

(Examiner Correspondence).

WARSAW, Dec. 11.—The worst fire in the history of Warsaw broke out last night, when Charles Calder's store was completely destroyed by fire, with all its contents. Mr. Calder carried some insurance. Mrs. O. D. McIlvena's house was completely destroyed, but the furniture and other things in the house were saved. The house was occupied by Mr. Newall, the blacksmith, and some insurance was carried. The tools and stock in the shop were all carried out.

The Peterborough Fire Brigade received an urgent call at 12.56 this morning from Warsaw asking aid to help the villagers in their determined fight to stamp out the raging fire which was consuming three structures in the centre of the village and which was threatening to spread to others.

Immediately the Chief and a detachment of six men pulled out of the fire hall on the pumper truck. Going at full speed the fire fighters on the heavy truck arrived at the scene of the fire twenty-three minutes later, doing a distance of over fourteen miles. The brigade found the villagers making a splendid fight against the fires. Every man was carrying water and their efforts kept the fire from spreading more.

Chief Gimblett said this morning, "They certainly did great work with the buckets and had been battling the fire for some time before we arrived. It was a spectacular fire. The two-storey frame structure, the general store formerly owned by Choates were burned to the ground. It was in this store that the fire started. I believe it must have been combustion from a greasy rag. The fire spread to the garage and blacksmith shop next door, a two-storey structure, and it was consumed. The house next in line, a brick building, was partly burned. The fine work of the bucket brigade prevented the fire from spreading on the other side."

The Chief remarked that there were small explosions coming from the general store which he thought were caused by the ammunition stored there and the paint pails bursting. Fireman Jim McFarlane was covered with burning paint when a pail exploded beside him, and he had to turn the hose on himself.

The Brigade connected the pumper to the small raceway, and soon had streams of water playing on the furious blaze. However, the fire was not out for some hours, and it was after six o'clock this morning before the Chief and his men returned to the city.

LEAGUE URGES CONCILIATION

LUGANO, Switzerland, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press)—The Council of the League of Nations to-day sent a cablegram to the governments of Paraguay and Bolivia urging settlement of the border dispute by conciliation.

After a general exchange of views the Council of the League of Nations adjourned to-day without having made any decision on the Paraguayan-Bolivian dispute. It was planned to hold another meeting later in the day.

When the Council separated it was on the understanding that Foreign Minister Briand of France and Sir Eric Drummond, league secretariat, would prepare a tentative draft of a cablegram which might be forwarded to both governments.

Hold Mass Meetings

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press). — Mass meetings were held here yesterday and groups of university students paraded the streets as the demonstration of farewell to cadets of the military academy who are to leave for Concepcion to take part in the military manoeuvers.

Newspapers say many prominent persons are volunteering for military service. Directors of banks said the crisis over the Bolivian affair had not been felt in financial circles.

Clamor For War.

LAPAZ, Bolivia, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Mass meetings in support of the Government's attitude on the Paraguayan frontier dispute were held yesterday. Volunteers are flooding the administration with offers of service. At Trinidad a full regiment of one thousand men was organized and asked to be sent to the frontier. Daniel Salamanca, who headed the Bolivian delegation to the boundary conference at Buenos Aires, said negotiations showed that diplomatic attempts to settle the dispute were futile. He declared war was the only alternative.

Withdrew From Conference.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Bolivia withdrew from the Pan-American Conference on arbitration and conciliation, following the efforts of the conference to settle the Paraguayan-Bolivian dispute.

Five Prisoners Felled Fighting Sing Sing Fire; 1,600, Free In Yard, Stand Quietly In Darkness

OSSINING, N.Y., Dec. 11.—Five firemen—all prison inmates—were overcome by smoke early Sunday evening while fighting a potentially bad blaze in a Sing Sing factory building. Because of the prompt work of the prison fire companies, the damage to the factory and its contents was held down to about $10,000.

The blaze started when 1,600 prisoners were having their Sunday afternoon freedom in the large yard. They were about to be taken back to their cells when Keeper Fred Stoddard noticed a wisp of smoke eddying from the first floor window of the building. He turned in an alarm, and the prison fire company of twenty-four men—headed by Frank McLaughlin, an employe, and Gus Guillane, a prisoner—assembled.

While the prisoners stood quietly by and watched, the hoses were connected and the firemen entered the burning building. Chief Guillame was overcome by smoke three times and finally was forcibly removed to the hospital. Four of his men, Louis Weller, Ralph Russo, Roland Seed and "Gyp" Kanade also were over come and taken to the hospital. The fire was not entirely extinguished until almost 9 o'clock.

ONTARIO'S EDUCTIONAL SYSTEM LEADS WORLD CLAIMS PREMIER

Minister of Education Outlines Policy of Department in Smith's Falls Address.

AUXILIARY CLASSES.

Intends To Make Good Canadians Out of Non-English Settlers in Province.

SMITHS FALLS, Ont., Dec. 11.—(Special to Examiner).—Ontario's educational training system leads the world, Premier Ferguson declared here last night in addressing the Women's Canadian Club at the town hall.

Leading men of other countries recognized that the system here was superior to that anywhere else, said Mr. Ferguson, who reviewed the various phrases where the government was reaching out to meet children labouring under disadvantages, and families in isolated districts of Ontario. Success and encouragement, he said was being derived from education by correspondence and the railway educational coaches which aim to teach the English language to all with the view of making good Canadian citizens of non-English settlers and in which the educational department had valued assistance from the railway companies.

Bowmanville School

He told of the work at the training school for unruly boys at Bowmanville from which one hundred boys were sent to good positions in three years, the auxiliary classes in schools for the building up of upwards of three thousand children below normal mentality the Orillia Institution where almost fourteen hundred deficient children alone are being reclaimed and the blind school at Brantford, the deaf Institute at Belleville, he himself had been tremendously touched and impressed by this worrk of humanity, he said. It was the purpose of the government to develop facilities to improve conditions of life, he said.

Premier Ferguson related some of his impressions gathered on his recent visit to Geneva when he attended the International Labor conference. Canada and Ontario were complimented by visitors there in that Labor and Social conditions in Canada were better than anywhere else in the world he said.

Mrs. Ferguson who accompanied the Premier was presented during the evening with a beautiful bouquet from the Women's Canadian Club to which she graciously expressed her appreciation. Mrs. R. Hawkins, president of the club, presided. An interesting musical program of local talent was enjoyed. A very cordial vote of thanks from the Canadian Club to Premier Ferguson was expressed by Mrs. "Dr." Summers. At the close a reception was held for the Premier and Mrs. Ferguson.

Influenza Outbreak Is Not Widespread

WASHINGTON, December 11.—(Canadian Press.) — Although in an epidemic stage in some sections the public health service officials do not believe the present outbreak of influenza is as widespread as those that swept the country in 1918 and 1920. Nor is it considered as virulent, for the death rate thus far is low.

DEAF SCHOOL HEAD IS DEAD

Dr. Charles B. Coughlin, Principal of Belleville Institution, Passes Away.

END WAS UNEXPECTED.

BELLEVILLE, December 11. — Dr. Charles B. Coughlin, Superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf, died very suddenly yesterday afternoon at the institution. He had not been in the best of health since his return from a convention in the South, but his demise was quite unexpected. He was at his office yesterday afternoon and intended to go for a drive with his wife. Before leaving the yard in the car Dr. Coughlin suffered a heart attack, collapsed and expired before medical assistance could be summoned.

Born Near Norwood.

The late Dr. Coughlin was born in Asphodel Township, near Norwood, in 1862, being the son of the late Richard and Catherine Coughlin. He entered Trinity University, Toronto and graduated later in medicine. He practiced in Pt. Arthru and Peterboro before being called to his present position. A Conservative in politics, he contested a seat in Western Ontario in the Provincial Legisalture, but was defeated. When the late Sir James Whitney came into power Dr. Coughlin was appointed Superintendent of the O.S.D., which position he had occupied for the past 22 years.

Deceased married Miss Hannah Piggott of Peterborough.Surviving are his widow, three sisters and one brother. Deceased had been instrumental in raising the school for the deaf to the high standard which it holds in educational circles. When the new addition to the present school was contemplated Dr. Coughlin was the guiding spirit, and many of his ideas were incorporated in the new structure.

Travelled Extensively.

He had travelled extensively and had been honored by every large educational institution on this continent.

He was a member of the Knights of Columbus and the Catholic Church giving much of his time for the advancement of the order and the church. A member of the Rotary Club he took a personal interest in crippled children work. He was also a member of the Bay of Quinte Country Club, and an ardent golfer.

WOULD STOP RE-MARRYING OF DIVORCEES

Abbe Casgrain Urges Greater Supervision in Re-marrying Cases in Canada.

PRESENT SYSTEM WRONG.

Recommendations Will Be Placed Before Authorities For Safeguarding of Immigrant Girls.

(Special to The Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Quebec, Dec. 11. — European and American divorcees, whatever their social rank, will have to think twice before planning to remarry in Canada. There will be difficulties in their path, if Abbe Casgrain gets his way.

The distinguished Catholic Chaplain of the Port of Quebec, whose work on behalf of immigrant girls has brought him into prominence, told the Catholic Women's League of Montreal that he will place two recommendations at once before the Department of Immigration in Ottawa.

Safeguard Immigrant Girls.

The first of these is intended for the safeguarding of the unaccompanied young immigrant girl, particularly those from Central Europe, who do not know English, and for this reason, and because of their youth, are in danger of exploitation, it was claimed. The Abbe will ask the authorities that such girls come out only on permits issued by the Immigration Department; secondly, Abbe Casgrain will recommend that greater supervision in cases of divorced persons coming here with the intention of being married in Canada, be exercised. He will advise that great care be taken to ascertain whether in the circumstances of their divorces, there will be any moral turpitude, proven persons against whom there is such proof being already debarred by law from entering Canada.

"In our immigration, what we want is not quantity—but quality. I expect the answer I shall get at Ottawa will be: 'Why doesn't the Catholic Church attend to these things?' he remarked. What I argue is that the system is a wrong one."

GAS BY-LAW IS ENDORSED

Committee of Whole Council Passed in Favor of By-laws.

PUBLIC MEETING.

The City Council at a meeting of the committee of the whole yesterday afternoon unanimously endorsed the proposed gas by-law and the Johnson Motor by-law which will be submitted to the electors on the first of January. Plans were made to give the ratepayers the fullest information on the by-laws and a public meeting will be called between Christmas and New Years when the questions will be thoroughly discussed. The following resolution was passed asking the Mayor to call a public meeting for the discussion of the gas and Johnson Motor by-law and to ask a Hydro representative to come to Peterborough to be able to give all possible information to the electorate and that the Council unanimously endorses both by-laws.

Woman Pours Gasoline On Her Clothing Husband Fails In Attempt To Check Flames

LAUREL, Miss, Dec. 10.—Mrs. Allen Boyd, 40 years old, took her own life here by soaking her clothing with gasoline and then setting fire to it, while her husband was burned so seriously in a vain attempt to check the flames that he is in the local hospital in a critical condition. The motive of the suicide is a mystery, although friends of the woman indicated a belief that she was mentally unbalanced.

Returning to his home at Ninth street and Eleventh avenue from his work as foreman of one of the departments of the Eastman-Gardiner Lumber Company, Mr. Boyd greeted his wife and daughter and prepared for a peaceful evening with his family. While supper was being prepared there was a burst of flame and a shriek. The man rushed to the rear and saw his wife enveloped in fire.

While he fought to save his wife, his daughted went to obtain help. His hands and arms were badly burned during his efforts, and he barely escaped with his own life as the fire quickly spread. The cottage was virtually destroyed before firemen could subdue the flames.

"Suicide" was the coroner's verdict. Besides her husband and daughter here, Mrs. Boyd is survived by a son who is in Texas.

King's Physicians Are Waging Fight For Patient's Life

Official Bulletin Is Brief and Non-Committal, Conveys Little of Interest To General Public and Carries No Belief of Change For Better.

POWERS OF RESISTANCE HAVE BEEN EBBING FOR DAYS PRINCE OF WALES IS EXPECTED IN LONDON TO-NIGHT

Heir To Throne Is Speeding Across France in Private Car Belonging to Italian Prince, Drawn By Finest Locomotives of Europe and Crack Train Crew.

LONDON, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—King George's physicians were waging a fight against death this morning. Unofficially it was said that the chances of his recovery were slight.

The official bulletin, which was brief and still non-committal, conveyed little to the general public that there was any change for the better.

It was evident that persistent fever which has wracked the King's body for three weeks and which has been sapping his strength still gripped him.

Daily reports have made it evident that the King's powers of resistance have been ebbing for days, under the strain of lung infection. The statement in the bulletin that there was no further diminution of strength after a night which brought some hours of sleep gave some comfort to the anxious subjects. Whether this was natural sleep was not stated in the bulletin.

Increasing public concern over the King's conditions was shown by the growing size of the crowds outside the palace. The throng was large today, despite the biting winds which swept across the exposed plaza.

Not Satisfactory.

It was stated authoritatively to-day that although the doctors were able to say there was no further impairment of the King's strength, to-day's bulletin was not regarded as satisfactory in palace circles. The anxiety which prevailed among the members of the Royal household yesterday remained unallayed.

Continuance of the King's high temperature, it was pointed out, means that the infection which returned in some measure yesterday, still existed. Although the fever was not worse the infection had not improved.

Lord Dawson of Penn, returned to Buckingham Palace just before three o'clock this afternoon. The Queen did not leave for her usual afternoon drive.

The Press Association was reliably informed at 3.45 this afternoon that there had been no change in the King's condition since morning.

Record-breaking Run.

Making a record-breaking run across Europe, the Prince of Wales was expected to reach London at 10.30 to-night, fully twelve hours in advance of the best time previously estimated.

It is uncertain whether the Prince will see the King to-night. If His Majesty is sleeping when he arrives, it will be unwise to disturb him, and the Prince's visit will be deferred till early morning.

With the Prince of Wales nearing home, there are still two sons of the King far from home. The Duke of Gloucester, third son, who was on a hunting trip in Africa with the Prince, left Cape Town last Friday on a mail steamer, and is not expected to reach home until December 24.

The King's youngest son, Prince George, is still serving as Lieutenant Windsor aboard H.M.S. Durban at Hamilton, Bermuda. He is being kept informed of his father's condition, but so far no order has been issued directing him to return.

The Duke of York, second son, has been in London during the King's illness, as has been Princess Mary, the King's only daughter.

A slight accident to a wheel of one of the cars on the Prince's train delayed it four minutes this morning in Switzerland. When the train resumed its dash for Boulogne, France, it hoped to make up for lost time.

So rapid has been the progress of the Prince that it was estimated he might arrive in London late to-night instead of to-morrow morning.

Boulogne is a brief one hour voyage from the cliffs of England and the run from the Channel to London takes 95 minutes.

Crack Train Crew.

The Prince is travelling in a private car belonging to the heir to the Italian throne, Prince Umberto of Piedmont. The finest locomotives of Europe and a crack train crew were pressed into service to speed him on the last lap of the long journey from the hunting grounds of Africa to the bedside of his Royal father.

BELLPORT, France, December 11 (Canadian Press). — The Prince of Wales, speeding to the bedside of King George, arrived here at 10.42 a.m. to-day, and 12 minutes later left for Boulogne. While the train stopped, the Prince walked up and down the platform and received the salutes of the local officials.

AMIENS, France, December 11. — Canadian Press. — The special train, bearing the Prince of Wales passed through Amiens at 5.25 p.m., en route to Boulogne. The Prince's train was exactly on time, and it appeared certain he would make the regular channel steamer at Boulogne if he so desired.

BOULOGNE, France, December 11. (Canadian Press.) — The Prince of Wales speeding to the bedside of King George, arrived at Boulogne at 6.45 o'clock this evening, and started on the last lap of his six thousand mile dash from equitorial Africa, left at 7.10 p.m. aboard the regular mail boat Biarritz.

OTTAWA, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Owing to the serious nature of the news received at Government House to-day on the condition of the King, Viscount Willingdon has suspended his trip to Quebec. Lady Willingdon is already there and the Governor-General was to have left in the morning.

VICTIM OF THUGS IS BURNED ALIVE

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—In charred clothing, some of which still smouldered, the body of an unidentified man was found to-day on the highway near Utica, Michican. Police believed the man had been burned alive, though there was a bullet hole in the head. Drawn features and presence of a can containing gasoline led to the belief that he had been taken there alive, his clothing saturated with gasoline and set ablaze.

FINAL SESSION IS ADJOURNED FOR ONE WEEK

County Council of Northumberland and Durham Expresses Sympathy For Bereaved Family.

DIED IN HARNESS.

Col. MacNachtan Was Born Eighty Years Ago in Village of Newcastle.

COBOURG, Dec. 11 (Special to The Examiner).—Heavy-hearted and hushed by the tragically sudden death of Colonel Neil F. MacNachtan, their clerk and treasurer, the Council of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham met for a few minutes Monday afternoon, merely to adjourn for one week, and meanwhile to express their sympathy to the bereaved family of their faithful and beloved official. The council will attend his funeral in a body on Thursday afternoon.

The final sessions of the year were not due to begin until Monday night, but a majority of the members had arrived in town early in the afternoon and were immediately drawn together as if by instinct, at least by a common emotion and a sense of profound personal loss, to their chambers where their clerk had been for so long their rallying personality, friend and counsellor, and from which he had been carried, dead, only an hour before they met. When Warden C. H. Davidson of Campbellford drew up at his hotel the body of Col. MacNachtan had just been taken into an undertaker's rooms nearby. The announcement of death was the first incredible greeting he received, and the sable, symbolic van still stood at the curb, verifying the shocking news.

The Council's Meeting.

When the Council assembled in that spontaneous, emergent meeting, for once and the last time, their servant and also their mentor was missing. He who had so often called the roll was himself, ultimately and eternally absent. The Council that had so often accepted his suggestions of procedure with incalculable accruement of self-respect and decorum had to strike out in its own way of improvising a form of tribute worthy of the "Colonel" and also of his approval—the correct thing, manly and orderly, and, of course, with deep sentiment, but with the sentimental properly restrained. That was the Colonel's way.

Dr. Ferris took up the brief duty of clerk, and the solemn, unprecedented session began. Warden Davidson, still affected by the shock, referred to the sadness that overwhelmed the members and of the loss they and the United Counties had suffered in Col. MacNachtan's death.

Deputy-Reeve Bygott moved, seconded by Reeve George Thompson of Cobourg, that a committee composed of the Warden, Deputy-Reeve, A. R. Willmott of Cobourg and Reeve W. J. Jibb of Hamilton, prepare a message of condolence and present it personally to the bereaved family.

Reeve W. F. Elliott of Murray Township moved, seconded by Reeve Wm. Grills, of Seymour Township, that the Council attend the funeral in a body, and the adjournment until next Monday was proposed by Reeve W. Wood of Millbrook and seconded by Reeve Elliott.

He Died In Harness.

Colonel MacNachton literally died in harness. He had returned from lunch, and presently while joking with his son, Major E. A. MacNachtan, assistant clerk, who was in an adjoining room of the office, about some trifle of hanging up his coat. A momentary silence, and the son heard two sudden, heavy gasps. In a little while his father was dead in his

WHITE STAR LINER CELTIC IN GREAT DANGER OF BEING BROKEN UP ON ROCKS OFF COBH

Fourteen Hours of Frantic Efforts To Release Vessel Have Failed.

MUST REFLOAT TO-DAY.

COBH, Ireland, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—The White Star liner Celtic, one time queen of the ocean, lay last night like a stricken monster of the deep on a ledge of rocks at an exposed point at the entrance of Cork Harbor.

There was a huge hole in her bottom and a big rent in her side, while twelve feet of water was in some of her compartments.

The 21,000-ton liner which left New York on December 1, and later called at Boston, went on the rocks during a gale early yesterday morning, and after 14 hours of frantic efforts to refloat her, she was still clutched by a group of rocks picturesquely known as the Cow and Calf off Roches Point Lighthouse.

Without panic, without loss of life or even injury, all of her 253 passengers were transhipped in a rough sea and brought safely to land in tenders aided by a British cruiser. Later in the day part of the crew also was taken off and landed.

All mariners who flocked to the outermost points of the shore to see the stricken ship last night, were fearful that the great vessel, which had survived a wartime torpedoing, would be a total wreck. High seas were breaking over her bow and she seemed literally impaled and immovable on the surmerged crags.

Efforts to haul the Celtic off the rocks were abandoned last night but will be renewed at high tide to-day, in the presence of White Star officials and the insurance authorities. While tugs stood by, the work of patching up the breach in her hull and of pumping out the water within her, went on in the hope of effecting temporary repairs sufficiently strong to withstand the seas until to-day's attempt.

Must Release To-Day.

Unless she can be hauled off within 24 hours, the belief prevails that the giant liner was doomed.

One of the dramatic features of the disaster was the presence of 30 of the crew of the ill-fated Vestris which suffered disaster just four weeks ago. For a second time within a month they went over the side of a stricken vessel.

The Celtic was carried on the rocks at Roches Point at 5.40 o'clock yesterday morning by a 70-mile gale. The storm was so violent that the pilot was not able to get aboard the big ship, which was calling at the first port since leaving Boston.

The Celtic's captain, seizing a chance during a lull in the dark hours of the morning, was almost in safe waters when a violent gust swung the liner upon the rocks with a crash which shook the ship fearfully. The worst damage was in the engine-room, and how some of the men there escaped is extraordinary.

Passengers Safe

Tenders brought the passengers ashore at Cobh. Later they proceeded by special train to Dublin en route to Kingstown and Holyhead.

Latest reports from the vessel stated that her No. 3 hold was under twelve feet of water, numbers 3 and 4 stokeholds under eleven feet, and the after stokehold under four feet. The engine room had three feet of water over her tank top and the number 10 double-bottomed tank was full. There was no steam aboard.

John Keown, one of the crew of the Vestris, who was en route to his home in Liverpool, remarked that it was exactly four weeks ago yesterday that he was shipwrecked on the Vestris and was saved after fifteen hours in the water.

He was in his berth when the Celtic struck and heard some women screaming, but there was really no panic. Everything soon went on in quiet fashion and breakfast was served the passengers aboard before they were transferred to the tender "Failte," which is the Gaelic word, meaning "welcome."

As the passengers were landing the destroyer Sesame left her moorings opposite the landing quay and went out to render any assistance that might be needed.

One passenger, describing his experience said that the weather was very bad off Cobh. About three o'clock yesterday morning the wind was blowing wildly and big seas were running off the harbor mouth. An effort was made to come inside during a lull in the gale, and it was while the ship was edging in without a pilot that the accident took place.

The vessel was forced on by wind and sea to a rocky ground known as the Cow and Calf. Most of the passengers were abed except about seventy who had planned to land at Cobh, but almost all aboard knew that something had happened. At times the liner rocked from side to side and it was apparent to all that she had stopped forward motion. Soon it was learned that she was stuck hard and fast, and was rapidly taking in water in some of the holds. Nevertheless there was very little excitement and excellent order prevailed.

PATRONS ARE GIVEN BONUS

$620 DISTRIBUTED

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BURNBRAE, Dec. 11.—At the annual meeting of the Brae Cheese and Butter Company, held on Saturday, it was revealed that the season's output was the largest recorded since 1925, the 1926 output being 103,077 pounds of cheese, and the average price being 21 cents. This is an advance of nearly three cents over last year and is larger, due to the fact that the highest price was obtained during the heavy flow of milk in June, July and August. The average price for the butter fat was 52 cents a pound. After deducting all expenses and paying a bonus of ¼ mill to the maker as well as retaining a comfortable balance for 1929, a further payment was made to the patrons from the proceeds of the whey cream amounting to about six hundred and twenty dollars.

Excellent Showing.

The maker, Leslie Shillinglaw, had a very successful year and now ranks with the leaders in the Central Ontario district, being in fourth place on the actual score, just a short distance behind the third place man, David Wallace, of Prince of Wales factory, another Burnbrae company. In addition to this fine average, Mr. Shillinglaw had the splendid showing of 100 per cent. first grade cheese, with two shipments special grade. This reflects very highly on the workmanship of this young maker, who has agreed to stay for a fifth term at this factory.

Malcolm Totten was the president during 1928. For many years the Brae Cheese Company had as its president, Alex Hume, who is known to nearly every dairyman in the Dominion, as a judge of dairy cattle, and who has twice been honored with the presidency of the Ayrshire Breders' Association. The Hume firm still sends milk to the factory from their herd of high-producing Ayrshires and can boast of the best average test of any herd whose milk is sent to the factory. For eight months the herd test was below 3.5 and usually hear the 4 per cent. mark.

Two of the 1928 board of directors, George Anderson and Bogart Linn expressed a desire to be relieved of their positions and the 1929 board reads as follows: Malcolme Totte, president; Percy Iddle, Edwin Wilson, Bert Hay, Robert J. Cleugh and Harry Bedford.

Mr. Nicol, of the Bank of Montreal, spoke to the men, expressing confidence in the outlook for dairy markets next year. Mr. Murray, district instructor, could not be present as he was in attendance at the Stanwood annual meeting the same afternoon. Roy Brown, maker in this factory, had the honor of leading the Central Ontario makers with a very fine score and having a large percentage in special trade.

MR. AND MRS. WALLACE MOIR CELEBRATE SIXTIETH WEDDING

Started Life In Canada As a Blacksmith, Later Took Up Farming.

ANNUAL INCOME $200.

Both Possess a Fine Sense of Humor Which Serves to Pass the Time.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 11 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Sixty years ago yesterday, Benjamin Wallace Moir and Ann Buchanan were united in the holy bonds of matrimony after the most approved fashion of their native land, Scotland, by the late Rev. Dr. Neill. The wedding was a gay affair, with all the frills which the times demanded. There were fifty guests assembled for the social function, and much happiness was wished the bride and groom. Yesterday saw sixty years of that happiness past, and every indication for many more years to come. Yesterday afternoon, there were fourteen children and grandchildren to sit at the dinner which was tendered the aged couple on their diamond jubilee. Gifts, not of diamonds, but of a more practical and suitable nature were presented to them. Although the afternoon was filled with the gay celebration, when evening came, the family departed leaving Mr. and Mrs. Moir and their daughter, Mrs. White of Bruce Mines, Algoma, to enjoy a quiet evening in their own home.

Benjamin Wallace Moir is a native son of Scotland. He celebrated his eighty-second birthday on the eleventh day of November this year. Mrs. Moir was born in Canada, but is of Scotch descent. She was married on the same farm as where she was born. Although he is well past the alloted three score and ten years, Ben Moir, as he is generally known, and which he prefers to other forms of address, is far from being as feeble as his years would imply. His one compaint is that his eyesight is failing, and this is not a complaint but an admission. He is a man of small stature but broad shouldered and possessed of a keen sense of humor. His eyes twinkled as he recalled the humorous events of other days. He came to Canada in 1867. Born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, he learned the blacksmithing trade from his father. In Canada, he only followed this occupation for a few months when he was with his uncle in the Niagara district, and for about two months in Campbellford. This was in the employ of the late Robert Johnston, whose shop was on the site now occupied by the Campbellford Cloth Company's mill.

Was Farm Hand

Farming was the profession which beckoned to the young Scot, and he hired out to a man named Allen, who owned one thousand acres a few miles east of where Campbellford now stands. This man, Allen, was an ex-naval officer, and ran his business with naval precision and discipline. Of the thousand acres, about four hundred and fifty were under cultivation. The remainder was still forest. The farming was done with five teams of horses and two yoke of oxen. It was while employed on the Allen farm that Mr. Moir was married and rented a farm on the English Line. This farm is now owned by Thomas Russel. Three years later he purchased fifty acres near Bradley Bay and remained there five years. Then he purchased a farm on the tenth concession of Percy township, and the farm is now in the hands of two of his sons, John and Sam. In 1915, Mr. Moir retired from life on the farm and moved to Campbellford. He purchased a small home on Centre street, and is still resident there. For two years he was employed by Neil Thompson, implement agent, but since that time has been content to cultivate his garden and occupy his time with work about his own home. A few months ago when the sewer and water main was being laid on George street, Mr. Moir dug the trench for his connection in twenty hours. The trench was practically fifty feet long and nine feet deep. He worked in half day shifts of five hours each. Even this, he did not consider an accomplishment. He believed that a good man could have dug the same trench in one day, and not have hurt himself with over-work.

Asked about some of the doings of years ago, Mr. Moir recalled having been one who hauled the stone for the building which now houses the Weston Shoe factory. It was originally erected in 1866 for a wool-

INHABITANTS OF FORMOSA DESCRIBED

Returned Missionary Delivers Address at Millbrook Literary Society.

HOT SPRINGS COMMON

Head Hunters Are Savage Malays From South Sea Islands, Says Speaker.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Dec. 11.—Rev. C. H. Williams, returned missionary from Formosa, was the speaker at the open meeting of the literary society, of the Millbrook Continuation School held in the assembly hall on Friday night, Miss Bertha Lang, president of the M.S.C., occupying the chair.

An opening chorus, "Millbrook High School", and community singing of popular airs, appropriately opened the gathering, Miss Francis Jones presiding at the piano. The next number was a quintette, "The Bells," Miss Elisabeth Russell taking the obligato, the other girls being Misses Jean Stinson, Beatrice Jones, Vaneta Ingram and Francis Jones, Miss H. Hamilton accompanying.

Rev. Mr. William spoke on "The Head Hunters of Formosa", and incidentally gave a great deal of interesting information about this island, which is part of the chain of islands of volcanic origin, extending all the way to the Aleutian Islands off the coast of Alaska and on to the Philippine Islands many miles farther south.

"Formosa is almost directly on the opposite side of the world from here, and if you could bore straight through I do not doubt but you might come out in the banana garden back of my house. I shall never forget my first sight of a volcano, its lurid fires lighting up the sea at night; it was most startling as I looked out of a port hole of our vessel. We have a volcano in Formosa but it is a 'dead' one; our summer home is on its side, and we sometimes go down into the crater and look at a lake which forms its center."

Hot Springs Common.

Hot springs are common on this island, so that food may be conveniently cooked without the necessity of kindling a fire, and the Japs, who are very fond of baths in extremely hot water, will sit for long periods in this practically boiling water, and then splash buckets of cold water over themselves once they come out almost scalded from the high temperature to which they have subjected themselves.

Some of the disagreeable things are the snakes, many of great size, which are encountered in the homes, on the thatched roofs, in the gardens, almost anywhere; they catch the rats which are another nuisance, and there are also lizards of various kinds and dimensions, so that even meal times are frequently made exciting with their intrusions. Ants, black, white and red, are other, and unwelcome, visitors.

The Head Hunters are wild savages, Malays from the South Sea Islands; they have long hair, and are very dirty in their habits and persons; they often rub the blood of animals into their skin to make it tough, and seldom wash themselves. The women varnish their teeth black, smoke long, black cigars and chew betel nut, the brown juice running from the corners of their mouths.

Fond of Music.

These savages are very fond of music, and have most ingenious ways of producing it. Shedding blood is part of their religion, no blood on the hands barring them

CATTLE, GRAIN, PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 11. — The right kind of cattle sell steady to strong to a good demand. Fleshy butchers are moving well. A good many cows made up yesterday's receipts. Buyers are taking anything of quality for Christmas kill, and if moderate runs come to the market, the possibility that present prices will be sustained is likely.

Choice butcher steers and heifers sell for $10 to $10.50, which is up 25 cents per cwt. from last week's closing. Choice heavy steers bring $9 to $10. Medium and common butchers sell steady, with a slower feeling than is shown for better type.

Choice fat cows move readily at $7.75 to $8.25 with quite a number of fancy bringing $8.50. Canners and cutters sell between $4 and $5.50.

A steady market prevails on all classes of bulls. Light butcher bulls are $8 to $8.50 and heavy are $7.50 to 58. Bolognas sell up to $6.50.

A few fancy baby beeves sold at $14, but somewhat lower feeling is noticed in the trading. Bulk of choice are going at $11 to $13.

Springers and milkers are very slow, with a slump on sales. Choice forward springers are $100 to $120. Strictly fresh milkers sell between $75 and $90.

Calves are selling strong on a light run. Choice range between $15 and $16. An odd fancy sold higher. Grassers $6 to $8.

Hogs yesterday were $9 fo.b. selects, although packers held out for some length of time trying to obtain their bid of $8.75.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—There was no improvement in the foreign demand for Canadian grain here yesterday and little business was transacted by local exporters. The domestic trade was also inactive, but prices were steady.

Prices for all grades of spring and winter wheat flour were well maintained under a good demand.

A fair trade was done in all lines of millfeed and values were firm. Standard grades of rolled oats were also in good demand and the undertone to the market was steady.

A feature of the egg trade was the weakness that developed in the market for all grades of storage and fresh firsts and seconds. This was attributed to the arrival of more plentiful supplies of British Columbia fresh eggs, and the easier movement in storage eggs brought about by the colder weather. Fresh extras held firm. Receipts were 2,051 cases.

The tone of the butter market was firmer and prices were marked up a fraction which was due to the increasing demand and the small supplies on spot. Receipts were 70 cases.

Extreme dullness again marked the local and export trade in cheese, but prices were about steady.

Potatoes were firm under a good inquiry. P.E.I. White sold at 77c and Green Mountains at 85c per 90 lbs. in bags.

Canadian beans sold at $5.25 per bushel, with jobbers offering at 9½c per lb., yellow eyes at 9c.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 11. —(Canadian Press).—Liquidating sales, said to be largely to settle accounts for houses with eastern connections, had a noticeable bearish influence yesterday on every kind of grain. In various quarters, this selling was associated with uncertainties prevailing in the stock market, and the effect was added to in a material degree at times by speculative selling on the part of Chicago traders. Throughout the grain list, closing prices were near to the day's bottom level.

Wheat finished unsettled ⅝ to ½ to ⅞ to 1¾ net lower, corn ⅝ to ⅞ to 1c off, oats ⅛ to ½ to ⅝c down, and provisions showing 2c to 10c drop. Downturns in the wheat market yesterday were in the face of 1,166,000 bushels falling off in the United States visible supply total, and notwithstanding that a considerable amount of future delivery buying ascribed to eastern sources was in evidence at some stages. Otherwise the market lacked support at substantial decline. Contributing to the downward trend of wheat was news that in the last week Europe had taken only 9,831,000 bushels from North America, a curtailment of more than 5,000,000 bushels that emphasized the reduced export buying record made during November.

Moreover, the amount of wheat on ocean passage to Europe yesterday was shown to be 5,168,000 bushels in excess of the total a year ago, despite a decrease of 4,492,000 bushels in the last week. An additional bearish factor was apparent further dwindling of export demand yesterday for wheat from North America, business in all positions being estimated at hardly 300,000 bushels. It was also voted that stocks of bonded wheat in this country had increased about 7,000,000 bushels for the week.

Big receipts of corn, 770 cars yesterday at Chicago, and heavy selling of corn into store here, with weather likely to hasten the corn movement, did much to bull corn prices down. Besides, the corn visible supply yesterday showed 3,251,000 bushels increase. On the other hand talk was current that if Argentine corn clearances diminish as predicted, Europe will have to re-purchase United States corn that of late has been sold back to this country. Oats sympathized with today's declines in corn and wheat.

Provisions reflected setbacks in hog values and in cereals as well.

VANCOUVER WHEAT

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Wheat prices here yesterday were:

Cash prices.—Wheat: 1 Northern, 117⅜; 2 Northern, 114⅜; 3 Northern, 108⅜; No. 4 wheat, 102½; No. 5 wheat, 90⅜c; No. 6 wheat, 76¼; feed, 71⅜.

SUGAR MARKET QUIET.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.— (Canadian Press.)—The raw sugar market was quiet and unchanged yesterday at 3.93 for spots duty paid. No sales were reported, except that a 8,400 bag cargo of Porto Rican put through at the close of last week at 3.95. It was believed additional quantities were available at the same figure.

Price changes in raw sugar futures were narrow with the market showing no decided trend either way, closing at 1 point advance to 1 point decline. Covering by December shorts gave that position a generally steady tone, in absence of any aggressive selling, while the later months were a little lower under liquidation and selling by houses with trade connections. The inactivity in the spot market seemed to check aggressive operations, and traders were inclined to limit fresh commitments and await developments. Approximate sales were only 17,700 tons. December closed 2.03; Jan. 2.03; March 2.10; May 2.16; July 2.23; Sept. 2.30; Dec. 2.35.

The refined market was unchanged at 5.25 for fine granulated with business chiefly comprised of withdrawals on old contracts.

PRODUCE MARKET.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—The local egg market is steady. B.C. eggs are offering on spot at, extras 58c, firsts 52c, pullet extras 48c. Dealers are quoting country shippers for ungraded eggs delivered, cases returned, extras 55c-60c; firsts 48c-52c, pullet extras 41c-43c, seconds 32c-33c. Manitoba turkeys are offering f.o.b. at, specials 36c, one's 34c, two's 30c.

Montreal—The egg market here is easier to-day, with fresh prices lower and storage eggs still weakening. Alberta turkeys sold here on Saturday at 37c for birds over 12 pounds. Saskatchewan turkeys sold for 36½c for birds over 12 pounds. Manitoba is asking 37c for specials.

Saskatoon—Poultry prices here are still lower. Dealers are quoting for dressed turkeys over 15 pounds 27c, 10-15 pounds 32c, 8-10 pounds 23c, 6-8 pounds 19c, old toms 22c, No. 2's, over 10 pounds 16c, under 10 pounds 14c; No. 1 chickens, all weights 19c, No. 2's 16c.

Vancouver—Receipts are increasing steadily and dealers are now quoting producers for ungraded eggs delivered extras 43c, firsts 37c-38c, pullet extras 35c.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, December 11. — One of the results of a wider outlet for creamery butter yesterday was the marking up of prices to a higher level. When the market resumed operations expected activity presaged at the week-end boosted prices to ¼c higher to a top of 41½c per pound for finest creamery solids. In a jobbing way the spread was narrowed down to a range of from 41¼c to 41½c per pound for finest grades with extra fancy stocks changing hands in small broken lots at fractionally higher values than the "market" quotations.

On the whole better market conditions were reported from curb sources with prospects of steady improvement from now on as Christmas trading expands.

The steamship Devon was due to arrive at New York on Sunday from New Zealand. Latest information on the subject of New Zealand butter imports places the cargo for United States and Canadian markets at 81,000 boxes, instead of 65,000 boxes previously expected. From this amount 5,000 boxes are billed for unloading at New York and the remainder will likely be unloaded at Halifax about the middle of the present month. Dealers here do not, however, anticipate distribution of butter to the Toronto retail trade much before the end of the year.

All grades of fresh eggs are in good demand and prices show no change from late declines. The market is easier for fresh grades than at this time a week ago, due to current production showing a moderate increase as mild weather continues. Receipts, while by no means liberal from the country, are coming daily in sufficient volume to take care of local inquiry.

The market for cheese remains featureless, with very little demand ruling on spot and inquiry from outside sources limited. Dealers' quotations for No. 1, large, colored, paraffined, and Government graded rule around 21¼c to 21¾c per pound, delivered Toronto.

District Churches

Warkworth Anglican Church

WARKWORTH, Dec. 11. —(Examiner Correspondence).— At the morning service of the Anglican Church, Rev. J. F. B. Belford preached an instructive and interesting sermon on part of the fourth verse of the eleventh chapter of Isiah: "He shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth." From this text the sermon was based on the teachings of the Holy Scripture and its influence in the world through its teachings. In going to church every Sunday we learn some particular train of the Gospel of Jesus Christ no matter what chapter, verse or book of the Bible it may be. Religion is based upon the Scripture. We believe the Bible but how much do we read and study it. This particular duty is noted one nearly enough. Think of a text meditate on it and in this way we will find beauty and majesty as David found it, thus understanding the Scripture better.

The object of these teachings is to fit us in this life to make the work beter. Evil will finely be driven out altogether and Jesus shall reign supreme so far as the world is concerned. If we live accordingly to the Holy Word we then shall have salvation of our souls. Let us then study and obey the Gospel and spread the influence of His Word.

Also Mr. Belford thanked the congregation in a few well chosen words for their gift, seventy-five dollars, which was presented to him just before the service.

AT ROSENEATH.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, Dec. 11. — "And with the residue, he maketh a god." These words, Rev. M. R. Brown preached from on Sunday evening, Isiah 44, verse 17. He said: "This is one of the unfamiliar stories of the Bible. It portrays a man who feels within him some instinctive necessity of being religious. He goes to a fir tree that he has planted for his sole purpose of making a wooden idol with its lumber. He cuts it down and takes it home, cutting it into pieces, and using it till all is gone, and nothing is left but the branches, twigs and chips. With this residue he maketh a god. He gathers up thees fag ends to carry out his sublime purpose. He then falls down before this half built, half sufficient image, and prays 'Save me, for thou art my god.' He had started out with good intentions but other interests crowded out the main trunk interests of life.

"All the forces of life may be compared to the large tree with wide-speading branches. A man has just so much strength, time and money, and if he exhausts his store of these gifts in one way he cannot us them in another. If a man gives all these energies to Self, it is certain he cannot give anything but the fag-ends of his life to Christian service. Many people are giving the fag-ends of their lives to Him who has a right to the first, and the best. Never was there a day when one could hear Christ speaking more clearly, as we hear Him to-day. Those possessing the Spirit of Christ will not give the fag-ends of their means to the great cause of Christ in home or foreign missions. Therefore let us live nobly and unselfishly, and when the December of life comes, and the skies are grey and the chill winds blow, and no flowers appear upon the earth, memory will bring to you roses in December. What a mighty privilege we have to do noble things, to set the wheels of missions on that great road to Christian triumph. It may be a little sacrifice, but that little sacrifice will bring to us when the time comes —Roses in December."

The United Church Sunday School is preparing a concert to be given on Christmas night.

MARMORA GIRL WINS CONTEST AT BELLEVILLE

THIRTEEN ENTRIES

Conservation of Our Timber and Reforestation, is Subject of Winning Address.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, December 11. — A young elocutionist of much promise is Margaret O'Connor, eleven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. O'Connor of Marmora Township. On Thursday last at Belleville, this young lady followed up previous triumphs by winning the gold medal donated by Warden S. B. Rollins, in the annual oratorical contest, sponsored by Hastings County Council. The child's natural ability came first to public notice when she successfully competed in the oratorical contest which was a feature of the Deloro jubilee celebration on July 1, 1927.

At the rural school fair, held in Marmora this fall, Margaret was again successful in winning first place. The recent contest was open to those winning first and second prizes at school fairs, thirteen in all competeting. The subject prepared by the winner was "The Conservation of our Timber and Reforestation." Margaret O'Connor is a scholar at the Deloro Separate school. The following is the subject as treated by Margaret:

"Ranking second to agriculture in value of products, our forest industries loom large in Canada's economic structure, and so that the lumbering industry may continue to maintain its position, I wish to address you on the necessity of the conservation of our timber, and also reforestry.

"In the early pioneer days, no value was placed on the timber, the one great object being to get rid of it, and to clear the land as soon as possible. I have heard my grandmother Hogan tell of the time when she settled in the township of Tudor. Her parents, with their family came to this country to take up land near Millbridge, being induced through literature sent out by the immigration agent at Madoc. The pamphlets thus distributed contained glowing accounts of the land to be obtained free by the settler north of Madoc township, on either side of the Hastings road which was then being built from Belleville to Bancroft. This same road of which we of the present day feel so justly proud. As soon as those early settlers had established their families in comfortable log cabins, the task of clearing the land began. The timber being cut, logged, and burned for the ashes, which were then placed in leaches, and the making of potash followed. This potash when sold was the settlers' only source of ready money for the first few years.

Ancient History.

"You will all say this is ancient history, but the point I wish to bring out is how the slaughter of our timber commenced.

"We must all agree that this deforesting was quite justified in those early days; but I sometimes think a great many of the present day fail to realize the value of our timber and wood.

"It is distressing to think of all the valuable timber that has been destroyed by bush fires in recent years, although much has been done by our government to remedy this matter. The aeroplane is the greatest assistance in detecting and controlling forest fires. One great and good work was naming or setting aside one week during April called 'Save the Forest Week.' This together with the Boy Scout movement has done much to lessen the danger from fire among children; and we all know that the children of to-day are the men and women of to-morrow. So for that reason I think the children should be taught to value the young trees.

Money Could be Saved.

"Thousands of dollars could be saved annually if those owning wood lots would use for their fire wood the broken, blemished or fallen timber, instead of heedlessly cutting down the young and growing trees, which in the future would be a valuable asset to the owner. It is a great mistake to clear rough land, as the timber thereon would realize more for the owner than in any other way in which the land might be used.

"Let us bear in mind that our forest area does much to conserve the moisture in the soil. We must also remember that the destruction of our forests drives away our game and removes the haunts of our fur-bearing animals.

"As I have previously stated our hope for the future is in the boys and girls of to-day. So I am going to ask that you gentlemen of the County Council, or as reeves, respectively, of the different municipalities which you represent, will do something for each school in the way of reforestry.

Trees Given Free.

"I understand that the young trees are given free by the government so I suggest that you induce the trustees of each school to purchase near the school at least one acre of land on which to make a start.

"Adjoining our school grounds are thousands of tiny spruce and pine, which were planted on the grounds of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company.

"Should you see fit to start this movement, I feel you will be doing something to perpetuate the memory of our county councillors.

"Before concluding I wish to thank our reeve, Mr. Laycock, who was the means of introducing a school fair at Marmora, and thereby giving us a chance in this oratorical contest.

"I wish in particular to express my gratitude to our Warden, Mr. Rollins, who has always shown such a great interest in education, and has so generously donated prizes for the winners of their contest.

"As the great feast of Christmas, so dear to all, is fast approaching and since this is the closing session of the county council for 1928, let me express to one and all present, my best wishes for a Merry Christmas, and a Bright and Prosperous New Year.

"I thank you."

BROADCAST OLD HOME WEEK.

There is one way, and a most important way, in which local citizens can assist materially in promoting the success of Peterborough's Old Home Week, and that is to constitute themselves volunteer members of the Publicity Committee and help in broadcasting the news of the reunion.

It means everything to the success of the event to have every Peterborough old boy and girl told of Old Home Week as soon as possible.

Here is where the individual citizen can come to the rescue and furnish invaluable assistance.

Every family knows of a former resident living somewhere in Canada or the United States who would be interested in the plans for a homecoming on a huge scale next summer—in fact, most families have a relative or two away from Peterborough who is still warmly attached to the old town.

Why not sit down and write such friends and relatives, tell them all about Old Home Week, and invite them to come back for the celebration.

And write now; it is essential that the news should be distributed not only as widely as possible, but as quickly as possible.

CHRISTMAS TREES.

Judging from statements of forestry officials, there seems no reason why young Canadians should not have their Christmas trees as usual, nor any cause for apprehension that the domestic and export traffic in these trees will do much harm to Canada's timber resources.

Every year at this time well-intentioned people write to the newspapers to complain about the waste of timber represented by the Christmas tree habit.

There is no need, however, to worry.

As a matter of fact, all the Christmas trees cut in this country each year, both for use at home and for sending to the United States, could be grown on an acreage that is only a small fraction of the acreage burned over each year by forest fires.

The quantity, in fact, is so inconsiderable in comparison that it is not considered a factor in the annual depreciation of timber reserves; indeed, where the cutting is done intelligently this thinning out is regarded as a gain rather than a loss as it guarantees better growth for the trees that are left.

Let the youngsters have their trees, they will never be missed from Canada's forests, is the opinion of those best qualified to know the conditions, the officials of the Forestry Department.

A VETERAN SOLDIER.

The sudden death yesterday of Colonel Neil S. MacNachtan, county clerk and treasurer of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, means the loss of a citizen whose name, by reason of his enthusiastic connection with the Canadian Militia, had become almost a household one.

Colonel MacNachtan's interest in military affairs dated back to 1868 when he first joined the Cobourg battery, and was maintained until his death, although his active participation ended some years ago. He was a most enthusiastic artillery officer, and the zeal and energy he exerted on behalf of that branch of the service had much to do with the progress made by artillery corps in this district and with the quick response when artillery recruits were called for in the Great War. He had risen from the ranks to the position of commanding officer of an artillery brigade, and the confidence imposed in his ability is shown by the fact that in 1911 he was honored with the command of the Dominion artillery team which visited England.

In the field of municipal service he was also widely known, having been clerk of the United Counties for thirty-five years.

Many Peterborough friends will sympathize with the bereaved relatives.

A CANADIAN CHRISTMAS.

The effort of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association to make this a produced-in-Canada Christmas by seeking to stimulate the purchase for gift purposes of articles produced in this country, deserves to succeed.

Its success, in fact, means a great deal to the people of this country.

The Christmas shopping business has become a tremendous affair in Canada, and is of vast importance, not only to Canadian merchants, but to Canadian manufacturers and Canadian workers.

It is not too much to say that the livelihood of thousands of Canadians is dependent upon the sale of produced-in-Canada goods during the Christmas shopping season.

If the goods fail to sell the failure will react upon these people; there will be less employment for them next year, and the wages which would otherwise be paid them and through them circulated in various channels of trade will not be distributed.

In showing good-will at Christmas time, therefore, it would be well to extend that good-will first of all to our own citizens, and by supporting and encouraging them by buying the goods which they produce, help them to prosper and in their prosperity contribute to the welfare and progress of the country as a whole.

Give some thought to the origin of the Christmas gifts you purchase at this season, and endeavor, if possible, to confine your buying to produced-in-Canada goods.

Such a policy will make this truly a happy Christmas for the people of Canada.

CANADA'S GOLDEN GRAIN.

Canada's remarkable grain crop, the steady advance northward of the frontier of fertility and the revival of energetic measures for increasing the number of farmer-settlers are already attracting considerable attention among our neighbors. For example, the New York Sun finds that of the 123,713 immigrants who entered the Dominion in the fiscal year to September, 77,440 were farmers and farm workers. Five thousand harvesters from Great Britain out of 8,500 who came to this Continent to help get in the crop are likely to remain, and half of those who came over are expected eventually to become citizens. Farmers are co-operating with the authorities to find winter work for them, paying from $15 to $20 a month.

The United Farmers of the Brandon district, the Sun notes, have adopted a resolution fixing pay for stooking at $4 a day and for threshing at $4.50 a day. This is designed to standardize pay, avert stampedes to sections offering a premium, and prevent men from being deceived by tall tales of unduly high remuneration elsewhere.

Alluring reports of quick financial success in wheat growing draw men to the grain country. The Lethbridge Herald, reporting for the Milk River Valley in Alberta, gives these qualifications: S. I. Harris bought a quarter section at $15 an acre without interest; raised 10,000 bushels, which more than paid for the land. Mr. Loft and N. Pedersen had previously purchased a half section at $23 an acre; half of last year's crop paid for the land in full; this year they threshed a crop of thirty-six bushels an acre of stubbled-in wheat, and now they have just closed a deal for one and a half sections of land adjoining their present holdings.

Mr. Motherwell, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, is now urging the Western farmers to raise the standard of their grain. At present thirty or forty varieties of wheat are produced; he would reduce this number to three or four and he would allow no others to be admitted to No. 1 grade. Canadians realize that their rich, cheap lands offer tempting opportunities to men who like the land and enjoy the speculation of wheat growing. They are doing all they can to make the most of the circumstances in which their nation's lot is cast.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

DOING NOTHING.

The advice has been given by the Right Hon. H. A. L. Fisher, who was the British Minister of Education and is a great authority on this subject, that people should train themselves to do nothing. He had evidently been studying people while engaged in the holiday season, and noticing how active busy men, instead of doing nothing during this time, took up other pursuits just as actively. He had in his mind probably what a poet said, "What is this life, if, full of care, we have no time to stand and stare?" It must be said that there are some people who are adepts at this, like the tramp who looked forward to dying as then he would "do nothing for ever and ever," but they are in the minority. What shall we do seems to be one of the first questions asked about a holiday, and most of us do not appear to have learned the art of being quiet and doing nothing.

The fault would appear to lie in our brains, they seem to have attained that much sought after thing, perpetual motion: they are always going. Therefore, it looks as if we could not succeed in doing nothing as our brains are always at work, more or less. But it is possible by determined and continuous endeavor to guide our thoughts away from harrassing thoughts. And as we apparently cannot actually stop thinking the best thing to do is to find out the best way and the nearest to this. The subject has been discussed and one authority says that most of us when compelled by a doctor to "do nothing," get out of it by going to sleep, which is not at all what Mr. Fisher is advocating. What he wishes us to do is to empty our minds of worry and fretfulness, and this can probably only be done by pretending to do something and not doing it. The ideal way of learning to do nothing is to lie on a village green and pretend to watch the cricket, sit by the side of an ardent angler and pretend to watch him fish, or hover over a stray landscape painter and pretend to be an art critic.

An English authority says that the fault lies with ourselves:

"Let the ant learn from the sluggard for a change and study how to be quiet. Let us learn to prop ourselves gracefully against the bar of the village inn and pretend to listen to parochial politics. Let us sit on benches under the smithy oak and encourage gossips and tramps to air their grievances and ills. We need not drink, we need not talk, we need not look, we need not listen. Soon, quite unconsciously, we shall find that we are spending our days doing nothing, and though the break will be hard when the holidays end, we shall return immensely invigorated, for we shall have succeeded at last in stopping our racing engines."

It is a big subject, and one which cannot be dogmatized about. There is, for instance, the old familiar saying that

"Rest is not quitting the busy career,
Rest is the fitting of self to its sphere."

That certainly does not teach doing nothing, but it does indicate that thoughts may be relieved by seeking to find new aspects of our work and occupations. We cannot refrain from quoting what the Leeds Evening Post has to say about idleness, which is another name for doing nthing:

"To be properly enjoyed, however, idleness should be deliberate. The mere cessation of work is not enough: there is all the difference in the world between idleness and rest. To be properly idle is to have all one's faculties about one and deliberately to refrain from using them; to do nothing, to think nothing, and altogether to abandon action for sensation. This, perhaps, is the true inwardness of idling, this conscious inaction when not only the cares but the pleasures of the world see equally remote. It is, in fact, a pleasure in itself. This has always been realized by the poets, those high priests of idleness. This is the spirit which broods like a gentle and pacific angel over Tennyson's 'Lotus Eaters'; this is the true ideal which lies behind Milton's 'Il Penseroso.'"—Kingston Whig-Standard.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

A Dominion surplus of $60,000,000 is rumored. Next year would be a fine time to go after the completion of the Trent Canal.

Prohibition officials declare that it would cost $300,000,000 a year to make the United States really dry. If that estimate is correct a certain amount of moisture may be expected for some time yet.

One conclusion evident from the battling among Canadian Olympic officials is that the Boxing Committee overlooked two or three promising fighters in making its selections.

The Regina Patricias have saved the football prestige of the West, and their victory is a popular one here as well as in the Prairie Provinces.

A Thought

TIME

O, loved one, where does this time thing go?
Where does it go? While our bodies glow,
Hours are golden in a golden moment.
Kiss not my hair with your head dream-bent,
Kiss not my breast, for a day is spent
At birth of the dawn. The year is gone
As you touch my throat with an April flower.
O, loved one, life slips bu as an hour,
Soon against you I'll start in surprise,
Looking up swiftly into your eyes,
O, loved one, life slips by as an hour,
go by?
The years have gone, and it's time to die!"

FEMALE VOICE CHOIR.

Editor of Examiner:
Dear sir:

I happened to be at the concert given by the Female Voice Choir in Legion Hall. In fact I may say I have attended them all. Hearing the proceeds were for the returned men and having had two sons at the war I was much surprised to see no one there from the men's organization to give those ladies a word of thanks and appreciation, especially at their last effort.

Thanking you,
ONE INTERESTED.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

THE THINGS WE WANT

A lot of things that Mother'd like
To have she's going to buy at last.
The things she's had to walk right past
When out upon a shopping hike.
She thought those bags were dear one day,
And found, that they indeed, were dear,
But now at last the time is here
She's going to buy one anyway.

A certain dish she's wanted long,
She likes a certain silver vase,
But now she need not pass the place,
For now it doesn't seem so wrong.
Yes, some day soon she's going down
To buy the things her heart desires,
A certain bracelet she admires,

The bag, the bracelet—understand
They're for the married daughter, though.
The dishes that she's wanted so
Will make her sister's table grand.
The vase is for her brother's wife—
Ah, yes, it's Christmas soon again,
The time we buy for others then
The things we've wanted all our lives.

COUPLE CELEBRATE SILVER WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Garneau Are Presented With Many Beautiful Gifts.

TRENT RIVER, Dec. 11.—On Friday evening, November 30th, about 125 guests assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Garneau to celebrate with them their silver wedding anniversary.

The evening was spent in dancing and playing cards, the music being furnished by Mrs. Rylott and her son, William, of Havelock.

During the evening J. J. Thompson called the gathering to order and delivered a very appropriate address, while Mrs. John Garneau, Miss Marion Inkster and J. E. Ward presented the many and beautiful gifts to the bride and groom of a quarter of a century ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Garneau suitably replied, thanking their many friends for the handsome gifts and the good will which prompted the giving of them.

The gathering broke up in the wee small hours, everyone present feeling that an enjoyable time had been spent.

AS IT HAPPENED

SHENANDOAH, Pa., Dec. 10.—The crowd that gathered, at a safe distance, to watch a piano being hoisted to a third story window, was not disappointed. The unexpected happened for once, when the hook and tackle failed, and the instrument smashed to the street below.

THE LUCKIEST LADY

—BY—

RUBY M. AYRES

THE STORY THUS FAR:

BIDDY SAUNDERS—the Little Flapper—always called her young adopted mother MARNA PAGET, the Luckiest Lady. For she thought Marna had everything she could wish—beauty, youth, wealth and the devotion of a fond husband. But Marna had married GEORGE PAGET, who adored her, without loving him, and three months later had met HUGH HUBBARD and given him her heart. Hugh had fled to China. On his one visit home, he and Marna had realized that they loved each other more than ever.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

V.—WHAT MONEY CAN'T BUY

The Little Flapper twisted and turned in front of the long mirror in Marna Paget's room, then looked across at Marna with anxious eyes.

"Do I really look nice?" she appealed wistfully.

Marna laughed.

"Conceited babe!" she said fondly.

She finished powdering her white neck and arms, and threw the powder-puff down on the dressing-table, turning to admire the pretty picture which the Little Flapper made.

"How does it feel to be eighteen, with all the world before you?" she asked with a half sigh. Biddy smiled, wrinkling her brown eyes into funny little lines.

"It doesn't feel any different from anything else," she said doubtfully.

"No, at the time it never does," she agreed, with a wry little grimace. "It's only afterwards, when you know you can never be eighteen again, that you realize how wonderful it was."

Biddy came across the room and stood looking down at her with loving eyes.

"I wish I had known you when you were eighteen," she said. "You must have been a perfect darling."

"I wasn't. I was a conceited little fool. I thought the world was made for me. I thought the only things that counted in the world were money, and what money could buy."

Marna rose to her feet, putting the girl gently aside.

"Silly child, of course they're not," she answered. "You see"— she hesitated, then went on with deliberation—"you see, there are such a lot of things that no amount of money can buy—that all the wealth in the world cannot give you for your own, even for one moment."

"What sort of things, darling?" she asked interestedly.

Biddy loved Marna in a serious mood. It made her feel particularly grown-up and important when she felt that Marna was talking to her as she would talk to someone years and years older and wiser. Marna took a cigarette from a box on the mantelshelf and lit it before she answered.

"Well, happiness, for one thing, I suppose."

"But you've got happiness," she said at last, in a puzzled sort of way. "Dolly Benson and I always think you must have everything in the world that anyone could possibly want. We've always called you 'The Luckiest Lady'!"

Marna laughed a little.

"Wonderful children!" she said, a touch of irony in her pretty voice. "And, anyway, I was not thinking of myself, but of other women."

"What other women, darling?"

"Oh, nobody in particular. Just other women," she said lightly.

"I see," said the Little Flapper. She sat still for a moment, then got up and once again gravely scrutinized herself in the long mirror. It was the Little Flapper's eighteenth birdhtay, and Marna was giving a dance in honor of the occasion.

"I can't wait till she is twenty-one," she told her husband when he entered his usual mild protest.

"Girls come out much earlier now than they used to when I was young."

"When you were young, indeed!" Paget protested fondly. "What in Heaven's name are you but young now may I ask?"

Marna shook her head.

"I am nearly thirty-five," she said seriously.

Paget said "Pooh!" in fine contempt. "I don't believe you're a day more than twenty. 'Pon my word, if you are, you don't look it. And as for young Biddy, I believe you love her far better than you love me!" he added jealously.

"I love her in quite a different way," Marna explained gently. "And besides, you know you love her yourself and spoil her shockingly."

George Paget refixed his fallen monocle and stared through it with pretended fierceness at his wife.

"I only love one woman in the world," he protested, "and you know well enough who she is. However, give the Little Flapper her dance. It will make me happy if it makes you happy, don't-cherknow."

So Marna sent out her invitations for the dance, and she bought Biddy an extravagant new frock, and everyone agreed that the Little Flapper was a very much to be envied Little Flapper, as indeed she was. In five years she had grown from a slim, pale child into a slim, pale girl—not very tall or pretty, but with a quiet charm of her own, and a soft happiness in the brown eyes that had once looked so scared and haunted.

"Do you really think I look nice?" she asked again anxiously; and Marna made a little grimace.

"Why are you so anxious to look nice tonight of all nights?" she demanded with pretended suspicion.

Biddy flushed.

"I'm not," she protested. "At least, only because I want you to be pleased and proud of me. Think how awful it would be if people didn't think I looked nice enough to belong to you!"

"As if I care what people think!" Marna scoffed. She held out her hand' "Come here, Biddy."

"Do you really love me—lots?" Marna asked rather wistfully. She leaned her soft face against the Little Flapper's bare arm.

"I'd die for you!" Biddy said fervently.

Marna laughed.

"I don't want you to do that," she protested. "But perhaps some day—well, perhaps some day I shall ask you to do something for me that I could never ask anyone else to do—just to show you how much I love you, too, and how much I trust you as well, Biddy."

The Little Flapper flushed with pleasure.

"Oh, you do really love me, don't you?" she whispered.

"And now tell me what it is, darling," Biddy urged eagerly. "Tell me what it is you want me to to do for you. You know how I'll love to do it, more than anything in the world!"

"But there isn't anything I want done yet," she protested. "I only meant that some day there might be."

"Oh!" The Little Flapper was disappointed. She had had momemtary visions of starting off there and then to slay imaginary giants that had to cross the unbroken serenity of Marna's pathway.

"And now run away," Marna said briskly. "Have you forgotten that we're giving a dance, and that about a hundred people will be clamoring at the door in less than an hour? Don't worry! You look a perfect picture, and I'm proud of you."

Biddy obeyed at once, and when she had gone Marna went over to the fire and knelt down before it, holding her hands to its warmth. It was a cold night in January, and now and then the cutting north winds made a little roaring sound in the wide chimney.

* * *

In spite of her wonderful frock and the luxury of the room around her, there was something pathetically lonely about Marna Paget as she knelt there—something surprisingly girlish, too, that fully justified her husband's stout declaration that he did not believe she was a day more than twenty.

She almost looked as if life and its great emotions and experiences had passed her by, leaving her untouched, and yet she had been married to George Paget for more than ten years, and for nearly as long she had loved another man with her whole heart—loved him hopelessly, and with the full knowledge that the future could hold nothing better for her. And for five years she had not seen him, had not even heard from him, and yet he was as much in her thoughts today as he had been when they were last together.

During the intervening years she had gone on living because life had forced its acceptance upon her, and because George Paget loved her and believed in her, and because there was the Little Flapper to consider. Only Marna knew how much Biddy Saunders had meant to her during the past five years, and how deep and sincere was the affection between them.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS— by John Hix

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S PARTY

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

"Bing!" That is the sound Uncle Wiggily made when he came to the end of the snow-hole down which he had fallen when he was out walking in the storm with his new rubber boots.

"Ker bunk!" That was the noise Uncle Wiggily's tall silk hat made as it bounced up off his head, when he sat down so suddenly, and then the hat jammed itself down over the rabbit gentleman's ears and eyes. That's one bad thing about tall silk hats. They're all right as long as they stay on top of your head. But when they come down over your face it's like having a masquerade on for Hallowe'en.

"Dear me!" exclaimed the rabbit gentleman as he found his hat pressed down over his face so hard that he could neither see nor hear very well. "I am in quite a pickle!"

He really didn't mean that he was inside a dill pickle or a mustard pickle or anything like that. What Uncle Wiggily was really inside of was a long snow-hole, like a tunnel standing on its head. He had stepped into the hole and fallen down it while walking on top of a hill to find an adventure. But when the rabbit said he was in a "pickle" he meant he was in trouble.

And so he was, for there he was at the bottom of the snow-hole and with his tall silk hat jammed down over his ears and eyes and almost over his mouth.

"I should have worn a cap," thought Mr. Longears as he pulled and tugged at the stiff hat, that was like a piece of stovepipe, to get it up off his face. But his nose was in the way and the hat was caught fast.

"What am I going to do?" thought poor Uncle Wiggily. "I don't even know where I am except that I have stopped falling and am at the bottom of some hole."

All of a sudden, even though the hat was down over his ears, the bunny uncle heard something moving near him and then a deep, booming voice burst out into a laugh.

"Ha! Ha! Ha! Ho! Ho Ho! Hee! Hee! Hee!" the laugh sounded and to Uncle Wiggily it echoed if he were down in a cellar.

"Hello! Hello! called the bunny gentleman for, his mouth not being covered, he could speak. "Who are you and you and where am I?"

"I'll tell you, a little later, who I am," said the deep voice. "And I'll tell you now where you are. You're at a party."

"A party!" cried Uncle Wiggily, trying again to lift the hat off his eyes so he could see. "What kind of a party?"

"Well, I should say it was a surprise party," the voice went on. "You're surprised; aren't you?"

"Very much so," replied the rabbit.

"And I'm surprised," went on the voice. "So that makes two of us who are surprised and it only takes two to make a party. Of course two is a very small party—the smallest, really, that ever was. But we shall be very jolly just the same."

Uncle Wiggily wasn't so sure of that. He tried to remember where he had heard that deep, booming voice before.

"It may be one of the Bad Chaps," thought the rabbit. "I may have fallen down the chimney hole of the den of the Fox or Bob Cat and it may be one of them who is talking about a party. If that is so I can easily guess what kind of a party it will be. Dear me! If I could only get this hat up off my eyes I could see where I am and who this big, gruff chap is talking to me!"

Again Uncle Wiggily tried, but he could not pull up the hat which had jammed down over his face when he suddenly stopped falling and sat down hard at the bottom of the hole. And then the booming voice laughed again and said:

"Never mind the hat, Uncle Wiggily. It doesn't cover your mouth and you can eat with the hat over your face. And after all at a party the eating is the main thing. Here, have a bite!"

Uncle Wiggily felt something thrust into his mouth. Before he knew it he had taken a bite and wasn't he glad when he found he was eating a piece of cherry pie! How good it was! Then that booming laugh sounded again and Uncle Wiggily cried:

"Please, if you won't help me pull the hat up off my eyes will you cut a little hole in it, like a door or window, so I can see who you are? Will you do that?"

"Why, yes," answered the voice, "I will But I must be careful when I cut a hole in your tall silk hat that I don't scratch your pink nose. Hold still now."

You shall hear soon.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE LAZY

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

We are all born lazy. Some have learned to overcome this tendency; others have not.

Nature intended to guard against over-exertion by a certain degree of laziness or the desire to stay put. The thing that would enlist our activity must be sufficiently strong to overcome a certain amount of native resistance before it can get itself done. Otherwise we should be at the mercy of every passing stimulus, wearing ourselves out ahead of schedule.

This principle is operative in the whole universe. It is not peculiar to man. In other words, creation is lazy In physics the principle is expressed by one of the laws established by the great Isaac Newton, called the law of inertia. This law states that a body in motion continues to move until it is stopped by some other force acting upon it. And conversely, a body at rest continues at rest until it is set in motion by some force.

When this law is applied to human beings we call it laziness instead of inertia. No matter what we call it the law is constantly operative. We have a tendency to keep on doing what we are engaged in until some force moves us in another direction. This is why it is hard to get up in the morning and sometimes equally hard to go to bed at night. While we are up the tendency is to stay up and when we go to bed the tendency is to remain there. In either case a certain amount of inertia has to be overcome.

Certain forms of conservatism may also be accounted for by inertia. It is so much easier to go along in the old rut, thanks to the law of inertia.

A common example of this law of inertia is seen in a person standing in a trolley. When the car starts he lurches backward to regain or maintain his state of staying where he is. But as the motion of the car overcomes this inertia he moves along with it until it suddenly stops. Then he lurches forward because of the law of inertia which tends to keep him moving in the direction in which he is traveling.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

According to astrology this is a day of ill omen and for that reason a time to watch one's step.

Under this rule there may be accented discontent and restlessness. This is likely to affect many lines of industry.

Venus afflicting Jupiter and Saturn until after sundown is believed to make the rule adverse for social affairs and for financial matters.

Theatres for both the spoken drama and the screen which now talks will pass through a period of groping under this direction of the stars which presages for the future great achievements.

Persons who shop today should exercise care in making selections, for there may be a tendency to be impulsive and, even foolishly extravagant.

While this rule prevails persons may feel rheumatic twinges that centre in the knees. Medicated baths and warmer climates will be much in the minds of the middle-aged.

The annual movement to winter summerlands this year will be extraordinarily large, it is foretold, for severe weather is to prevail in many parts of the country.

Diplomacy now is likely to be tested in international questions and fame is to come to American ambassadors or ministers.

The rule which threatens harmony in international relations also has its influence in domestic affairs. The home is a place where the best tact should be employed at this time.

Both hospitals and jails may be unusually crowded under this sinister planetary government which not only is supposed to be responsible for accidents, but for many crimes.

Theft is to be more widespread than ever before, it is forecast, and highwaymen will flourish despite police precautions.

Rise in the tide of crime is to bring about great reform movements, but they will accomplish little, the seers prophesy, until a new leader of the people arrives.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of much good fortune in the coming year which will bring tests and rewards.

Children born on this day probably will be extremely conscientious and studious. Many churchmen are born under this sign, which encourages devotion to uplifting movements. Marriage is often omitted from the careers of both men and women.

EARLIEST DENTISTS LIVED IN AMERICA

The scientific counterpart of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's genius of Baker Street lives and labors in the farthest reaches of the earth, tracing humanity's footprints in the sands of time. He is the archeologist, seeking to learn the habits, customs, behavior of man back through the ages. This present-day Sherlock Holmes follows slender clues that take him from one end of the world to the other. He sifts to the bottom evidence that appears useless to the layman. He deciphers codes, the key of which seems often lost in the mists of antiquity.

Keen detective work by a California archeologist, De Moss Bowers, recently led to interesting results. A study of more than 7,000 skulls which he found along Santa Monica Bay gave evidence that ancient inhabitants of the Southern California coast were the world's first dentists!

Bowers saw that teeth had been artificially extracted from some of the skulls. Several of the teeth had "fillings" of pulverized stone and asphalt. He continued his digging with redoubled enthusiasm. Soon, writes Michel Mok in Popular Science Monthly for January, he found, among heaps of implements and utensils, what were unmistakably dental instruments, fashioned of bone and shells.

These findings served the archeologist as the groundwork of an extensive thesis in which he showed that only in one other place dental tools of such an early period had been found. That was at Babylon, but since those instruments were of metal, there origin must have been later. So the fact that the first dentists plied their trade in the region which now supplies the world with movies was scientifically established.

Another piece of scientific detective work, some years ago, resulted in finding the ruins of an ancient American city. A farmer, near Riverton, Neb., plowing in his field, turned up a very old, grime-covered saddle stirrup. It looked so strange to him that he sent it to the state museum. Here it was recognized as being the exact counterpart of those used for centuries by Moorish horsemen and Spanish knights. It started a search that ended by fixing the exact location of the City of Quivera, for which Coronada and his Spanish conquerors searched so diligently and fought so valiantly.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

Dome.

We are able to say on good authority that development at Dome has been of a highly important character this year. Altogether approximately one million tons of ore has been put in sight, which is sufficient for about two years at present milling capacity. As this ore is fond in the greenstone formation, and as this section of the property has only been under extensive exploration during the past year or so, the possibility of their finding further large deposits look decidedly good.

Murphy.

According to a despatch from Kirkland Lake, the No. 2 vein at Murphy has been intersected by diamond drilling at a depth of 550 feet from 500 feet east of the shaft. While no assays are available yet, the report stated that the drill continued in veins for 70 feet with several sections highly mineralized.

South-west Petroleum.

The Imperial Oil has formed a new operating company known as Southwest Petroleum, which will be controlled through stock ownership by Foothills Oil & Gas Company, a subsidiary of Imperial. South-west Petroleum has taken over a large and valuable lease immediately south of the Mayland and East Crest companies in the Turner Valley. We understand a drill is now on the property and will undoubtedly be started up by the middle of this month. The acreage acquired is freehold, which is a highly important factor.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

While no announcement has been made yet, the street hears rumors to the effect that plans are in progress which will provide Ritchie's treasury with $500,0000. This is in addition to the $80,000 now on hand. It will be remembered that two weeks or so ago certain indications were given that a merger between Murphy and Ritchie was quite possible. These properties are adjacent and should the merger take place it would materially strengthen the position of both.

A new high record for production from Lake Shore of approximately $4,000,000, about 200 per cent. on the capitalization of the company, will be made this year. This, from present indications, shows that 1929 will be at least 25 per cent. greater than this year, due to the increased grade and greater tonnage than was being milled during the first part of 1928. A further despatch states that with the installation of new filters, etc., the mill capacity will be increased to 1,400 tons per day.

The capacity of the smelter at Noranda is still greater than the tonnage supplied by the mine at the present time. With no delays in relining converters, reverberatory, etc., other than the usual routine, there seems to be no reason why Noranda's smelter will not be treating at least 1,200 tons plus the ores from Waite Montgomery in a short time. The bringing into production of the second unit early next year should double this.

The lack of snow, making the sleighing season quite late, in the Central Manitoba Gold Area, is tieing up communications somewhat. This is exemplified in the Eldorado Gold Mines. Eldorado is approximately fifty miles from Grand Falls, and while this is too short a range to use an airplane to advantage economically (the cost by airplane per person is $65.00, compared to $5.00 to $10.00 by sleigh) it is nevertheless too far to walk, since sleighing cannot be done very well without snow. The financial News Bureau is informed that the meeting originally called for the 28th of December will possibly be put back some time until communications can be established with more ease. It is understood that twenty-two mail bags were awaiting transportation, according to the last news from Grand Falls. This, of course, does not prevent work at the mine from continuing since a gold mine—or any kind of a mine for that matter—is not dependent on news from outside.

The public will give little credence to the rumored negotiations regarding the merger between Nickel and Noranda. A more probable arrangement would be a point refinery for these two companies. This would permit Noranda, whose matter is shipped to England, and Nickel to refine the red metal in Canada far more economically than at present.

GRAIN SHIPMENTS.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Week-end shipments of grain from the port of Fort William-Port Arthur totalled 2,711,000 bushels, all wheat, five boats clearing Sunday and six yesterday. The Block is the only vessel taking on grain, and she will clear for the east, as will the Fitch and Jenkins, which are en route. The two package freighters now in port will remain here for the winter. Weather conditions are extremely good, the thermometer being well above freezing point, with very light westerly breezes. Following is yesterday's report on vessel movements:

Cleared (Dec. 9).—Alexander Leslie, Mathewston, Port Colborn, wheat; Edward J. Berwind, Buffalo, wheat; Sir Henry Bessemer, Fairport, wheat; Brandon, Toledo, wheat; (Dec. 10), Laketon, G. N. Wilson, Otto M. Reiss, Port Colborne, wheat; Prindoc, Sarnia, wheat; Quedoc, Goderich, wheat; Thomas Barlum, Buffalo, wheat.

CALGARY OIL.

McLeod No. 4, should be able to start drilling again Tuesday next. Will clean out bridge and likely go deeper.

Calmont will shoot well around Wednesday next.

Freehold was still burning last night. Epect to smother it shortly.

Mayland at 4,575 feet on Friday.

All drill rods recovered, replacing with heavier rods. May be ten days before drilling resumed.

Spooner No. 2 at 5,060 feet.

Royalite No. 14 is still fishing.

Royalite No. 8 has come into production again with good flow. No figures available yet.

Further Easing Of Credit Strengthens Stock Market

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—The stock market made a further recovery to-day under the stimulus of short covering and a further easing in credit conditions. Several of the high-priced specialties snapped back five to fifteen points with the copper, public utilities, merchandising, motor and rail shares giving the best demonstrations of group strength. Trading was only moderately heavy in volume.

Call money renewed at eight per cent. and then dropped to seven, with no appreciable calling of loans.

Bankers point out that the course of the money market for the balance of the year will be governed to some extent by the stock market activity, but temporary stiffening is expected later in the week because of the preparations for the December 15th income tax payments.

The receipt of $2,000,000 additional gold from Canada to-day brought the total on the current movement to $7,000,000.

Rumors of several impending consolidations had a buoyant effect on stock prices. Except for a sharp drop in Bolivian bonds yesterday, the market has not manifested much concern over the border dispute between Bolivia and Paraguay. The critical turn taken by King George's illness is reported to have resulted in some selling of American securities by British investors, but good foreign buying is reported from Amsterdam.

Consolidated dropped fifteen to 8.00 and Sheritt-Gordon five to 6.35. McIntyre Mines was down 75 cents to 20.50. Mining Corporation five at 2.55, Nipissing fifteen at 3.95, Dome ten to 8.75, Lake Shore ten to 16.00 and Wrigth-Hargreaves eight to 1.46.

Amulet gained one to 2.77, Towagamac five to 3.40, while Kirkland Lake los tsix to 124 and Teck Hughes five to 8.00. Abana was bought heavily at 3.16, a gain of 11 cents. Hudson Bay was up ten at 18.40 and Pend Oreille ten at 9.60, while Central Manitoba dropped five to 60.

Stocks Make Big Gains On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—In direct contrast to the recent trading, prices surged forward in heavy trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Buying orders for a wide range of stocks sent values upward from the opening bell and at noon gains extended from small fractions to as high as twenty-one points. There were a few declines registered and these were insignificant.

Consolidated Smelters reported the greatest advance jumping twenty-one points to 271 on sales of only fifty shares, while the activity in Shredded Wheat was vigorously renewed. At one point Wheat reached 90 for an extreme advance of 11⅞, but at noon had sagged four points from this mark. New International Nickel was active and gained ¾ to 36. Goodyear Tire went up 5½ points to 220½, and Seagrams ¼ to 18½. Brazilian advanced ⅝ to 70¼, City Dairy two to 66, Massey Harris 1¾ to 86, and McKinnon Industries two to 63, Oil Stocks followed the general trend, and realized good gains, although McColl-Frontenac suffered a loss of half a point to 31.

Wheat Values Higher After Light Opening

CHICAGO, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—With fair buying in which houses with connections in the northwest were conspicuous and with offerings light, wheat prices averaged higher early to-day. Corn and oats displayed firmness also influenced by the less favorable weather for the movement of corn.

Opening at ⅛ off to ⅛ up, wheat afterward scored general gains. Corn started at ¼ decline to an equal advance and subsequently showed a material upturn all around.

Opening prices were: Wheat, December 114¼; March 118; Corn, December 82⅜, March 85⅝; Oats, December 47⅜, March 47¼.

Mine Values Lower, Trading Is Brisker

TORONTO, Dec. 11, — (Canadian Press.)—Prices continued to show a general downward trend while trading was brisker on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. Noranda registered a decline at 56.40, after it had reached 57.00 during the early session. Malartic proved an early feature when 72,450 shares changed hands. The price jumped to 99 for a gain of 8½ but at noon had receded to 9'. Murphy started a comeback after its fall of yesterday and gained seven to 65. Sudbury Basin was up ten cents at 6.80 while Hollinger compared with 237.5 for the previous week. For domestic utility issues the figure was 150.0 for the week ending December 6, as again 150.2 in the previous similar period. For foreign companies in which Canadians are heavily interested, the index figure rose from 184.0 to 186.0.

CITY CHURCHES

ST. JAMES' UNITED

On Sunday morning, Rev. William Allan of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church was in charge of the service in St. James' United Church. He was welcomed to the church by A. E. Prest, one of the elders, who also gave the announcements.

In his opening remarks, Mr. Allan expressed his pleasure at being there, adding that it was the first time he had occupied a pulpit other than St. Paul's, in this city.

The text was taken from the second chapter of Malachi, the sixth verse: "The law of truth was in his mouth, and iniquity was not found in his lips; he walked with me in peace and equity, and did turn many away from iniquity."

"These words were spoken by the prophet Malachi, to the Jews, who having been exiled, were once more returned to their native land, but had again fallen into the ways of sin. In this extract an ideal was presented not only to the Jews, but to us, as well.

"Character formation was compared to the building of a house. First of all, we must look to the foundation. We must have a belief and faith in God as our foundation. Without this we are poor indeed. We must not only believe in God but we must have a sense of his nearness and realness as surely as that of our earthly friends. We must walk with Him 'in peace and equity.'

"The super-structure of our Christian life may be built of various materials—it may be wood, straw or precious stone. In any case, the test of this structure is fire.

"The wood, straw or stubble will be utterly destroyed and blackened; but the fire will only serve to purify if our building be of gold, silver or precious stones.

"Our lives are often compared to a contest or a race, but in this text it is spoken of as a walk, emphasizing our nearness to God.

"The concluding words of the text show the results of a Christian life and did turn many away from iniquity. This verse really applies to the life of Christ who is the only perfect example of its teachings. We should apply the same standards to our own lives and try to bring them as near to this ideal as possible. These two searching questions were left as a challenge to each one: 'How nearly is my life a copy of the life of Christ?' and 'How nearly is my life a reproduction of that of Christ?' It is the task of every church to bring about this ideal as nearly as possible in each one of its members," said Mr. Allan.

An anthem by the choir and a solo, "The Bird With the Broken Pinion," by Mrs. McKinstry, were greatly appreciated.

NO SHORTAGE OF RESOURCES

Royal Bank of Canada Circular Comments On New Economic Revolution.

OVER-PRODUCTION OF FOOD.

In its December circular letter, the Royal Bank of Canada says:

A study of natural resources and productive capacity does not show an acute shortage of any resources necessary to permit a general increase in production. There is no general lack of land, labor, or capital—the elements necessary for balanced improvement. New inventions, chemical discoveries and improved facilities for transportation and communication have prepared the way for a new period of rapid world-wide development. In a speech in November, 1928, Premier Stanley Baldwin heralds the new industrial revolution as likely to have even more portentous results than those which followed the classic industrial revolution of one hundred and fifty years ago, when machinery was introduced in industry.

At the time of the first industrial revolution, the world appeared to lack sufficient resources to support the existing population. Theorists advanced the suggestion that starvation and war were necessary as checks on multiplying populations. In strange contrast with the deficit which worried the people of the eighteenth century appears the spectre of overproduction in the twentieth century.

In agriculture there is real or potential over-production of sugar, rubber, wheat, potatoes, fruit and many other vegetable products. Relatively and perhaps absolutely, fewer farmers are producing increasing quantities of food and other agricultural products. With the increasing ubiquity of the automobile, the fields which produced the world's fodder are being put to other uses. There is no shortage of land,—in fact, there is a number of countries in which relatively less favorable lands are being abandoned. There were fewer farms in Canada in 1926 than in 1921, but this decreased number of farms represented a great area of improved and cropped land and a vast increase in potential production.

SLIGHT INCREASE IN STOCK AVERAGES

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—The index of prices for the twenty-five best selling industrial and public utility common stocks listed on the Montreal and Toronto exchanges for the week ending December 6 was 786.5 taking 1926 prices as 100. This was a slight increase as compared with 786.4 for the previous week. Figures were compiled at the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Average weekly prices were higher for twelve and lower for thirteen of the twenty-five stocks. Sales were greater for six and lower for nineteen stocks.

For the complete list of industrial common stocks the index figure for the week was 236.3, a decrease as

LINER CELTIC IS BEING POUNDED BY HEAVY SEAS

Lifeboats Stand By To Take Off Skeleton Crew Remaining On Steamer.

IN GREAT PERIL

Carried On Rocks By 70 Mile Gale—Pilot Unable To Get Aboard.

COBH, Ireland, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press).—Heavy seas to-day pounded the liner Celtic as she remained fast on the Cow and Calf rocks at the eastern entrance to the harbor. Fears for the safety of the skeleton crew left aboard brought lifeboats from Ballycotton to the scene and they were standing by to-day.

The liner was believed in great peril because of rough weather. It was thought that unless she was hauled off the rocks soon she could not escape being smashed.

The Celtic was carried on the rocks by a seventy-mile gale so violent that the pilot was unable to get aboard, and the captain tried to make anchorage during a lull in the storm. Passengers were removed safely and taken by train to Dublin, where they caught the ship for Liverpool.

Two Old Men

YOU can see this contrast on the street almost any day.

Look around you in your own town and count up the people who are skimping along in their lonely old age, denying themselves all the luxuries and most of the comforts they would like to have and which they really need.

Ahead of you is old age, waiting. There is the old age of dignity, independence, happiness. There is the old age of humiliation, dependence and sorrow—of the bitterness of being unwanted when your earning power is gone.

The simplest way for you to provide against the loss of your most valuable asset—your earning power—is to take an Imperial Retirement Income Policy. It will guarantee you a pension for your old age. It will provide money for your family should you die prematurely. It will give you a regular monthly income should you become disabled.

Write for particulars now. You may not be insurable next week.

PRISONERS REFUSED BAIL

WOMAN RELEASED.

LONDON, Dec. 11 (Canadian Press Cable).—Former Police Sergeant Goddard of the Metropolitan Police, and Luigi Ribuffi, manager of a night club in Soho, were refused bail yesterday when they were arraigned in Bow street police court, but Mrs. Kate Meyrick, "night club queen," was released on bail of $10,000.

Goddard is alleged to have accepted large sums of money in bribes from various night club owners, including Ribuffi, who has been in England twenty-five years, and Mrs. Meyrick, who recently was released from prison after serving a six months' term for breach of the licensing laws.

At yesterday's hearing prosecution counsel said since the last hearing Police Constable Wilkins, one of the principal witnesses for the Crown, had been threatened by one of the persons who had gone bail for Goddard on December 3, when he was released on $5,000 bail.

Giving evidence yesterday, Constable Wilkin testified he resigned from the Metropolitan Police force in October after twenty-six years' service. During his long service he had been stationed for twenty-one years at Marlborough street station, and for the past four years had been engaged almost continuously with Goddard in the west end of London.

Wilkin testified at various times Goddard had given him money, declaring they were presents from proprietors of restaurants and night clubs, including presents alleged to have been received by Goddard from Mrs. Meyrick.

The hearing was adjourned, and at the end of yesterday's evidence, bail was refused for Goddard in view of the Crown's disclosure, as well as Ribuffi, who also was refused bail last week. The bail in the case of Mrs. Meyrick was unchanged.

FARMER HAS FINE OAT CROP

W.M.S. MEETS

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, Dec. 11.—Wednesday's snow storm put a large number of snowdrifts on the boundary, and a number of sleighs have been seen.

George Moore reports that he threshed the best oats he ever did at the farm of Fred Fitzgerald, on Thursday. Mr. Fitzgerald took first prize for his standing crop.

W.M.S. Meeting.

The United Church W.M.S. met on Thursday afternoon in the basement of the church, when Mrs. Herrington gave a reading entitled, "A Farmer's wife on Tithing."

Financial reports were given, "A" group having $7.60; "B" group $8.75; and "C" group $9.30. The bale was valued at $9.50. The treasurer has sent $82.49 to the head office and has on hand the sum of $42, making a total of $133.99. There is yet to come in some of the group money, December's collections and systematic givings and the result of the sale of Japanese articles.

Rev. H. B. Herrington presided for the election of officers, and spoke of the W.M.S. as the only organization in this Church giving missionary education. Missionary work is the largest work of the Church. The men do not do much of this. He urged the members to elect those who would carry on the work and be alive. The following were elected: President, Mrs. George Taylor, re-elected; vice-president, Mrs. Thomas Clements, re-elected; recording secretary, Mrs. Robert Moore, re-elected; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Thomas Cooper reelected; treasurer, Mrs. Arthur Edwards, re-elected; systematic giving secretary, Mrs. David Miller; Missionary Monthly secretary, Mrs. Herrington, re-elected; Strangers' secretary, Mrs. W. Anderson; associate secretary, Mrs. Digweed, reelected; pianist, Miss Clara Payne.

Miss Clara Payne had a box of Japanese articles for sale, the proceeds of which were to go toward the funds of the W.M.S. There were, a blue and white centerpiece, with six large and six small doilies, a stencilled table runner, several yards of rain silk of excellent quality; purses, pictures in black and white, and tinted, knives in cases and a number of other articles.

Ladies' Guild Meet.

The Anglican Ladies' Guild met at the home of Mrs. John Payne on Wednesday afternoon, and a greater part of the time was spent in doing fancy work.

Choir Entertained.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Payne entertained the United Church choir at their home on Thursday evening, when selections for Christmas were practised.

NOVEL SCHEME OF ADVERTISING

WEIGHT IS GUESSED

(Examiner Correspondence)

HASTINGS, Dec. 11. — Howard Fairman, local butcher, adopted a novel scheme of doing his Christmas advertising this year. A few days ago Mr. Fairman purchased a choice baby beef which had won several prizes in the recent fall fairs, and which had never been beaten in any of its appearances in the show ring. Through the local press columns Mr. Fairman announced that on Saturday, December 8 at 3 p.m. he would lead his beef from the stable of A. V. German, up Front street, where the public would have an opportunity of seeing it. To the three persons guessing the weight, or nearest to the weight, prizes would be given. First prize, 5 pound undercut roast; second prize, 4 pound sirloin roast, third prize, 3 pound sirloin roast. The conditions of the contest were very simple, no purchase being required to entitle one to guess, and everyone was eligible to guess except drovers and butchers. Between fifty and sixty guesses were entered and then the beef was taken to the market scales where it was weighed, tipping the scales at 616 pounds. Fred Dodd won first place by guessing 598 pounds; Mrs. Charles Dodd and J. J. Dougherty tied for second place with a guess of 625 pounds. Consequently second and third prizes will be divided evenly between Mrs. Dodd and Mr. Dougherty. This beautiful baby beef will be killed for the Christmas trade, although Mr. Fairman has been offered a good price for the animal on hoof.

from heaven. Rows of human skulls decorate the walls of their villages, as the speaker could testify from personal experience, and locks of human hair, hanging from the belt symbolize the number of persons the wearer has killed. The brave with the largest collection of heads may have his choice of the prettiest girl in the village when choosing a wife.

Having visited the villages of these Head Hunters, Mr. Williams could speak from a wealth of actual knowledge; they are a primitive people, and the coming of the gospel means a decided change in their manner of living, as it had in the case of our own ancestors who, in years long past, offered human sacrifices to propitiate the gods.

Replying to questions from the listeners, Mr. Williams said the missionaries are now safe in Formosa, and generally speaking are treated kindly. Japanese currency is used, and rice and sweet potatoes are the main articles of food, though the missionaries grow most of the vegetables known here in their own gardens. Butter must be imported and is $1.00 a pound; potatoes, also imported, are from $6 to $12 a bag; beef, another import, is $1.25 a Japanese pound, which is ten ounces. Chickens and ducks are raised, but the latter are "fishy" from feeding on crabs on the sea shore.

Bamboo is a marvellously useful wood, being used for making almost everything, and bamboo shoots are a palatable part of the diet as well. They have electric light, thanks to the Japanese who govern the island, and their use of the fine water power which is available.

An explanation of the many curios which filled a large library table, and of the manner of making Chinese sign language, and significance, completed the evening's lecture.

The formal vote of thanks to Rev. Mr. Williams was moved by Eddie Nattress, and seconded by Elizabeth Russell, and the singing of the National Anthem brought a most instructive gathering to a close.

FINAL SESSION

arms. This was the tragedy awaiting the arriving councillors, and only those who knew of their affection for "the Colonel" can understand it.

Message to Family.

The Council's message of condolence was as follows:

Cobourg, Ont., Dec. 10, 1928.
Mrs. Neil F. MacNachtan and family:

The members of the council of these United Counties at the moment assembling for their final session this year were inexpressibly shocked at the sudden passing of their beloved associate and trusted adviser, Colonel N. F. MacNachtan, C.V.O., their clerk and treasurer.

It is impossible for them to convey adequately the great sense of loss which the members have sustained, both personally and as a council.

On behalf of the members of the council of these United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, which Colonel MacNachtan has served so faithfully and well for nearly half a century, we wish to convey to you and to members of the family our heartfelt sympathy in your irreparable loss.

On behalf of the council of the United Countries of Northumberland and Durham.

Chas. H. Davidson, Warden.

Born 80 Years Ago.

Col. MacNachtan was born at Newcastle 80 years ago. As a youth his first work was in a printing shop. Later in St. Catharines and Whitby, he clerked in stores. Then he came to Cobourg where his father had a share in a retail hardware partnership under the name of Jeffrey and MacNachtan. His father, E. A. MacNachtan, became clerk of the United Counties in 1863, and the son about that time in conjunction with his brother-in-law, George R. Hargraft, now of Toronto, bought the hardware business, which they carried on as MacNachtan and Hargraft. It later became MacNachtan and Company, and in 1899 was sold to W. L. Allen.

Colonel MacNachtan succeded his father as clerk and treasurer in 1891, and so thorough and intelligent was his work that some of his ideas have become models for the other counties of Ontario. He was a stickler for parliamentary procedure, in so far as his position permitted him to suggest and advise the successive administrations.

His axiom was that the decorous way was the most efficient way of conducting any community or collective assembly, and he always urged this idea in the various associations with which he was connected. His advice and proposals earned for the council of the united counties the reputation of being the best conducted in Ontario, and it is likely that his stamp will remain upon the council as a hallowed tradition.

His Military Career.

Col. MacNachtan joined the Cobourg Battery of Garrison Artillery in 1868, two years after it was organized, received his commission in 1891, and was appointed commanding officer, as Lieutenant in 1894. He was promoted Captain in 1897, and Major in 1898. As an evidence of his enthusiasm and efficiency as an artillery officer it is recalled that his battery won the Governor-General's cup in 1899.

In 1901 Major MacNachtan was promoted to the command of the 14th Midland Battery, with the rank of Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel in 1906, receiving his substant rank of lieutenant-colonel in 1906, on being appointed to command the 10th Brigade, C.F.A. One of his cherished memories was his command of the Dominion artillery teams that went to England in 1911, when Colonel MacNachtan was honored by the King by the distinction of being made a Companion of the Victorian Order.

He Was a Presbyterian.

As an officer he was a firm disciplinarian, but he took a personal interest in the welfare of his men and was always generous and considerate. For many years he was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Cobourg, and at his death was senior elder. He had been clerk of the session, also teacher and superintendent of the Sunday School. The Cobourg General Hospital had long profited by his connection, and for a time was treasurer of the Board.

"The Colonel" had been an active curler, he was proud of Scottish blood and the clan of his forefathers, and he delighted in his summer home on Rack Island, near Dunnett's Landing, Rice Lake. He had studied the history of the Mound Builders, and retained a keen interest in the Serpent Mounds at Rice Lake. Stamp collecting was a hobby up to the last, but closest of all to his heart was the good name of the Council and the progress and prosperity of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham.

Signs of Decline.

"The Colonel" was a stalwart, upstanding man, broad and tall and well knit. His host of friends had noticed increasing signs of physical decline during the last year or two, but none imagined how near was the end. It is likely that his service to the Council, an old man's little excitement on the day the session opened and as he prepared for it, hastened his death, an overtaxing of a last, small resource of vitality, with no reserves whatever, unequal to the long familiar duty of once more welcoming his little parliament.

COUPLE MARRIED SIXTY YEARS

en mill. The stone was hauled to the building site and the previous year, 1867.

But he was not as interested in the affairs of the town at that time as those of the country. Game he said, was plentiful then. But in spite of this, he had never seen a coon until he moved onto the farm in Percy township. Then he found one which the dogs had treed. Since then he had seen many. Money was another scare commodity. He had been married when he was earning thirteen dollars a month. This was a high wage as he had usually worked for ten. The first year he was married he had received a little more money and had to board himself and his wife. His annual income for that year was two hundred dollars. This was a living wage at that time.

In relating the events of the early days, Mr. Moir had intimated that liquor had not been an unknown quantity here. Asked what he thought of the present system and beverages, he did not approve of either. He thought the liquor was very inferior to that of years ago. About a year ago he had been offered a social glass and had not been able to get further than to smell it. "I don't know what it was," he said, "but it wasn't fit for a man to drink." Politically he has supported the Liberal cause, but admitted that he had, on a few occasions, cast a conservative vote. He is a staunch member of the Presbyterian church and is a regular attendant at the services when the weather is such as will permit him to be out of doors.

Mrs. Moir is firm in her statement that she is a born Canadian but is equally proud of her Scottish ancestry. She was born on a farm on the English Line, the daughter of the late John Barclay Buchanan and his wife, Jane Hay. Of her family, there are still living, one sister, Mrs. Margaret Massie of the State of Maine, and one brother, Sam Buchanan, a farmer on the English Line. Another brother, John died in May of this year. Mrs. Moir is still a very active house keeper although her eyesight is failing. Like her husband she possesses a fine sense of humour which serves to pass many an hour when they are alone. Of the fifty guests who were present at their wedding, only four are now living, as nearly as Mrs. Moir could remember. These are Mrs. Wm. Varcoe, Seymour East; David Wallace of Stirling and her brother and sister.

Five Children

Five children of Mr. and Mrs. Moir are still enjoying success in their various walks of life. Two sons, John and Sam, are farming in Percy township. James the third son, is farming near Brighton village. Maggie, the eldest daughter is now Mrs. W. A. White of Bruce Mines, Algoma, Bessie, the youngest child, is Mrs. George Harriet of Warkworth. All the members of the family were not able to be present at the anniversary yesterday. At the table of the elderly couple were seated, Mrs. W. A. White and her son, Richard of Bruce Mines; Mr. and Mrs. George Harriett of Warkworth; Mr. and Mrs. John Moir and daughter Isobel of Bethany; Mr. and Mrs. Braithwaite and daughter Jean of Roseneath and Mrs. James Thompson and her sons, Gerald and Carl of Hastings. There were represented four generations.

Mr. and Mrs. Moir have long enjoyed the friendship of many. They are not given to social actives, but enjoy a quiet life among their friends. It was without the least hesitation, however, that they recalled their wedding day, December 10, 1868, and the gay event at the bride's home on the English Line. Mrs. Moir who was seventy-nine in April of this year, was able to recall much of the detail of the wedding and also to name many of the guests who were present but did not live to enjoy a wide a span of life as the bride and groom whom they toasted on that day.

FOUR SUSPECTS HELD BY POLICE

Authorities Straightening Out Mystery Surrounding Death of Arnold Rothstein

OTHER ARRESTS PREDICTED

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The tortuous trail which may lead to the slayer of Arnold Rothstein, big time gambler and power in the underworld, appeared yesterday to be straightening out as United States Attorney Tuttle marshalled his evidence of Rothstein's connection with the biggest narcotic ring in the country.

Four persons have been arrested, other arrests are predicted, and more than $2,000,000 worth of drugs has been seized here and in Chicago on information provided by a search of papers in Rothstein's offices

The prisoners, and the evidence on which they were taken, will be presented to the Federal Grand Jury to-day, Tuttle said, adding that he expected an immediate indictment and believed that a thorough inspection of Rothstein's papers should throw new light on the motives and circumstances of the gambler's murder.

Drugs Seized.

Two trunks packed with $2,000,000 in drugs were seized Friday on the Twentieth Century Limited, just before the train pulled out of the Grand Central station. They had been checked aboard by Joseph Unger, alias Meyer and Klein, who was arrested by Federal narcotic agents on the outskirts of Buffalo.

Unger had been under surveillance for some time, the Federal agents said, and examination of records found in his hotel room here showed that he had been in telephone communication with Mrs. June Boyd in Chicago. She was arrested at a Chicago hotel on the same night that Unger was taken. Federal agents found another trunk loaded with $1,000,000 worth of narcotics in her possession.

While the Federal officials have been delving into this phase of Rothstein's activities, District Attorney Banton and local police have concentrated on efforts to bring in Hyman "Gillie" Miller and those two legal straw men, "John Doe" and "Richard Doe", under indictments with George McManus for Rothstein's murder.

FRUIT STRIKERS ARE DISPERSED

Columbia Workers Burn And Pillage Large Fruit Districts

RIOTERS ARE KILLED

BOGOTA, Columbia, December 11. —Canadian Press. — A telegram from the Magdalena region where the fruit workers were on strike, states that the troops have dispersed the rebellious elements.

Nine battalions of soldiers were ordered out. Twelve strikers were reported to have been killed in one clash.

Latest despatches from the zone of the fruit workers' strike in the Magdalena region affirm that serious fighting has taken place there, but are obscure as to its extent and to exactly what happened.

A telegram from Santa Marta, in the centre of the affected area, said that government troops have dispersed the rebellious elements, who pillagd and plundered as they fled. They were however thoroughly disorganized. Cauture of 300 pounds of dynamite, fuses and a great quantity or arms was reported. It was said that in one combat on Friday 12 were killed.

Railway service to Rio Frio has been re-establishd, as has also telegraph service to Clenaga, and the area is now generally calm.

From other sources it was learned that government troops surprised a large body of strikers, burning and pillaging near Sevilla, and repulsed them, the strikers fleeing and leaving behind a number of dead and wounded. Another combat was said to have followed in which the strikers were aided by a large body of reinforcements armed with revolvers, and hatchets. Fifteen were said to have been killed.

Unconfirmed reports were that the strikers' leader, the Socialist, Raoul Machecha, was killed in the combat Friday night at Sevilla.

WOMEN HEAR FINE PROGRAM

WINS SCHOLARSHIP

(Examiner Correspondence)

STIRLING, Dec. 11—The Women's Institute held their regular meeting on Thursday night in the Community Hall, with Mrs. Lagro, 1st vice-president, in the chair. After the routine business, a fine program was given by Mrs. H. Rollins, with a paper on "The Value of Reading"; Mrs J. Butler, song, "Danny Boy"; Mrs. E. Sandercock, reading; Mrs. Perry Bronson, delegate to the recent convention in Belleville, gave an excellent report of the convention. Community singing was enjoyed and a musical contest with Mrs. E. W. Rowland at the piano was interesting. Much credit is due Miss J. Westcott for the arrangement of the fine program.

During the course of business, the resignation of Mrs. M. W. Sine, as president, was read and after much discussion, it was accepted with regret.

Wins Prizes.

Wins Scholarship

Miss Cora Bailey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bailey, of Harold, was a winner in the awards of the J. I. Carter scholarships of $100. Miss Bailey is attending the Toronto Normal School and last June obtained the highest aggregate number of marks in her examinations. This is not the first time pupils of Stirling have been winners in this competition, as three others have been successful during the past four years.

Officers Elected.

At the annual meeting of St. Paul's Ladies' Union, Mrs. C. F. Pinn was re-elected president; Miss Elisa Donnan, secretary, and Mrs. Earl Bailey, treasurer. The other officers were re-elected.

Personals.

Mrs. Joseph Reid, of Emma street, is visiting relatives in Toronto.

Mrs. W. Rainie, of Menie, visited her sisters, Mrs. Bissonnette and Miss Hume, on Tuesday.

Mr and Mrs. H. C. Martin are spending this week in Toronto.

Mrs. C. U. Clancy, of Hoards, is a visitor at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. C. Martin.

JUNIOR SOCIETY HONORS PARENTS

Little Girls Make Charming Hostesses as They Waited Upon Guests.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Dec. 11—The Junior Auxiliary of Saint Thomas' church sponsored a pleasant afternoon tea in the Parish Hall on Thursday afternoon, when parents and friends of the young people gathered for a social hour, and also to view the beautifully dressed dolls, the result of the work meetings of the past few weeks.

The little girls made charming hostesses as they waited happily upon the guests, the superintendents of the juniors, Miss M. B. Turner, B.A.; and Mr. W. Hilton, greeting the friends, and supervising the serving of the plates of delicious sandwiches and cake, with trays bearing the cups of hot tea, the fragrant beverage being very welcome after the wintry atmosphere out of doors.

The dolls, varying in size and kind, were supplied with complete wardrobes, the sewing being remarkably well done considering that little fingers, in most cases, were just being taught the art of stitching.

All the dollies have been packed and sent to the Diocesan House in Toronto, where they will be repacked in other, and larger, bales and will go to some needy missionfield for Christmas.

A quilt, which had been pieced by the juniors, was on display with the dolls, and this will be completed and form part of another bale at a later date.

"Bobbie" Finds Baby Is Engrossing Problem

MARION'S MAIL

Dear Marion:

I am sure we were all deeply impressed with the splendid issue of the Armistice Number. It does us good to live over again those dark days, if for no other reason than to keep in mind the awful horrors of war. It is for us to show the present generations that we can serve our country quite as patriotically through peace as did the dear boys who gave their all in the courage of battle. We ought to be a better people because of the price that has been paid—that is still being paid by some of our women. The Armistice letters revealed only too tragically what women have given in the Great War. Men such as "Thinker" should not forget that the price of peace was bought as dearly by women as by men. Even a woman incapable of inventing a lift-lock or building a railroad has been big and brave enough to give her boys unflinchingly and who can say whether the awful agony of waiting at home was not perhaps as hard as going over the top itself.

You see, "Thinker" there are women—and women, just as there are men and others. True, there are some women who become parasitical, largely through some men who have spoiled and pampered them. But the great rank and file of women are just as great in their own sphere as man is in his. They may not have a man's brain, but do we want it? Many are intellectually great while still possessing a woman's own individuality—one must not forget that while man may show to the world great things, that women's sphere is in the more intricate, delicate things. She is endowed with patience, she is observant and well-fitted for all work requiring detail, she possesses greater powers of endurance. It is not something to boast of but just as we were made, "Thinker." It seems as foolish to me to quarrel about woman's deficiencies as it is to try to make comparison between the earth and the sea. Each is best in its own place."

Speaking of woman brings me along to something else, which is, of course woman's most vital power and that is, creation. Nothing can quite equal the wonder and mystery and joy of bringing a child into the world, of maturing it and teaching and loving, until one can offer a real man or a real woman to the world. This is really what I started out to talk to the neighbors about, though I got a bit sidetracked in making reference to "Thinker's" letter. I know there must be plenty of mothers who are interested in child-training, and I would so much like to hear their views on the subject. I suppose when one has trained a dozen or so, it begins to come easy, but just at first we wonder if our child is behaving like all other normal children, or if he is a law unto himself.

Now Marion, what is your opinion about the habits of the small child of to-day? Honestly, I have seen children that would discourage one against ever having a child—lovely children too, but suffering from parental laxity. Mother tells son not to touch a certain thing and said son goes right on doing it, and then rather than make a scene the matter drops. Children, being optimists, take a chance on evading the first warning and it is not to be wondered in such cases that they become invested with almost regal powers while that of the poor parent wavers.

But its so easy to see faults in other people's children but not so easy to correct in our own. I do like to see a well-trained child and I'd be so glad to get some ideas from some of the mothers who have been through the mill. Our baby is 1½ years old and endowed with a generous supply of will power. Just at present he seems to have a strong desire to possess himself of everything within reach. I am seeking for a method of bringing it at least within limitations. What do the neighbors do when the baby helps himself to dishes and cutlery while table is being set? I have tried both the old-fashioned remedy and more modern ones, but next meal we have to go through it all again. Do you think, at this age, that one ought to keep undesirable things out of reach, or should he be taught to leave them alone when told? It seems to me that "no" must always be "no" and that it is better to remove an article than to tell a child not to do something unless we make sure that we are obeyed. Obedience is such a beautiful virtue, but I often wonder just when we can reasonably expect to succeed, for one hates to be overly zealous.

Perhaps I can give you a few hints on what I have succeeded in having him do since a small baby. In the matter of food, we have very little trouble. I prepare what he should have and see that he has a good appetite to start with. "Piecing" causes children to be "picky" about what they eat, that is if they are well. A hungry child is not usually very picky about what he gets. So far, my baby has learned to like all kinds of vegetables and anything that he has been given, commencing a new food very gradually, of course. Once in a while his eye catches something that looks more appealing and he refuses his porridge, in which case, down he goes, and he remains there until ready to eat his own food.

Also, I think a great many mothers are learning that babies will go to sleep quite as well by themselves as by rocking in chair or carriage. We fought our battle at three weeks—just two nights of it, and now we have no trouble. Bedtime, bath, off to bed, lights out, window up. Of course, one must make sure he is comfortable when he cries, but once that is done, we must not forget that crying will not do as much harm as the good that will result from regular habits. It's the getting of the child to do as he is told, without being too cross—that is my big problem. I suppose the main thing is to supply proper amusement. What do you mothers give your babies to do at this age? I'm 'right on' for any new ideas.

Yes, it's so nice to see a well-trained child and so uncomfortable to be within range of the other kind. After all, disregard of law, starts way back at disregard of home training, doesn't it? If my letter isn't too long already I'd like to tell you about two little girls I know and see what you think of them. Both live in a large city and are daughters of devoted parents. Janet is quite clever and original and for years has selected her own clothes and knows a French frock from the ordinary kind, too. Once when quite small she chose the new rug for the living room, kicking on the floor because of her disapproval of the other rugs the salesman was showing her mother and shouting, "Take it away." When she has been playing, out-of-doors and decides to enter by the front entrance, it would take an army to stop her. Her father tells me that he has reasoned with her for an hour to get her to do something, but not being disciples of corporeal punishment, what else could the poor man do? When one calls there, the whole atmosphere is one of uneasiness, for one never knows when the prodigy is going to break out. One can readily see that her parents are quite helpless, (and there are two children equally impossible). Hub explained to me once that when a child follows the dictum of its forbears, he becomes but a replica of what has gone before, his own individuality is crushed, but when allowed to develop in her own way—ah, there will be a child. And I quite agree!

Kathleen's parents are apparently inferior in intellect and culture to Janet's, but Kathleen is a treat. She rarely has to be scolded, and it is a pleasure to be in the home. I noticed, however, that her mother was always on guard for the little things, and never let her get away with anything, however small. She is such a generous, affectionate child, and does what she is told, so pleasantly. It would seem that heredity must play a part somewhere not visible in the present generation, but having observed the methods of each mother I have concluded that more things are wrought through proper training than many dream of.

That is why one must watch for danger signals even at a very tender age, and why I should so much welcome a discussion on this subject from interested mothers.

Wishing your already successful page, continued greatness and for yourself, Marion, courage and cheer.

Bobbie.

* * *

This is, indeed, a splendidly interesting letter, "Bobbie." I haven't space to discuss your ideas here, so I made it the subject of a Whatnot for Thursday. In the meantime, I hope you neighbors will write the letters "Bobbie" suggests, giving your ideas.

"Dear Marion:

I received your helps a few days ago and thank you very kindly for them. They have proved very useful to me. I renovated an evening cloak by putting a crush collar on, making it quite chic.

In answer to Mrs. T. R.'s SOS to remove soot and ink stains from carpets:

Soot stains can be removed by sprinkling salt and left for a day or so. If one application does not prove satisfactory repeat the process.

Ink stains can be removed by saturating the spots with vinegar and a handful of salt. Scraps the first appliance and add a fresh supply. Repeat several times and rinse with clear cold water.

Hoping this will be satisfactory and helpful to Mrs. T. R., I remain,

Gary Ann."

Port Hope.

Thanks, "Gary Ann," for the answers to SOS calls. I'm sure Mrs. T. R. will appreciate your hints.

"Dear Marion:

I am another interested reader of your page. You are surely doing good work—success to you.

I haven't noticed a recipe for pumpkin marmalade, so am sending you a real good one.

Sincerely,

Silver-locks."

I'm glad to have that recipe, "Silver-locks" and I'm sure it will find its way into a lot of scrap books.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHORS CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

To-day's selection is another poem by James Russell Lowell, whose "The Tiger" I gave you a couple of weeks ago. It was written in 1842.

DECEMBER 11, 1928

THE SHEPHERD OF KING ADMETUS

There came a youth upon the earth,
Some thousand years ago,
Whose slender hands were nothing worth,
Whether to plow, or reap, or sow.

Upon an empty tortoise shell
He stretched some chords, and drew
Music that made men's bosoms swell
Fearless, or brimmed their eyes with dew.

Then King Admetus, one who had
Pure taste by right divine,
Decreed his singing not too bad
To hear between the cups of wine:

And so, well-pleased with being soothed
Into a sweet half-sleep,
Three times his kingly beard he smoothed,
And made him viceroy o'er his sheep.

His words were simple words enough,
And yet he used them so,
That what in other mouths was rough
In his seemed musical and low.

Men called him but a shiftless youth,
In whom no good they saw;
And yet, unwittingly, in truth,
They made his careless words their law.

They knew not how he learned at all,
For idly, hour by hour,
He sat and watched the dead leaves fall,
Or mused upon a common flower.

It seemed the loveliness of things
Did teach him all their use,
For, in mere weeds, and stones, and springs,
He found a healing power profuse.

Men granted that his speech was wise,
But, when a glance they caught
Of his slim grace and woman's eyes,
They laughed, and called him good-for-naught.

Yet after he was dead and gone,
And e'en his memory dim,
Earth seemed more sweet to live upon,
More full of love, because of him.

And day by day more holy grew
Each spot where he had trod,
Till after-poets only knew
Their first-born brother as a god.

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

CURING SICK MINDS.

You will remember how distressing it was just a few years ago if some member or relative of the family was committed to the hospital for the insane, the asylum as it was called.

Occasionally there would be cases showing some improvement and they would return home, some of them mentally clear, others having to return to the hospital at some later date.

Now, although the number of mentally unbalanced individuals is increasing, it is gratifying to know that many thousands throughout the United States and Canada are at their daily work, and living a normal life at home, who just a few years ago would have been condemned to a life in a hospital for the insane.

What happened?

An observant hospital superintendent noticed that a girl who had been a patient in the mental hospital for two years, became normal mentally within two months after some decayed teeth were removed.

Following this idea further, he was able to get rid of nearly half the patients admitted to the hospital by the simple method of removing infected teeth and tonsils, and draining sinuses, gall bladder, and correcting constipation.

And now Dr. J. L. DeCourcy reports that he operated on fourteen mentally unbalanced patients who had the severe type of goitre, the poisonous type.

The mental symptoms were extremely pronounced in the majority of cases and yet all but two patients were able to resume their former occupations.

They have remained clear mentally to date.

The period during which recovery took place was from several months to a year.

So once more we must thank our observant physicians who have the care of these mentally unbalanced folks.

How different this is to the time so recent, when all that was done for the patient was to remove him from his home and see that he didn't harm himself or anybody else.

We think of mental cases now as simply sick minds, many of which can be cured by the same methods that are used to cure sick bodies.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

I am always rather sorry for the housewife who thinks that it is too much work to go to all the trouble involved in the giving of a little dinner party. Sorry for her because I know she is missing all the satisfaction that giving little dinners brings to those who are willing to take the trouble.

It certainly does seem rude to estimate the cost of a dinner you have attended, and yet that is precisely what I did the other evening after having been one of four guests at a little dinner party that was very nearly perfect. It occurred to me that almost any young woman who was willing to take the trouble could give a dinner like that occasionally and so I figured out the cost, just enough to realize that the actual money cost must have been decidedly moderate.

To begin with there was perfectly flavored, properly served clear soup. Then came stuffed rolled steak, canned peas and potato balls with parsley sauce. I judged that a thin round steak had been used, spread with well-seasoned stuffing, rolled, tied and cooked in a casserole. It was served cut in slices on a serving platter with perfectly made sauce from the meat drippings. The potatoes had been cut with one of those French potato cutters and were in the form of little balls the size of large marbles.

Then followed small portions of a delicious salad and after that some sort of a cornstarch dessert that was not too sweet and quite as acceptable as the most expensive fancy ice. There were no exotic savories or relishes, no bonbons or nuts, none of the little side dishes that most hostesses feel are necessary yet which add so much to the cost of a dinner. And yet because the dinner was perfectly cooked, well chosen and faultlessly served it gave the impression of far greater luxury than a dinner twice as expensive might have done.

Two minor Christmas donations that appeal to the imagination because they will go to people who will probably appreciate them immensely are those noted in the last week. The Helen Rodger Auxiliary of Knox United Church packed during the week a box of toys for the Mission Station at Coppercliff, on the Georgian Bay. There will be quite a few happy children when this box reaches them.

The other Christmas gift is just an item in the annual Yuletide giving of the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E., but it also will have a place in far-away spots. To the sailors on the Great Inland Seas of Canada who are looked after by the Navy League go annually Christmas gifts in the form of bags filled with various articles designed to meet their tastes. The bags are made of stout material and can be used all year through to hold Jack's valued possessions. A study of some of the items which may be supplied for these bags gives an idea of the varying inclinations of a sailor. Packs of cards and dice for his amusement, pencils and books for his education, taffy kisses, hard candy, nuts and chewing gum, tobacco and cigarettes, for the inner man, with socks or a muffler for his comfort.

The society of the King's Daughters is one of the oldest charitable organizations in this city. It is over forty years since it came into existence and it bears the nicest title of them all.

In years past, the King's Daughters would buy supplies for the poor at Christmas time and dispense them in baskets. Whole quarters of beef and other things in like ratio were purchased. But the activity along these lines of other charitable organizations has caused them to take only an auxiliary part in such Yule tide giving in recent years. They concentrate the major part of their energies on relief work throughout the entire twelvemonth, giving clothing and food to many people who need these necessities of life. The sum of over $400 was spent in such ways last year. The members also make a practice of visiting patients in Nicholls Hospital and the old people in the Protestant Home and they take little presents to both institutions at Christmas time. Mrs. R. R. Hall is president of the King's Daughters' Society.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Park street Baptist Church is one of the enthusiastic feminine organizations of the city that do so much to help on the work of the churches. With a membership of about fifty ladies, this society raised $1500 for the Park Street Church during the past five years and used this money to make payments on the mortgage, which has still $2,000 remaining unpaid. They also pay the sum of $100 towards the organist's salary each year and aid in other work connected with the church. Last season, they placed new front doors on the building.

The society is nearly twenty-five years old. The president is Mrs. James Booth.

Mutual Consent

By JANE OSBORN

Julie Tyson sat on a bench in a small park shaded on three sides by tall business buildings.

A forlorn, rather dirty young man sat at her left, his head bent forward resting on his hands. He was sleeping and a crumpled newspaper folded to the Help Wanted columns lay at his feet. Julie reached quietly down and took the crumpled paper.

For a half hour she read the columns. Rapidly her eye ran down the offerings of the agencies—"Experienced stenographer $25, Correspondent $30, Bookkeeper $20." One advertisement attracted her eye. "We require the services of an exceptional woman for exceptional executive position," it ran. "Must be willing to work hard. Only woman of rare ability need apply. Salary $30." Julia dropped the paper to her lap. So that was all the city had to offer a woman—a miserable thirty or thirty-five dollars a week for all she had to offer. And the very least that would do for her was over twice that amount. Julie had figured it out all very carefully before she took train for the big city the week before.

Julie picked up the paper again and absently turned the pages. The "Men Wanted" columns were uppermost and with bitterness of heart she scanned the offerings there. Even the agencies had positions offering seventy and eighty and a hundred dollars a week for men—and men with not half her ability would get them. Then an advertisement caught her eye. "Executive position open for young man who has earned five thousand dollars a year, and is capable of earning twice that amount." Julie read through the brief advertisement, noted the address. She took the little mirror from her purse, powdered her nose carefully and then replaced the paper at her neighbor's feet. She took twenty-five cents from her purse, placed it on top of the paper and then walked off.

Fifteen minutes later she had contrived to get by a barricade of reception clerk, office boys and secretaries to Mr. Walter Yates and was sitting opposite him in his spacious office.

"But I advertised for a young man." He had difficulty in suppressing a smile as he looked at the eager, piquant face of the slender young woman before him. "My dear young woman, you cannot possibly have the qualifications

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dear Marion.

Please tell me a simple menu for a little evening party, a little out of the way. I would like something one could prepare on electrical appliances at the table, like one reads about.

Yours truly,

Gertie."

If you wish to have a really splashy supper, without much trouble, how would this do: Welsh rarebit, buttered toast, thin strips of carrots, celery and olives, coffee and cake. The rarebit, toast and coffee can be prepared at the table, and the other items, of course, would be ready beforehand.

Still simpler, but not carrying out your idea, would be sandwiches cut in fanciful shapes, and macaroons.

Perhaps someone who has tried such a Bohemian supper will write and tell us how.

—you have no idea of the requirements, and besides you are not a man—"

Julie's cheeks were flushed and there was a flash of fire in her usually soft brown eyes. "I have the qualifications," she declared—"only as you say I am not a man. Aurore Dudevant had to call herself George Sand and dress like a man in order to do a man's work. That was nearly a hundred years ago—and still the old prejudice remains. For two years I had entire management of my father's department store in Crawford—held it through his last illness and increased profits, too. His salary of fifteen thousand dollars went on uninterrupted. Then they took advantage of his weakness and got him to sign papers—and the business and most of his savings have been taken away from us. Th e new manager wanted to keep me as his secretary at thirty dollars a week. Thirty dollars won't do—twice that won't do. We have lost everything and I've resolved to put two brothers through college—and I don't know how to live on starvation wages myself. Of course, you may find my business qualifications inadequate, but I really protest, Mr. Yates, against your assumption that just because I am a woman I could not handle a big job."

"So you are Julie Tyson," Mr. Yates said quietly; "and you want the position I have to offer—I don't suppose you know precisely what it is. Would you be willing to be general manager of Tyson and Co.'s department store?"

"But what of Mr. Lewis—what have you to do with that deal" Julie flashed back at him.

"Merely that Mr. Lewis acted as my agent—and as I have already discovered he was a pretty bad actor. I trusted him at the time that he put through the deal—only a week ago I found out what methods he had used. Mr. Lewis will have nothing to do with the store—at present we are holding him pending an investigation of the transactions. You would have been called in to testify, anyway. But as you have applied for the position—and as you have already displayed very remarkable ability—I shall be very glad to come to an agreement with you. One of my associates here has just left to take temporary control. I should be glad if you could arrange to stay in town here for a week so that you could get a general idea of our system. You see, we operate twenty-five stores in various parts of the country. Yours makes the twenty-sixth."

A week later, when Walter had met Julie for luncheon at her hotel for a reluctant farewell before her departure, they lingered over coffee, though all their business plans had for the time been settled.

"In a way I am sorry I met you this way," said Walter. "I mean I am sorry it has all been on a business basis—our friendship. I'm sorry you signed that year's contract."

"Why?"

"Because I might have trouble inducing you to break it. You see, Julie, if it weren't for that contract I should try to persuade you to marry me."

"But the arrangement was, I believe, that the contract could be broken by mutual consent," murmured Julie.

Dietetic Dissertations

(Specially Written for The Examiner.)

XVII.—MILK

If, in those dissertations, honor had been given where honor is due, milk would have been the first food dealt with, as it is generally acknowledged by dietetic authorities to be the best food we have. Dr. McCollum of Johns Hopkins University says: "The greatest thing we can do to raise the standard of public health in this country, to increase the span of life and to cause the people of our country to maintain the characteristics of youth over longer periods, is to change the diet and use more milk, more green vegetables, and less meat." Dr. Lusk of Cornell corroborates him, thus: "No family of five should buy meat until they have bought three quarts of milk." And President Hoover, during the days of his food administratorship, thus expressed himself: "The white race cannot survive without dairy products." Surely, as an article of diet, milk needs no further championing and I may say that the reason it was not dealt with earlier in these articles is that there is so much to be said in its praise, knowing where to begin is a rather baffling problem.

The composition of milk is: Water 87 per cent, protein 3.3 per cent; fat 4 per cent, carbohydrate 5 per cent; mineral matter .7 per cent.

Its solid constituents are more perfectly balanced than those of any other food. Its protein is of Grade A quality and easily digested—an excellent builder. Its carbohydrate is lactose (milk sugar). Calcium (so necessary in the building and repair of bones and teeth) is its most important mineral. Milk is not high in iron. All the vitamines are found in milk. Because it is so rich in vitamine A which is indispensible to growth, there is absolutely no substitute for milk in the diet of children—a quart a day per child is an excellent allottment. Adults, whose bones have attained their full stature can manage with a pint per day, but children must not be stinted in this food. If a child is so unfortunate as to dislike milk, much of it can be included in his diet in the form of cream soups, custards, cocoa, milk puddings, etc.

A small glass of milk furnishes one hundred calories, and a quart is equal in food value to eight eggs. Skim milk and buttermilk, while of lower calorie value, are also excellent foods.

I have found the following a rather easy means of impressing the composition and dietetic value of milk:

Milk is the most perfect food.
In the diet much is good;
Each principle in it is found
To keep the body strong and sound.
You will let it, if you're wise,
Build and warm and energize;
For all of that, 'tis very true
Its protein, fat, and sugar do.
Its vitamines prevents disease.
Its calcium brings smiles that please—
With pearly teeth all in a row.
Drink milk and grow and grow and grow.

"Then, one day, a friend told us what Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules had done for his wife. My husband, thank goodness, got a box of them. Three boxes made me completely well—in fact I never did finish the third box. The neighbors could scarcely believe their eyes when they saw me outside."

PLAN MEMORIAL TO ELLEN TERRY

Old Home of Famous Actress May Become Library of Theatre.

LONDON, England, Dec. 11. — (Canadian Press).—Since the death of Dame Ellen Terry, noted actress, there has been evidence of a strong desire that the widespread love and admiration which she inspired in life both as a woman and artist should be given some permanent expression. It is proposed to either acquire the fine old Tudor timbered house at Tenterden, Kent, where she spent most of the last 25 years of her life and where she died; or to keep two rooms, in one of which she died, in much the state they wre in during her lifetime; and to turn another room into a library of books on the drama and theatre.

WOULD HAVE TEST BEFORE MARRIAGE

Health Examination Not Only Necessary But Reasonable, Says Doctor.

TORONTO, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—"Health examinations before marriage are not only necessary but reasonable," said Dr. George W. Ross, speaking before the Toronto Social Hygiene Council here in urging the necessity of legislation in this respect. He pointed out that all big institutions demanded a health certificate from their employes and that the important institution of marriage is just as much in need of such care on the part of the contracting parties. Dr. Ross added that the medical profession was eager to co-operate with such proposed legislation and urged that it be adopted.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE
By Mary Marshall.

The new evening silhouette gives the impression of height as well as slenderness by reason of the long straight hanging skirt drapery. This black transparent velvet gown with rhinestone straps and buckle is an excellent example of this tendency.

Word has been going the rounds that the thin girls had had their day and that fashion was now going to give the plump sisters a chance, and girls who have remained slender not by virtue of any natural tendency to skinniness, but simply by heroically sticking to a strict reducing diet, have—on the strength of these rumors—let down a bit on their self-inflicted dietary restrictions. One girl I know had hot chocolate with whipped cream instead of her customary tea and lemon at luncheon the other day.

From what I have observed within the last two or three weeks this talk about the return of curves to fashion was all rather premature. Because where the most influential of well-dressed women foregather the prevailing silhouette seems to be quite as slender as ever and the new longer skirt drapery gives—and demands—an effect of willowiness that is quite different from the rounded bouffancy that some of us had anticipated.

This new slender silhouette has been commented on as characteristic of the fashionable women seen in recent opera audiences both in New York and Chicago. Those who expected to see a fair representation of the bouffant type of gown were disappointed. My own impression is that there is more of the straight-hanging, classic type of drapery and less of the fluttering, animated sort than was seen last season, and certainly one sees fewer of the out-and-out period evening frocks than has been the case for several seasons.

WHAT IS CORRECT?

SIGNING LETTERS.

Mrs. E. C.: Your signature should be written in full, without a prefix. A married woman's signature is her own name, "Charlotte Jones," not "Mrs. James Jones." If writing a business note, or a note to someone who may not know her identity, she may place her husband's name in brackets beneath her signature, like this:

Charlotte Jones
(Mrs. James Jones).

This would be correct usage in your letters to me, because it gives me the proper form to use in addressing the reply.

The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion

I WONDER how many housewives in Peterborough, who when buying meat, do not simply ask for a piece of beef, but order the cut which will suit their purpose best.

• • • • • •

It is really surprising to know how few housewives are really intelligent when it comes to buying the different cuts of meat.

• • • • • •

I suppose nearly every housewife knows that less tender cuts of meat and those which are less expensive, are just as nutritious as the tender cuts. Careful cooking will make these cuts almost as good to the taste as the more tender ones, perhaps not as quite.

• • • • • •

If you desire to buy a tender cut for a steak, you might order sirloin, porterhouse, tenderloin, club or short cut rib. For a tender roast, ask for rib or loin.

• • • • • •

But if you are an economical housewife, and are willing to try to make a less expensive and less tender cut nutritious as well as delicious, you may order for a steak, chuck, shoulder, flank, etc. For less expensive roasts, chuck ribs, cross arm, clod or round may be ordered.

• • • • • •

A really intelligent buyer will study these cuts, until she can tell at a glance, exactly what part of the animal the cut came from and what is is called by the butcher. If housewives were able to do this, they would not be at the mercy of nobody as a meat buyer.

• • • • • •

There would not be so many disappointments and the housewife would be more likely to get what she wanted, besides gaining the respect of the butcher from whom the meat is bought.

• • • • • •

In cooking meats, the general practice is to sear tender meats until well browned and then reduce the heat and cook slowly, with no water added and no cover to keep in the steam.

• • • • • •

In cooking less tender meats, first sear them, then add a little water, cover tightly to shut in the steam and cook for a long time over a slow fire.

• • • • • •

This week's help is a very helpful one—instructions for decorating the Christmas tree. Do not forget to send a stamped, addressed envelope for this.

• • • • • •

When one speaks and hears the word Christmas, one gets a vision of good things to eat—candies, oranges and nuts, which always seem to play an important part in these goodies.

• • • • • •

Many of our housewives in Peterborough have the art for salting nuts which are really delicious for the holiday season.

• • • • • •

"It is not too soon now," says a food expert, "to prepare salted nuts for the holiday, if they are packed in airtigh. boxes baween oiled paper.

• • • • • •

This food expert says that all varieties of nuts can be salted in the home kitchen. "There is no trick to salting the nuts, spreading upon absorbent paper and then sprinkling them cautiously with salt before removing from temptation."

• • • • • •

Large Brazil nuts, pecans, filberts and walnuts, almonds, and all the other nuts, are meat for salting.

• • • • • •

For each cup of nuts, take two tablespoons of olive oil and a half teaspoon of salt. Any tasteless cooking oil may be used, instead of olive oil. Butter burns to quickly to make it an ideal fat for browning nut meats delicately.

• • • • • •

Place two tablespoons of oil in the deep saucepan and let this get hot, but not too hot. Pour it in the cup of nut meats and stir around, letting them heat uniformly. In three minutes they should be a delicate brown. Skim out the brown ones and place on absorbent paper.

• • • • • •

After all the nut meats are browned, place them in a stout bag. Shake the enclosed nut meats and rub together firmly, so the skins will become loosened. Then remove the meats from the bag, separating meats from the skins.

• • • • • •

Place the meats upon a fresh paper and sprinkle with the salt; let cool and shake free from salt and pack between oiled paper in the tin box.

• • • • • •

If one cup of nuts is salted at a time, the job will not become so tiresome, which would otherwise happen if a lot were done at one time.

CHINESE WIVES LEARN NURSING

One-Third of All in Toronto Take Red Cross Course.

USE THEIR BABIES

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Twenty out of the 65 Chinese wives and mothers in Toronto form one of the most interesting of the local Red Cross Home Nursing Classes. They are highly intelligent and seem delighted to bring their babies to be used in the various demonstrations. A Chinese woman, a student in one of the medical colleges, gave some of the instruction. The members had to be accompanied to and from their homes, as neither the women nor the children from the families from which the class was drawn, are ever allowed alone on the street.

Another interesting class was organized by Miss Goodman the supervisor, among the blind girls in Clarkewood, and after certain adjustments had been made, the nurse was able to teach them several helpful things. Many members of the class were the mothers of children, quite normal children, by the way.

UNSCHOLARLY STUDIES IN SCHOLARS

Specially Written for Examiner By "SCHOOLMARM"

Betty will always be a refreshing memory to me. The qualities I most associate with her are cleanliness and happiness. Pictures of her are ones that will ever be very welcome to "flash upon that inward eye that is the bliss of solitude."

First, I see her in her little pleated skirt and sweater tripping into the class-room looking like a small incarnation of health and good spirits.

On Hallowe-en I see her dressed for a masquerade. She is a bride—a most fairly-like one. Her costume is simplicity itself and bespeaks an ingenious mother and an adaptable Betty. She wears a white frock, short of sleeves, and low of neck, white shoes and stockings and a veil made of two white sash curtains fastened about her head beneath a wreath of artificial white blossoms. In her hand she carries a bouquet of stiff, faded, red velvet poppies. In combination with her wonderful, clear skin the effect is so charming that when, in playing "Truth or Dare" I am dared to "kiss Betty," I respond very willingly.

The next picture is a Sunday one. Betty in her cap and white choir gown marches sedately up the steps to the choir loft and I have an idea that her sweet, childish treble must be one of the most pleasing tributes that rise to the great white throne.

Only once have I seen Betty weep. At noon, one day, she came flying back to me with tears streaming down her face. "George put some ink on my neck." She was well-nigh inconsolable, and the culprit had made good his escape—thus delaying the course of justice. However, the afternoon found Betty quite her usual immaculate, happy self. An application of soap had restored her self-respect and equanimity.

TEACHERS MAY BE PROTECTED

Death of Estelle Jones Stirs Local Council of Women to Action.

LIFE IS DIFFICULT

VICTORIA, B.C. Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—All young school teachers in the lonely parts of Canada will be interested to know that the Local Council of Women has been stirred to action by the tragic death of Miss Estelle Jones, the 20-year-old school-teacher of Cowichan, whos death was brought about by the "unjustifiable, unfeeling and underhand" criticism of her work by two members of her school board. They have arranged to send a delegation to wait upon the minister of education to urge that steps be taken by the department to protect young eachers in isolated districts. Speakers at a meeting of the Local Council emphasized the young girl's unhappiness, alone, without friends, subjected to criticism and trying to keep discipline in her little class-room and teach her handful of children.

LONDON, England, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press)—While "Hickory Dickory Dock" and a selection from "Madame Butterfly" were being played on a phonograph 21 blind babies were being quietly removed to a place of safety from the flames of their burning home, "Sunshine House," at Chorley Wood, Herts. The sightless little ones had been having a tea-party when the home was found to be on fire. Fortunately all the children except one, were in the garden when the fire broke out. A nurse rescued the sick child from the building.

"THE PORT OF MISSING GIRLS" TEACHING A POWERFUL LESSON NOW SHOWING AT LOCAL THEATRE.

Warning the Young of Perils and Pitfalls and Providing Food For Thought for Parents, Sensational Picture Advances Reason For Disappearing Girls.

Girls being taught to "watch their step"; parents to take more interest in the social life of their daughters to the end that they may be guided safely through the pitfalls that beset them at the threshhold of womanhood; the machinations of those who prey upon femininity when it begins to flower, and lastly the triumph of the church when character that is every one's right asserts itself—all these are most powerfully depicted in the film masterpiece, "The Port of Missing Girls," which is now being shown at the Regent Theatre.

Drama in Good Taste.

The producers have shown a keen insight into the average run of human nature by not overdoing it. There are plenty of opportunites to run away with the plot, certain scenes that could have been depicted so as to offend good taste. There is nothing of the kind in the picture, and yet, because of several sensational climaxes without exaggeration, and undoubtedly will leave in its wake plenty of food for thought long after its runs are completed.

The characters are admirably cast throughout. Barbara Bedford as Ruth King, in the feature role, adds charm and entertainment to the picture. She is supported by Malcolm McGregor as the dashing young bootlegger with a luxurious car who rescues her from sailing into the inafmous "port."

The picture shows the ideal conditions in the home of Cyrus King, a wealthy lawyer, whose wife is a leading figure in social welfare work. Ruth King, a pretty co-ed, overhears her father order his niece from the home for remaining out until four in the morning, and the following day, after an all-night experience, Ruth does not go home, fearing her father's wrath.

Ruth had once been offered a stage career by questionable persons, and after a worried night at a hotel decides to enter the "school of acting." The story then leads to the home of a millionaire "daddy" who is influential in certain theatrical circles, who stages a party for his protege. McGregor arriving at the party with wet goods finds Ruth. She refuses to leave, and McGregor rushes to her father's home and reveals her whereabouts. Events happen in quick succession, Ruth, emerges unharmed, and the "daddy" finds himself under arrest in connection with the death of another missing girl.

There are a number of scenes in which superb acting is depicted, among them the one where Ruths father, in the agony of suspense caused by the disappearance of his daughter—HIS daughter— the last one on earth whom he would suspect of any wrong-doing, resorts to the radio. He talks through the "mike," imporing everybody, everywhere to help him find his daughter. The stress of his emotion and his agonized appeal electrify the audience.

There were 75,000 girls reported missing in the United States last year.

What became of them? Who is to blame?

The picture answers these questions.

AT THE CAPITOL.

GRETA GARBO IN "THE MYSTERIOUS LADY.

The exotic Greta Garbo is the heroine of this feature picture at the Capitol Theatre, and she makes a wonderful figure as the Russian spy, Tania Feodorova, who captures the love of an Austrian officer, Karl von Raden, and then betrays him. The manner in which she retrieves his love afterwards is well done. The direction in this picture is outstanding. Although the audience may not like Tania's methods, they never lose sympathy with her, and that is the main thing where a heroine is concerned. However in the course of this picture she gets away with a good deal, and it is only by a final thrilling coup d'etat that she may satisfactorily be allowed to have a happy finale to her career.

Greta Garbo has methods all her own. She is one of the most graceful stars of the screen and her clothes are marvellous. The background afforded for her talents in this picture is extremely romantic. She meets Karl von Raden (Conrad Nagel) at the opera, and he escorts her home, to fall madly in love with her. They spend the day together on a motor trip and then he departs for Berlin with secret plans of Austrian defences. Tania, who is a Russian spy, steals these, in a fit of enmity against Karl because he upbraids her with her patriotic efforts. He is accused of treason to his country, and is degraded and put in prison. But his uncle, chief of the secret service in Vienna, arranges for his escape, so that he may go to Warsaw and force from Tania the truth regarding the real spy, who is Karl's friend, Max Heinrich.

The episodes which follow, showing the rivalry between Karl, disguised as a humble musician, and General Boris Alexandroff, lover of Tania, and chief of the Russian Military Intelligence Department, are extremely interesting. The story moves to a tragic denouement which is frustrated by the desperate action of Tania in the last scene.

There is an odd coincidence in the similarity in theme in one scene of three pictures which have been shown here during the past two weeks. The degradation of a soldier through a woman has been depicted in "Tempest," "Moran of the Marines," and now in this picture.

The comedy is a hilarious affair entitled "The Boy Friend," in which the well known little Jewish comedian and his tall wife try to swerve their daughter's affections by pretending to go crazy. The Aesop Fable picture also follows along the line of the boy friend, and the moral is: "Know your boy friend like a book, and stick to your own library."

On the stage in vaudeville at the evening performances for the first half of the week are Gene McGrohan's Canadian Juvenile Troubadours, an octette of versatile youths who excel in syncopated rhythm and hot harmony. They have some, snappy band numbers, a school day's offering, in which the boys act as scholars and the director as teacher, and some lively solo renditions which include a piano selection, banjo solos and an ensemble that commences with cornet, flute and saxaphone. The peppy music by this group was loudly applauded last night.

RANGERS MAY DRAFT FOSTER

Former Toronto Rugby Star Sought For Ranger's Defence.

LEAFS AT NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, December 11. Canadian Press. — The fast travelling Toronto Maple Leafs will make their second appearance of the season at Madison Square Garden here to-night, when they engage the New York Rangers in an intersectional National Hockey League match.

The Leafs, along with the New York Americans, have so far proven the surprise of the Canadian section of the league. On their previous visit the Leafs lost to the A's 3 to 0, but on that occasion they were minus the services of both Cox and Carson. They will be at full strength for to-night's tussle, and a team to be feared, so much so, that Lester Patrick, manager of the Rangers, has been trying desperately to locate material to bolster up his weakened defence for this game. The Rangers will be fighting with their backs to the wall, as they are tied for the group leadership with Detroit and are handicapped by injuries received by Johnson and Abel. The latter may get into the game but Patrick is taking no chances and announced to-day that he was endeavoring to sign up a well known defence star from the minors for the Leaf struggle.

Definite announcement of the deal will not be disclosed until to-day, the management announced, as final details have not yet been cleared up.

Rumors were prevalent around the Garden to-day that "Yip" Foster of the Springfield Indians, would be recalled by the Rangers. Patrick, however, denied that the former Toronto Rugby star was the player he was after.

DRAFT BREACH IS FURTHER WIDENED

Leagues Appoint Representative Committees For West Baden Conference.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Meeting in special session as a forerunner of its annual meeting to-day, the National League decided that it will not be represented at a conference on the baseball draft to be held at West Baden, Ind., Jan. 10.

The question of the draft came before the meeting in a letter from J. H. Farrell, secretary of the National Association, who advised that a committee to represent all the "B," "C," and "D" leagues had been appointed for the West Baden conference and that the Class "AA" and "A" leagues would have special committees from each league.

"We do not feel that we should go to any conference," said President John A. Heydler last night after the National League's President had spent an afternoon in discussion of baseball in general and the National League brand in particular.

"We will be glad to receive any communication from the conference when some proposition can be submitted to us."

SALVATION ARMY WOMEN HEAR INSPIRING ADDRESS

Mrs. R. Henry Is Special Speaker at Large Rally For Ladies.

SERIES OF MEETINGS.

Temptations To Young People Have Increased Ten-fold, Says Speaker.

"We speak of the terrible conduct of the young people of to-day. We have formed the habit of thinking of them as very evil in their ways and inclinations. But instead of criticizing them, we should love them. We may say that we never thought of doing such things in our youth, but we must remember that there are ten times as many temptations nowadays as there were in former years for the young people."

Thus Mrs. R. Henry of Toronto, wife of Colonel Henry, Chief Secretary for the Canada East Territory of the Salvation Army, spoke to the women who attended the meeting in the Temple last evening, to which a general invitation to all women of the city had been extended.

It was an inspiring and friendly address that quickened the interest of her hearers. The quiet attraction of the speaker, the wide experience that was evident in her relation of many incidents coming to her attention during a long course of work in Salvation Army endeavors, both in this country, where she and her husband have resided during the past 18 months, and in Australia, their native home, and the manifest affection with which she regarded the women who had come to hear her speak, and who turned out in large numbers for the meeting, made this talk on "The Triumph of Love," a notable addition to speches by women in the annals of the city. The thanks extended by Mrs. Green, wife of Ensign Green, at the conclusion of the address found a warm echo in the enthusiastic applause vouchsafed the speaker.

Address for Women.

The meeting, which did not extend beyond two hours in length, and which forms the commencement of a series of addresses which will be given to women at the Temple during the forthcoming winter season, opened with a favorite hymn, "He Leadeth Me," and with prayer led by Mrs. Parnell.

A great deal of the success of the evening was due to the cheerful and enthusiastic chairlady, introduced by Mrs. Greene as Mrs. Ritchie of Toronto, wife of Major Ritchie, and to the excellent program which prefaced the main address of the evening.

This program included an opening chorus by the Women Songsters of the Temple, led by Songster Ethel Payton, in the stirring, brisk, vigorous music of "The Soldiers' Chorus." When General Booth organized the Salvation Army, so many yars ago, he took to himself the tunes that were popular as street and parlor songs. "Why should the devil have all the good music?" he said. So the Army to this day taks to itself the stirring melodies that catch the attention and fits to them words of Gospel significance. This martial music of operatic calibre was attractive in the extreme as the melodious, well- harmonized voices of the Songsters swelled forth in its quick cadences.

The Songsters also gave in chorus, "The Best I Possess." Songster N. Boorman gave a reading entitled "The Convict's Little Girl," with a wealth of dramatic emphasis and splendid presentation and Songster Mrs. Shadgett gave, in beautiful voice, a vocal solo, "Lord, I Believe." Songster Mrs. S. Richardson's organ selection was a brightly played demonstration of what can be done by skilful fingers on a small organ, and one of the highlights of the musical program was the hand-bell solo played by Mrs. R. C. Braund. It is seldom that bells are heard in this manner, and the resulting music, as played last night by Mrs. Braund, was extraordinarily attractive. The selections on the bells were the old favorites, "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes," "Will ye no Come Back Again?" and "When You and I were Young, Maggie."

Applause followed each number on a very fine program, for which Mrs. S. Richardson acted as accompanist.

Mrs. Ritchie, introducing Mrs. Henry, speaker of the evening, mentioned the position held by her husband, Colonel R. Henry of Toronto, who is second in command of the Salvation Army in the Canada East Territory, which comprises Ontario, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Cape Breton and Newfoundland, and Mrs. Henry is Territorial Home League Secretary for this division.

Love As a Power

Mrs. Henry, introducing her subject, "The Triumph of Love," spoke of love as the most powerful force for good in the world. It was love that led Christ to suffer and die on the cross for the sins of the world and it was love that inspired the woman who was His mother, who knew in her heart for many years what a sacrifice would one day be demanded of her and who came with unfaltering footsteps to stand beneath the cruel Tree on the summit of Calvary.

It was the love of another type, the love of empire, of king and country, that took the soldiers of many lands on a long journey to fight for what was right and it was woman's love again that sweetened the cruelties of war and alleviated the sufferings of men in the dark days of conflict.

Mrs. Henry went on to speak of many instances recorded in the daily press where love has triumphed over self. The father who rushed into the burning building to rescue his four sons, only to give his own life as a final sacrifice, the Prince of Wales stooping in a hospital to kiss the cheek of a man disfigured in a horrible manner, the Rev. Father Damien giving his last year of life and working without discouragement or compliment among the lepers in a far-off plague-stricken island, Francis of Assisi, stooping from his horse to embrace the leper met on the roadside, and the woman who went on a motorcycle thousands of miles to the city of Toronto, to rescue and take back with her the son who had fallen on evil ways; all these were instanced as demonstrations of the power of love.

Holding up as an example one of the women of the Old Testament, Mrs. Henry spoke of the love and sacrificial fervor of the wife of King Saul, who, when her husband had suicided and her sons were hanged as a penance for their father's crime, resolved to let nothing prevent her from a ceaseless vigil beide the hill where the corpses were exposed. She determined that the foul birds and beasts should not tear their flesh and she kept her lonely and terrible vigil with such unceasing bravery and fortitude that the news came to the ears of King David finally and he ordered the bodies to be taken down and given decent burial. Thus was a mother's love rewarded.

Mrs. Henry went on to speak in eloquent terms of the havoc wrought by drink, particularly among the youth of the land, and gave several instance from her own experience of the evils resulting from a widespread use of intoxicants.

Interest in League

She also advocated very strongly a more general interest in, and knowledge of, the aims and work of the League of Nations and asked her audience to destir themselves in gaining an insight into its endeavors, so that when the necessity arises they may not be ignorant of its efficacy.

"Without a purpose it is impossible to do much. Try and take an interest in the things that matter and as for the things that don't matter, let them go by the board. And one of the things that matters is the development of the character of the women of Canada. In the women of this great Dominion lies its future hope. Be strong. Be earnest. Be persevering and patient and industrious. And never forget to have a kind word for the woman who has sinned."

Just as a final bit of encouragement to constant and earnest endeavor and perseverance in the cause of good, Mrs. Henry related the story of Dr. Brown, thep hysician who worked amongst the poor of a great city. He had little money and his signboard consisted of a piece of board with a hand pointing up and the words: "Dr. Brown Upstairs." Up the stairs leading to his little office climbed the feet of many a weary sufferer, so that when he died and those who loved him wished to remember his good deeds in some way and lacked the finances to do it with a great flourish, they went and took that sign and placed over his grave the little board with the hand pointing Heavenward and the words: "Dr. Brown, Upstairs."

At the conclusion of the speech and the final hymn and Benediction which followed it, light refreshments were served by the ladies in the Young People's Temple, many staying to take part in a pleasant social gathering which served as a close to a very fine meeting.

ASSOCIATION RE-ORGANIZED

Principal Wightman Promises Hearty Co-operation From Central School Staff.

SPLENDID PROGRAM.

A meeting of the Home and School Association of Central School was held last night in the kindergarten room. K. S. Wightman occupied the chair, and a large number of parents were present—the banner going to Miss Buck's room. In addressing the meeting, Mr. Wightman said he was pleased to see so many parents present, and emphasized the fact that the officers would receive the heartiest co-operation from himself and the staff of teachers.

The association has been lately reorganized, and Mrs. Flannery, the president, and the other officers hope to receive the help of the parents, especially in their attendance at the monthly meetings.

Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe was present and gave a talk to the members. He chose as his address the subject which everyone is thinking so much about just now, "Christmas Giving." His inspiring and helpful advice was heard with much appreciation, and no doubt many of his hearers will find it very helpful. He told what a true Christian's Christmas ought to be like, and that the smallest gifts accompanied by love and discretion, were worth more than the large presents. More heavenly riches ought to accompany the earthly riches, and the greatest gift which parents can give to their children is that of teaching them unselfishness.

A splendid program was rendered. The first item was a song by little Elspeth Boorman, entitled "Dolly's Broke," accompanied by her sister, Gweneth Boorman. This young artist received great applause for her sweet singing.

Margaret Wyllie then gave two readings, "The Minister to Tea" and "Little Pat and the Parson." These numbers were well received and had to be responded to by an encore.

Next on the program was Roy Pitchford, who delighted the audience with two well-rendered solos. He was accompanied by Miss Lily Bacon.

Robert Wyllie showed great ability in two violin solos. He also was accompanied by Miss Bacon.

A delightful vocal solo number was next given by Mrs. Ingram, who had to respond with an encore. Miss Webber accompanied her on the piano.

The program closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

Dainty refreshments were then served by the ladies of the association.

GHOST IS SEEN AS DEATH OMEN FOR EX-KAISER

Special Figure is Blamed For Other Royal Fatalities of Hohenzollerns.

APPEARS AT PALACE

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—A special figure which Germans believe may presage the early death of the ex-kaiser Wilhelm II, has appeared at the imperial palace here and now residents of Berlin are speculating as to whether the old legend of the 'white lady' of the Hohenzollerns again will be fulfilled

The Hohenzollern family has no real "white elephants" in particular, but it does have a ghostly apparition known as the "white lady." The ghostly messenger, "die weise frau" first made her appearance in 1806, and since then she has been known as an omen of ill fortune to the former ruling family of the German empire.

The legend of the spectral figure is that whenever it appears, it presages the early death of some member of the Hohenzollern family. The ghost is greatly feared by the ex-kaiser, Wilhelm, owing to the fact it appeared shortly before the end of the world war and the downfall of the Hohenzollern dynasty.

The latest appearance of the "white lady" was reported by a night watchman at the imperial palace only a few nights ago. The palace now is a museum. The watchman declared he had seen the apparition in the rooms formerly occupied by the ex-kaiser. From this it is inferred that any imminent ill-fortune to a member of the Hohenzollern family would in all likelihood fall upon Wilhelm himself.

Old Paper Tells Story

A document in regard to the first appearance of the "white lady" has been recently discovered. It has been secretly handed down for generations in the family of Count von Nostitz, of the imperial court. It was later hidden in the official archives.

The count details in the document the initial appearance of the ghost as having been responsible for the death of Crown Prince Ludwig von Hohenzollern.

Declaring he and the crown prince were resting "the night before the disastrous and bloody battle of Saarfeldt," in the chateau of Prince von Schwartzburg-Rudolsladt, Count von Nostitz wrote

"We were standing or seated about in the large dining hall, and the prince was standing with his back to the fire, when suddenly we saw him turn deathly pale. He seized a torch and rushed out into the corridor where the bodyguards were walking up and down. And I, who had followed the prince, saw him pursue with drawn sword a figure all in white, which suddenly disappeared.

"His eyes snapping strangely, the prince turned to me and asked, 'Hast thou seen it also, Nostitz?' I answered that I had.

"The prince then questioned the sentinels, and one of them declared he had seen a figure in a long white cloak.

"The next day the prince was killed in battle."

EXPENSIVE HUBBY

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif., Dec. 11—D. W. Bellew of this city evidently does not hold with the time-honored custom wherein the husbands supports the wife. It cost Mrs. Bellew nearly $40,000 to support him for three years, in addition to paying their wedding expenses. Bellew had $1700 when he married, but he used this as pin money and lost most of it at gambling, charged Mrs. Bellew, who won the divorce.

The water clocks, or Clepsydra, used by the Egyptians, Chinese, Greeks and Romans, were the earliest forms of time-measuring devices constructed by mankind.

Was Tortured With Eczema For Years

Mrs. George Shambler, 119 Creighton St., Halifax, N.S., writes:—"After being tortured with eczema, for years, and trying everything possible from doctors and drug stores, a friend recommended me to take

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

I sent my husband to get me a bottle, and after I had taken it I noticed the cooling of my blood, so he advised me to continue, and after taking several bottles I can truly say it is a wonderful medicine."

THE LESSER EVIL.

GARY, Ind., Dec. 10.—How often has it been said that an auto is civilization's most expensive possession? Nickica Chesuk didn't have much money, but he did have a lot of fun in his ramshackle old car. Then it jumped a curb. A policeman arrested Chesuk. He couldn't pay his fine and the judge advised him to sell the car and pay the fine, which was $5.00.

ARGENTINA IS BELIEVED TO BE BACKING PARAGUAY

Pan-American Congress Appeals To Belligerents To Arbitrate Differences.

ARGENTINA NOT PRESENT.

United States Is Anxious To Avoid Intervention—Delegates Strive For Peace.

WASHINGTON, December 11.—With two of its member States on the verge of war, the Pan-American Conference on Conciliation and Arbitration met yesterday to discuss the peaceful settlement of disputes.

Invited nearly a year ago to come to Washington and make a convention dealing with the subject of arbitration in general, the delegates from twenty Latin-American countries found themselves at the outset with a real dispute on their hands for Bolivia and Paraguay are reported to be practically at war.

The delegates took recess this afternoon and discussed behind closed doors the best method of dealing with the strained situation which has arisen out of border incidents in the last few weeks between Bolivia and Paraguay, and the long standing dispute over the district known as Chaco Boreal, once wanted by nobody, but now known to be rich in oil lands.

Opening ceremonies of the Pan-American Conference yesterday were under the cloud of the Bolivian-Paraguayan dispute.

Delegates from these two countries sat in the same conference room, while back home their diplomatic representatives had been recalled.

Resolution Adopted.

As soon as the address of welcome from President Coolidge had been heard, and Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg had been elected chairman of the conference, Dr. Victor Martua of Peru moved the consideration of the unexpected situation arising out of the Bolivian-Paraguayan dispute. The resolution was adopted and a committee, headed by Martua and comprising delegates from Peru, Cuba, Chile and Brazil and the United States, was appointed to consider the matter and frame an appeal to Bolivia and Paraguay that they arbitrate their differences "in a spirit of justice, concord and fraternity."

The diplomatic representatives in Washington of Bolivia and Paraguay were invited to attend the committee meetings. Charles Evans Hughes represents the United States on this committee.

When the conference convenes in open session on Tuesday morning it will receive the report of the committee and probably will send an appeal to the two belligerent countries.

Anxiety in U.S.

The situation is causing much anxiety here as the United States does not relish the idea of having to intervene, as it did in Nicaragua to preserve peace. Even a suggestion of further intervention by this country in the other American Republics would probably wreck the present Pan-American Conference, and invite the censure of many people within the United States. But, if Paraguay is backed by Argentina, as seems likely, the United States may have to help Bolivia, for which country the United States has long shown a very friendly feeling.

The fact that, alone of all the Latin countries, Argentina is not represented at the present Pan-American Conference is regarded as significant. The Argentine Ambassador recently went home and has not been replaced. The biggest Latin-American country has sent no delegation to the conference, and has left its Embassy here without a senior officer during this Congress.

At the Pan-American Conference in Havana last January, the Argentine delegate, Dr. Puertydon, criticized the United States' intervention in Nicaragua and resigned his post in protest.

The Bolivian Legation late today sent to representatives of all the countries assembled here a note explaining its position in the dispute with Paraguay.

HOSPITAL NURSE THANKS WOMEN

Secretary of Local Branch of Grenfell Mission Receives Letter From Labrador.

Indicative of genuine appreciation is the letter recently received by the secretary of the Grenfell Mission, Peterborough Branch, from the Harington Hospital, Canadian Labrador. It reads:

Mrs. Langley,
Peterborough, Ontario.

Dear Madam,

I am sorry we have been unable to write to you sooner, to thank you for the bale of clothing and new wool sent from your association. As the fishing has been very poor this year, and the hardship great in consequence, the things will be doubly appreciated. We find everything very useful. Please accept our sincere thanks.

Yours truly,
ISABEL COLE,
Nurse-in-Charge.

WINNERS ARE ANNOUNCED

Marion Storey of Omemee Wins First Prize in Santa's Chimney Competition.

MANY ENTRIES.

Santa's Chimney Editor certainly was given a big contract when the immense number of chimneys sent in was opened up, and comparison started. It was at once evident that a very great amount of work had been expended in producing neat, attractive chmneys, and with only three prizes to award, it was a rather heart-breaking job to have to pass over so many really creditable attempts and decide on the best three. It was finally settled by The Examiner adding a 4th prize of $2.00 and 10 more prizes of $1.00 each, as a recognition of the splendid interest taken in the contest. Some of the letters that accompanied the chimneys told of the pleasure the contest had given them, and also that the close study of the advertisements had helped settle the gift question for the participants. In The Examiner window entries of the 14 prize-winners are shown, as well as the big heap of unplaced entries, among which are 50 to 100 that are all worthy of special mention.

So much work has been put on the chimneys, winners and others, that if any contestant wishes their entry returned to them, they may have it by calling at The Examiner any time after Saturday, Dec. 15th, up to which time they will be on exhibit in our display window.

Following is the list of awards:

1st—Marion Storey, R.R. 2, Omemee, $10.00.
2nd—Mrs. Fred Hooper, 166 Dublin Street, $7.00.
3rd—G. D. McClelland, 239 Engleburn Avenue, $3.00.
4th—Freda Kilcher, 264 Reid Street, $2.00.

Ten others, to each of whom is awarded a prize of $1.00:
Mrs. F. Benson, Regent Apts., 139½ Hunter Street.
Merton Pearse, 435 Rogers Street.
Mrs. W. J. Rhodes, 277 John Street.
Helen P. Bonney, 711 Water Street.

AMOS BYERS

BETHANY, Dec. 11 (Examiner Correspondence)—The death occurred very suddenly on Sunday morning of Amos Byers, who was unmarried and lived alone on his farm on the boundary between Cavan and Manvers, just south of the village.

Early in the week Mr. Byers had some teeth extracted and it is thought that poison from them went through his system as he was very ill for several days, passing away early Sunday morning. His sister, Mrs. Fallis, and several of his friends were with him during his illness.

He leaves to mourn his loss one brother, William, and three sisters, Mrs. David Cairns of Bethany, Mrs. Perry of Peterborough, and Mrs. Fallis of Millbrook.

Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson and George Washington were known as the tongue, pen and sword of the Revolution.

KING GEORGE UNDERGOES OPERATION

Ottawa Power For Central Ontario

New Unit Nearly Ready

44,000 VOLTS.

Construction Commenced August 1 and Was Ready Two Months Later.

(Special to Examiner)

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 12.— An announcement of importance to the power consumers of the St. Lawrence and Central Ontario systems was made to-day by the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission in a survey of the work just completed on the 15,000 KV-A transformer station at Smiths Falls.

Power to the new station is delivered by a transmission line from a point on the Ottawa River near the plant of the Ottawa and Hull Power Plant. The power under contract from the Gatineau Power Company is transmitted to the new station at 110,000 volts and it is there transformed to 44,000 volts and initially will be transmitted to the St. Lawrence and Central Ontario systems at the latter voltage.

The delivery of Gatineau energy to Smiths Falls is contrasted in several features with the delivery of such power to Toronto for use by this city and by other municipalities in the vicinity. The voltage of power to Leaside is 220,000 and it comes in 25 cycle.

Installed Outside

Construction was commenced August 1, 1928 and was ready for service on October 1st, last. The 15,000 KV-A transformer bank was manufactured in Canada. It is composed of three 5,000 KV-A units (with a spare unit) and a "regulating" transformer which provides facilities for changing taps under load. The main units are of the three winding type rated at 5,000 KV-A 63,500, 25,400, 4,150 volts. The high voltage winding is provided with three 2½ percent taps, one above and two below its rating. These caps may be changed when the bank is de-energized, by means of an external mechanism mounted on the side of each tank. The transmission line after reaching Smith's Falls and Kingston is continued from the Rideau Power Company at Merrickville to Brockville.

GRIPPE EPIDEMIC IN MONTREAL CITY

Members of Staffs of City Hospitals Stricken With Dread Disease.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12.— (Canadian Press)—There is a real epidemic of grippe in the city, though not of the same dread type which ravaged Montreal ten years ago. At the Montreal General Hospital twenty-five nurses have been stricken, while two doctors and eight maids have been affected from the Royal Victoria staff. Notre Dame Hospital has fifteen of its staff ill. The east end of the city is hard hit. Many cases are reported and there has been a sharp falling off in school attendance.

PRINCE ARRIVES AT BEDSIDE OF ROYAL PARENT

Slight Improvement Was Noticed Late Last Night in His Majesty's Condition.

CHANGE FOR BETTER.

Prince Visits King and Then Goes To His Own Home at York House.

LONDON, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press)—King George's physicians at 10.30 a.m. to-day issued this bulletin on his condition:

"The King had some hours of sleep. The slight improvement noted late last night is maintained. The temperature being somewhat lower and the general condition a little better."

It was stated officially to-day that Prince George, who has been serving aboard the H.M.S. Durban, left Bermuda this morning for New York. He will leave New York on the Berengaria which sails for England Friday.

The Sovereign of the British Empire, exhausted by three weeks of struggle against serious illness, late last night greeted his son and heir, who had hurried six thousand miles to stand at his bedside.

The King had not previously been told of the expected arrival of the Prince of Wales, but he was said to have immediately recognized the Prince. Their visit was not prolonged, for fear of tiring the patient.

Change For Better.

At about the same time it was said at Buckingham Palace that there was a slight change for the better in the condition of the King.

The Prince, in the hour that he spent at the Palace, saw also his mother, his sister and his brother, the Duke of York, who have been bearing [illegible] of the direct strain imposed on the Royal family by the illness of His Majesty. The Prince then went to his own home at York House.

The Associated Press learned at Buckingham Palace just before midnight that there had been a slight change for the better in the condition of the King.

The King's physicians issued the following bulletin at 8.30 p.m.: "His Majesty had a quiet day. There is no increase in the exhaustion, and the pulse remains steady. — (Signed) Hewett, Dawson."

The King is struggling magnificently against his illness, it was semi-officially said last night at Buckingham Palace. This was shown by the fact that his exhaustion has not increased, while his pulse remains steady The night bulletin was said to be even more satisfactory than had been anticipated.

The Palace information said, however, that it was not considered altogether reassuring, and that deep anxiety persists, and must continue. The quiet day which His Majesty passed enabled his constitution to continue to fight against the general infection in his system, which had been weakening him during the last few days.

The Prince of Wales, when he reached the Palace, after a record-breaking journey from his hunting-grounds in East Africa, was permitted to see his father. Sir E. Farquhar Buzzard had called again last night after the evening bulletin was issued and joined his fellow-physicians, Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn, in further consultation.

Greets His Brother.

The Duke of York, with the Duchess, had dined with Queen Mary last night before he hastened to Victoria Station to meet his elder brother and inform him of the condition of their father as they rode to the Palace.

Princess Mary, only daughter of the King, attended a charity concert last night, but left at the end of the first part of the program in order to greet the Prince of Wales at the Palace.

Sir William Joynson-Hicks, Home Secretary, at a public dinner last night, said: "I am sure we shall all rejoice even in the slight additional hope which to-night's bulletin gives us, and that we all join in the prayer, 'God Save the King'."

Wins Long Race.

The Prince of Wales last night won his long dash from farthest Afric and reached the sick-room of his stricken father. He arrived at Buckingham Palace at 10.25 p.m. (5.25 p.m. Eastern standard time), where the King for three weeks has been fighting pleurisy and lung infection, which had caused anxiety throughout his Empire. The Prince arrived in London at 10.17 p.m. (5.17 p.m. Eastern standard time).

Aided by the resources of three nations in his final dash across Europe, the heir to the Throne was met on his landing on English soil at Folkestone by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin. Again he received the latest word

Palace Welcome Is Avoided By Prince

LONDON, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press).—The Prince of Wales last night, even at the climax of a 6,000-mile forced journey, showed characteristic avoidance of ceremony. He had been expected to enter Buckingham Palace by the Privy Purse door, where Sir Derek Keppel, Master of the Household, and other officials were waiting to welcome him. Instead, the Prince entered by the garden entrance, which is a most private way, used exclusively by members of the royal family. He thus avoided the official greeting and maintained his expressed wish that everything should be as private as possible.

FIRST CASE GOES TO JURY

Thomas McMillan Is Suing For $400 Damages On Account of Highway Accident.

FOURTH TIME IN COURT.

After a long session of hearing evidence that lasted all yesterday afternoon and the final summing up of the case by the lawyers this morning the jury retired at 12.30 to-day to come to their decision in the case of McMillan vs. Wallace, in which McMillan was suing Wallace for $400 damages.

This is the fourth time this case has appeared in court. It arises out of an accident on the provincial highway near Welcome when on the early morning of September 7 Thomas McMillan, who was proceeding from Toronto to Peterborough, encountered some cattle which belonged to Wallace, on the highway. McMillan believing he could not stop his car coming down the hill at the rate of 32 miles per hour, did not put on his brakes, but took his foot off the accelerator and swerved to the left to avoid the two cattle on the right, only to strike a calf on the left which he had not seen. The calf was killed. McMillan was knocked unconscious, and the car took to the ditch and was smashed beyond repair. Wallace was tried in Police Court in Port Hope for allowing his cattle to be on the road, and was fined. He appealed the case, but the first decision was upheld. Wallace then had McMillan in Division Court at Port Hope and obtained $55.00 for the loss of his calf.

Returning from Toronto.

The evidence showed that McMillan was returning from Toronto about two o'clock in the morning of September 7, having with him in the car some of the members of the local ball team. He came down a hill a short distance from Welcome, and there killed the calf. The car took the ditch and was badly smashed.

It was brought out in the evidence that picnickers had been in the habit of having lunch beneath the shade of the tree near the gate from which the cattle are said to have escaped, and it was thought that these persons may have dropped the bars and thus let the cattle escape. If this were done without Wallace's knowledge, then it was declared that he was not to blame and could not be held responsible for the damages.

However, it was shown in the evidence of Traffic Officer Halleck that Wallace on the morning of the accident declared to him that he had ordered the hired man to go down and fix that fence. However, this evidence was strongly contradicted by the defendant. On the evidence of many farmers of the district, it was said that the gate was secure enough to retain cattle, and that it had kept them in since the first week in July.

Plaintiff to Blame.

The defendant tried to show that the plaintiff was to blame for the accident because he did not drive with due precautions on that dark night, and in coming down the hill. However, because there was no vibration to his engine, the plaintiff said definitely that he was not going faster than 32 miles per hour. It was shown by the defendant that before striking the calf, Wallace had 50 feet in which to stop after hitting the calf, the place being detected by the blood spot on the road, the car went 132 feet on the road, then jumped into the ditch and continued up the ditch until it hit a culvert.

Numerous witnesses for the defendant swore that the gate was perfectly secure for retaining cattle, while the young men who were in the car with McMillan declared that when they observed and tested it that night it seemed very insecure, and that small cattle could escape with ease.

A photograph of the gate brought into court by the defendant, and said by his witnesses to be a fair picture of the gate and the manner in which the bars were placed, was contradicted by the plaintiff and two of his witnesses, who declared that there

TRUE BILL IS RETURNED BY GRAND JURY

Judge Huycke Warns Members That They Must Give Full Consideration to Case.

CRIMINAL CHARGE

Seventeen Prisoners Being Held in Jail, 5 Under Remand and Rest Under Sentence.

After two hours taken in hearing the evidence in the case of the Crown vs. James Webber on the charge of seduction the Grand Jury brought in a true bill and the case will be heard before His Honor Judge Huycke at the December sittings of the General Sessions of the Peace, now in session at the Court House.

The following Grand Jury was sworn: J. T. O'Connel, foreman; J. P. Bickell, John Coones, H. N. Cameron, Charles Flynn, Lewis Pife, Albert Hunter J. W. Kindred, Ronald McKee, Michael McKiever, T. R. Rattenbury, A. J. Troop and Cecil Williamson.

In his address to the Grand Jury, Judge Huycke warned the members that they must give full consideration to this case, and judge if there was sufficient evidence to warrant that the case should be continued. If the case had not sufficient evidence they should bring in a "no bill," and thus save the expense and stigma of a trial to the young man. In considering the evidence, the jury must keep in mind these three points: Did he seduce the girl? Was she of previously chaste character? Was she at the time of seduction between the ages of 16 and 18?

His Honor said that another important part of the Grand Jury's duties was to act as an investigating committee to see that the public money was not being wasted and was being spent to proper advantage in the maintenance of a great many public institutions. An important part of their tour of inspection must necessarily be the jail in which are held at the present time seventeen people, five being under remand and the remaining twelve spending their sentences on various charges of theft, breach of the Liquor Control Act, and assault. The judge paid a compliment to the splendid work of H. Nesbitt, who was jailer for a long number of years, saying that he did splendid and conscientious work and was kind and good, but just. In seeing the people in charge of these public institutions His Honor especially recommended that they, if the jury found them run properly, to say so and give credit where it was due but if any fault was found to have the courage to expose it.

The judge said that in dealing with first offenders it was often the best course to be considered and give them full opportunity to overcome the first mistake. "This," said the judge, "is a discovery that has only recently be made by certain parts of the press and the public. On the other hand there prevails a kind of morbid sentiment among some people against all kinds of punishment, even where punishment is most necessary. Public safety must be maintained and no man should be allowed to commit a crime and get off when he is a hardened criminal." The judge said that people could always be found willing to sign a petition to secure the freedom of a prisoner, no matter what his crime or his record.

His Honor made heartfelt reference

Baltimore Bandits Foiled In Raid On Truck Of Liquor For Washington Envoy's Christmas

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 12.—Four armed bandits attempted yesterday to hold up a truckload of imported wines and liquor, valued at $15,000, consigned to diplomatic representatives of foreign countries for their Christmas festivities in Washington.

The driver of the truck was knocked unconscious by the bandits as he sat at the wheel. Then, as the bandits started to raid the truck, a street car approached and they fled without any loot.

As the truck was near the Canton pier, where the liquor had been taken from a ship, the bandits' car moved up alongside.

"A little mistake has been made," one of the bandits said to the truck driver. "Just move over to the curb. We will have to check up on the shipment of liquor. We are government agents and it's all right."

"It's not all right until you show me your credentials," the driver replied. Four pistols then were leveled at him. Braving the guns, he refused to allow the men to check up on the shipment and one of the bandits then struck him on the head with the butt of a pistol.

The wines on the truck were destined for the embassies of Argentina, Spain and Italy and the legations of Switzerland, Honduras and Haiti.

STOLEN SECURITIES TRAP PAIR IN WALL STREET BOND ROBBERY

PART OF LOOT RECOVERED.

Pair Seized Trying To Cash Bond at Bankers' Trust Company.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Bonds worth $68,000, part of securities worth $168,000, stolen in a unique manner three months ago, were recovered Monday and two men, who had them in possession, were arrested.

Neither was able or willing to divulge the method by which the original theft was accomplished. Police said Monday night the larceny charge probably would be changed to one of possession of stolen property.

"Won Them in Game."

William Turner, one of the two arrested, said he won the $68,000 worth of securities in a dice game in the Hotel Essex, Boston. His associate, George McFaul, said he had been employed by Turner to convert the paper into cash and had been promised $5,000 if he succeeded.

Exactly three months ago Monday, certificates calling for delivery of $168,000 worth of Montgomery, Ward and Company bonds were sent to the brokerage firm of Edward B. Smith and Company.

But the receiving clerk at the Smith concern discovered that one of the bonds had been improperly endorsed. He told the runner to call later. Fifteen minutes later an unknown man came in, in the name of the Smith company, demanded and received the certificates.

Monday McFaul and Turner appeared at the Bankers' Trust Company and tried to cash two of the stolen certificates, police said. The clerk looked up the record on the certificates and found that a "stop" order had been issued against payment. He detained the "customers" in conversation until detectives could arrive.

Three Policemen Killed During Riot In Parel

BOMBAY, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press)—Three policemen and five mill strikers were killed to-day during the riots at Parel in the north end of the city when the mill strikers overpowered the police and then looted shops. Armed police reinforcements were rushed to the district and opened fire on the rioters. Many persons were injured in the disorder.

Shops were closed in Parel and business was at a standstill.

GAS STATION PERMIT ISSUED

COST $8,000.

George street will boast another service station within the next few months, for a building permit has been issued from the city engineer's office.

Applying and receiving the permit on behalf of McColl Brothers Oil Company, M. McIntyre, contractor of this city, will begin work on the erection of the new service station on what is known as the Yelland property on the east side of George street between Brock and Murray streets. June 1, 1929, has been set as the date of completion, the estimated cost being $8,000.

The new service station will be 87 feet by 21 feet 1 inch in general dimension, with concrete foundation, brick and stucco walls enclosing three rooms, on one story. Gravel patent shingles, brick chimney, pine interior finish, and a hot air heating system will be features.

The other building permit issued so far this week provides for the erection of a private garage by T. Ritchford at 303 Frederick avenue, to be finished by December 18, at an estimated cost of $100.00.

Gas By-law Should Be Seriously Considered Before Offer Is Turned Down, Says R. R. Hall, K.C.

The offer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission to sell to this city, the gas plant and its distribution system including certain stores, tools and utility equipment for $335,000.00 and to accept debentures in payment thereof spread over a period of thirty years bearing interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, should be very seriously considered by the taxpayers, before such an offer is turned down.

The City Council is to be very highly commended on getting such an offer and on such favorable terms and conditions of payment. At first, the Commission wanted $360,000.00 for the gas plant and distribution system, but finally offered to accept $335,000.00 and throw in about $38,500.00 of property which is of little use to it but which is very valuable to the city.

I know that there are a great many people who are opposed to public or municipal ownership, but a gas plant is one that does not lend itself to the many wasteful methods that may be adopted under municipal ownership. The very fact that under Hydro management it paid its way, while the street railway ran under ground, shows that the gas plant has and still holds the vigor and the strength of youth.

In fact, if the management proceeds even on the lines at present adopted by the Hydro Commission, this plant without allowing anything for extensions will be paid off in full at the end of thirty years. Now, said one of my friends, you have touched a sore spot on the question of management. Municipal ownership is always marked with failure. That has not been and is not so. This article is only an introduction. More information has been requested and no doubt it will come. In the meantime, Mr. Taxpayer, get all the information you can: and ask The Examiner for more.

ROBBERS TAKE LARGE PAYROLL

OTHERS OVERPOWERED.

YONKERS, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press).—In a daylight holdup in the heart of the city business section seven or eight robbers opened fire on a collection car of the First National Bank this morning and escaped with a $100,000 payroll, after wounding one of the guards.

The car, partly armoured, was transporting a payroll from the post office to the bank for later delivery to the carpet company. Two bank guards and a city policeman was riding in the car. The bandits opened fire from another car, and shot through the windshield, wounding Adolph Kauter, one of the guards, in the arm. The others were overpowered.

Fluid Is Removed From Base of Lung During Morning

Although His Majesty's Condition Continues To Be Grave, Hope Is Not Abandoned—Secrecy of Minor Operation Is Well Maintained.

FEVER IS NOT SO ACTIVE, TEMPERATURE IS LOWER SLIGHT IMPROVEMENT NOTICED EARLY LAST EVENING

Medical Correspondent Says Afternoon Bulletin Discloses the Serious Aspect of the Case, But If Fluid Is Not Localized It May Not Cause Alarm.

LONDON, December 12 (Canadian Press). — King George underwent an operation to-day for the removal by puncture of the purulent fluid around the base of the right lung. Announcement of the operation was made in a bulletin this afternoon, which also said that further drainage would be necessary.

The Prince of Wales visited Buckingham Palace shortly after noon, and spent about an hour and a half there.

Palace officials were reluctant to comment on the afternoon bulletin. The fact that the doctors stated the slight improvement noted in the morning was maintained, was taken as a good sign.

The operation, technically known as a minor one, was performed this morning, and the secret was so well kept that it was not known till mid-afternoon when the second bulletin was posted.

A medical correspondent of The Evening News, discussing the bulletin, says it discloses a serious aspect of the case, but if the fluid is localized, it may not be a cause for alarm. The drainage would be effected by a tube at the chest or the removal of a small portion of the rib.

More Hopeful Air

King George was fighting his grave battle to-day with wonderful strength. There was a slightly more hopeful air among Buckingham Palace officials this morning after the medical bulletin had been issued, as it was regarded as favorable. The anxiety which has prevailed during the last two days continued, but it was lessened.

The fever from which the King is suffering was not quite so active and the lower temperature was construed as a good sign. The remarkable rally which the King made last night just before he saw the Prince of Wales, who made a stirring dash from equatorial Africa to his father's bedside, seemed to have been sustained.

The favorable bulletin was reinforced by the unofficial statements that the King had passed a fairly quiet night and it was undestood that he had had some refreshing sleep. Sir Stanley Hewett remained at the Palace throughout the night.

Hope Not Abandoned

Although King George's condition to-day continued grave, hope was not abandoned. He immediately recognized the Prince of Wales, who was permitted to visit his father late at night after completing a dash of about 6,500 miles from the interior of equatorial Africa, which he left two weeks ago this morning.

Hope was also encouraged by the fact that the Queen had not cancelled an engagement to act for the King late this afternoon in the unveiling of a war memorial.

While some quarters assumed that the Prince would not have rushed to Buckingham Palace if the end of the King had not been near, it was insisted at the Palace that such a meeting would not have been allowed had physicians attending the King regarded the excitement which would attend it as likely to have an effect immediately dangerous.

When the Prince first arrived at the Palace it was announced that he was not allowed to see his father. Later it was stated, however, that he did see the King but the visit was not prolonged for fear of tiring the patient. These contradictory statements were explained unofficially today by the announcement that the King was sleeping when his son and heir arrived, but he awoke before the Prince left the Palace, and as his condition showed some improvement. It was decided that the visit might be permitted without risk.

Visits Palace.

Prince of Wales back in England after his dramatic six thousand mile dash from equatorial Africa, spent half an hour at Buckingham Palace this afternoon.

He then returned to York House. Lord Dawson, of Penn, remained at the palace throughout the morning. Sir Stanley Hewett spent most of the morning there and left just before lunch. Both doctors planned to return later in the day.

Queen Mary left the place in the Royal car after two o'clock to keep her engagement to unveil the Mercantile Marine war memorial. Princess Mary accompanied her and they drove without escort.

The Prince drove from York House to Buckingham Palace at noon after spending the morning resting. The Duke of York, who had visited the palace earlier in the day, returned with the Prince. Baron Davidson, former Archbishop of Canterbury, was among those who called at the Palace. Another visitor was the former King Manuel of Portugal.

3.20 p.m. Bulletin

King George's physicians at 3.20 p.m. issued the following bulletin: "Slight improvement in the King's condition noted this morning is maintained. Some purulent fluid around base of right lung has been removed by a puncture this morning, and further drainage will be necessary.

The bulletin, which is the first to be issued before the usual evening report was signed by five of the King's physicians who have been in attendance on His Majesty. They were, Sir Stanley Hewett, Dr. L. E. H. Whitby, Sir Farquahar Buzzard, Sir Hugh Rolleston, and Lord Dawson of Penn.

Unveils Memorial

Despite axiety over the illness of her royal husband, Queen Mary gave renewed evident to-day of her devotion to duty. She motored from the Palace into the City of London and unveiled a war memorial to the members of mercantile and fishing fleets lost at sea during the Great War.

The occasion was the first on which the Queen's voice has been heard over the radio. The entire ceremonial was broadcast and thousands of spectators gathered at the memorial.

Sir Hugh Rigby, honorary surgeon to King George visited the Palace this evening. It was the first time Sir Hugh has been mentioned as visiting the Palace.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Dec. 12 (Canadian Press). — Announcement was made by the Admiralty here that Prince George, fourth son of the King had expressed a desire to return home. H.M.S. Durban, aboard which he is serving as lieutenant, will likely take him to New York, where he will transfer to the Berengaria, sailing from there December 14.

Plan Is Laid To Kill Hoover

Plot Laid Against Life

Bombs and Revolvers Are Found By Police at House in Buenos Aires.

VISITOR IS GUARDED.

Conspirators Used Detailed Map of Railways In Forming Plan.

BUENOS AIRES, December 12. — Canadian Press. — Official confirmation of the discovery of a plot against the life of Herbert Hoover and of its frustration by the police, was made public last night by President Irigoyen.

His statement said: "The President of the Republic being desirous of making agreeable the visit of the President-elect of the United States of America, and of offering the greatest possible guarantee of safety to the personnel of the illustrious visitor, commanded the police to intensify their observation of dangerous anarchist elements.

"This order was carried out by the division of investigation, which after discreet inquiries and investigations, this morning searched a house in Estomba street, in which were found four hand grenades, two cylindrical bombs, one square bomb, dynamite, revolvers, automatic pistols, quantities of ammunition, and 150 ten-peso notes—all of which have been placed at the disposition of the judicial authorities."

The police said that a room in the raided house contained a detailed map of the railway system which apparently was used by the plotters in planning their attack.

It was announced last night that 1500 guards had been employed on special duty to ensure the safety of Mr. Hoover during his visit. For several days the police have been active in rounding up persons believed to have been active in previous agitations against the United States, notably bombings and demonstrations growing out of the Sacco-Vanzetti exops, and Nicaraguan interven-ed.

1,00 Place Bombs on Tracks.

Pla deails obtained from the mandicate that the conspirators intended to place bombs on the railway tracks just before the arrival of the Hoover special train, which is due here late on Thursday afternoon. It is believed the bombs were to have been placed somewhere near the outskirts of the city.

A youth arrested in the raided house gave his name as Carlos Gutierrez, aged 18 years. The police declared that his real name was Alejandro Romano, and that he was 21, but posed as younger in the hope of obtaining leniency under the minors law. He is said to be a student of chemistry, and was believed to have manufactured the bombs.

A second man arrested last night near the house gave the name of Jaime Oliver. The police said that his real name is Jaime Castro and that he is a chauffeur.

ONLY ONE TRUSTEE SUPPORTS TOWNSHIP SCHOOL BOARD BILL

Northumberland and Durham Association Meets in Convention in Cobourg.

DEFENDS PRINCIPLE.

Professor Sissons and W. Morris Deliver Two Excellent Addresses.

(Special to Examiner)

COBOURG, Dec. 12.—The proposed township school board bill found only one supporter at the convention here Tuesday afternoon of the Northumberland and Durham Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association. Leonard Smith of Cavan Township defended its general principle during the discussion, and stood up alone when a vote was taken to sound the sentiment of the assembly. He contended that it would effect a more equitable levy of school taxes than the present school section system imposes, and he declared that this was a much needed change in his own township.

L. B. Winslow, also a Cavan man, opened the debate from a calm negative attitude, and moved the resolution recording the Association's opposition to the proposed bill. It was the entering of the thin edge of the wedge of consolidated schools he argued, and was to that extent, doubly at fault.

Not a Political Question

Dr. W. G. Robertson, M.P.P., of Colborne offered a broad criticism of the measure, affirming with Mr. Winslow, who had avowed his loyalty to the conservative party, that there was no political aspect to the opposition to the bill which Premier Ferguson, as Minister of Education, had submitted to the legislature as representatives of the people of Ontario.

R. B. Dawson of Warkworth, president of the counties association, was in the chair, and W. A. Atkinson of Roseneath occupied the secretary's position. The primary purpose of the convention was to consider the township school board bill, but two excellent features were the addresses by Prof. S. B. Sissons of Toronto University (Victoria College) and W. Morris, of Toronto, secretary of the Ontario Educational Association.

Ideals of Education

Basing the divisions and topics of his address on a verse by Henry Van Dyke, pegs to hang his thoughts on as he termed it, Mr. Morris dealt with the ideals of education. The first objective he mentioned was "to learn to think without confusion, clearly." Too often the ability of a teacher was gauged by his or her success in the number of pupils passing their examinations. Education, however, should tend to develop in children qualities of initiative, originality and intellectual adventure so that when they grow to manhood and womanhood they will be able to take hold of problems that arise, and think their way through any situation.

Many issues to-day are easily beclouded, Mr. Morris continued. In the United States presidential election, religions and prohibition were introduced, and so it may be with every political, religious and social question.

"We are inclined to let outside matters creep into the discussion of certain questions, and remembering that we should re-examine our school plans, the curriculum, the teachers and their qualifications, and see if they are developing our children to think clearly."

Love Our Fellow Man

The second topic was "to love our fellow man sincerely."

"The greatest eulogy you can give to any man is this, that he loved his fellow men, and it was very gratifying to hear the remarks of Col. Odell regarding Col. MacNachtan and to learn how highly he stood in the hearts of his fellow men. How do we know that any man loves God if he does not love his fellow man whom he has seen. Children should learn how to live with one another, to respect their seniors and live on good terms in the home and in society. That is a great lesson for us all. It is one thing to know how to make a living, and it is another to know how to live, to live with one another. That should be the main purpose of education, to learn the great art of living with one another.

Parents should watch their children to see whether they become better members of the family, see if they are getting on with other children. Does the little girl take a delight in household tasks, does the boy go cheerfully to his chores. How do they conduct themselves in their little democracy."

A True Vocation

The third topic was "to act from honest motives truly."

"I take this to refer to the great dynamic of our lives, the motives that inspire conduct. The great ideal of life should be to be able to express ourselves in our work. We should relate our work with our ideals so that we can express ourselves in the things we do. We need to educate our boys and girls in order that they shall find joy in the work they are doing rather than in the hobbies they have when their work is done.

A Curse of Urban Life.

"That is one of the great curses of urban life. So many cannot express themselves in their work. Then when five o'clock comes they rush off to their real lives, to the things in which they really live. In some factories the raw material comes in at one end, each employee adds his quota of work, and the completed product goes out at the other end. There is no incentive for men to express themselves in such work. I am coming to the conclusion that a well regulated farm, which is owned by the operator, provides as fine an opportunity I know of for a man to express himself in the work he is doing. We should see that our boys and girls are learning to express themselves in the vocations they are entering.

"To trust in God and heaven securely" was the final topic. "No man, I believe, is really educated unless also in his religious nature. Man is naturally religious, and that side of him needs to be developed. I do think that, if we select a teacher who has the interest of the children and the community at heart, it is possible to explain high ideals and a religious outlook without using Scripture and definite religious instruction."

Religion is in all literature, Mr. Morris said. It can also be furthered by teaching children to cultivate the habit of truth. In geography I would teach breadth of mind, and on the playground I would teach religion by fair play with their fellow-pupils. After all it doesn't matter what we believe in religion if our belief does not make a difference in our lives.

CASE SETTLED OUT OF COURT

Non-Jury Trials Are Set Over Until January at Session of County Court.

TRIBUTE TO CLERK.

(Special to The Examiner).

COBOURG, Dec. 12.—Of the three actions entered for trial before Judge O'Connor at the December sessions of the County Court Tuesday, two non-jury suits were set over until January and the only jury case involving a motor accident on the Scugog Road was settled out of court. The jurors were accordingly dismissed with Judge O'Connor's reference to the satisfactory conditions of the two counties.

An eloquent eulogy of the late Col. MacNachtan by the Crown Attorney, W. F. Kerr, K.C., was given at the opening of the court, and was supplemented by Judge O'Connor as follows:

"I am very gratified indeed to hear the eulogistic remarks made by our Crown Attorney. A gloom has certainly been cast over this Court-House and County Buildings, and over our town and over our United Counties by reason of the passing of Col. MacNachtan. I had the pleasure of his acquaintanceship but a short time. He was certainly a gentleman of the old school, a Canadian citizen of the highest type, a friend of any person who deserved his friendship, and a most efficient officer, as the learned Crown Attorney has pointed out. He will be missed indeed by those of us who feel that we were his personal friends, and he will be missed indeed by citizens of the town of Cobourg and by citizens of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham. His passing is much lamented, and all that we can say now is that having gone to his reward we pray that his soul may rest in peace."

MILITARY FUNERAL IS BEING PLANNED

Col. Neil MacNachtan Will Be Buried On Thursday With Full Military Honors.

(Special to The Examiner.)

COBOURG, December 12. — The funeral of the late Colonel Neil MacNachtan, C.V.O., who had been clerk and treasurer of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham for nearly forty years, will take place on Thursday at 2 p.m. from St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. He will be buried with full military honors, a last tribute from the service he had loved and commanded so long. The 22nd Medium Battery will detail the firing party, under the command of Major C. T. Peterson. Officers of all the military corps of the district will be represented, and the members of the Councils of the United Counties and of the town of Cobourg will attend in a body. The honorary pall-bearers are announced as follows: Col. W. H. Floyd, V.D., Col. E. E. Snider, Port Hope, Col. Fred D. Boggs, Lt.-Col. J. W. Odell, Lt.-Col. A. E. Hopper M.C., Lt.-Col. J. F. Wolfraim, Coiborne.

The Kilties' Band of Cobourg will play the funeral music. Rev. F. C. Harper, of St. Andrew's Church, will conduct the service, assisted by Rev. T. Stanage Boyle, of St. Peter's Anglican Church.

Rhythm is the most primitive factor in music, but melody is the stronghold of the memory and that means that on melody rests the immediate or ultimate popularity of every piece of music.

RECEPTION GIVEN WIFE OF MINISTER

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, December 11.—Yesterday evening the congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church united with the Young People's Society for the purpose of receiving Mrs. W. J. Mark, who has just arrived from New Westminster, B.C., to join her husband, Rev. W. J. Mark, minister of the church. Although her husband had become quite well acquainted with the members of his congregation, Mrs. Mark was, until the reception, somewhat a stranger among the same people. After the program had been presented by members of the society, Mr. and Mrs. Mark stood at the front of the auditorium and were introduced to the members of the congregation. Lunch was served by the ladies of the church.

The debate which formed the principal item on the program proved to be of unusual interest to those present. The subject was: "Resolved, That missionary effort has done more for the advancement of civilization than trade and commerce. R. J. Allan and Mrs. John Storie upheld the affirmative side of the argument, but were defeated by Mrs. H. T. Scott and J. A. Anderson. The judges were Miss Hazel Atkinson, Miss Freda Nelon, and J. S. Dickson. Their decision did not prove popular with the audience, and it was openly criticised. There seemed to be some difference of opinion as to what had been the basis of judgment, and the judges were obliged to repeat their decision and to explain that the decision was not necessarily their personal opinion, but the result of careful checking up of the points presented and either disproved or confirmed by each of the speakers in turn. In defence of their decision, Mr. Dickson, who was appointed as spokesman for the trio, showed that it did not matter whether trade and commerce had been first started in various parts of the world, but what results along certain lines could be directly attributed to it, or to missionary effort. Some of the speakers had wasted considerable time explaining certain trading which had taken place at various times as far back as 3,000 B.C.

Other numbers of the program were given by Prynce Nesbitt, Miss Lilian Hay, Mrs. Frank DeCarroll and Mrs. Charles Milne. After the meeting proper had been concluded with a brief prayer by Rev. Mr. Mark, the reception tookplace. Lunch was served after the reception.

BOLIVIA IS MOBILIZING HER TROOPS

General Staff Calls 1929 Class To Colors—Ministers Resign Portfolios.

SCOUT WANT CALL.

Mediation Is Refused — Paraguay Is Also Said To Be Preparing For War.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 12.—(A.P.)— Press despatches from widely separated parts of the globe indicate a world startled by the threat of war over the boundary dispute between Bolivia and Paraguay. Even before receipt of substantial confirmation that mobilization already is under way in Bolivia, efforts toward mediation had been made by several world agencies.

The council of the League at Lugano, the Pan-American conference at Washington and at least one neutral South American country offered their services and expressed the hope that an amicable settlement would be reached.

First of Bolivia's mobilization came from Lima, Peru, some versions of the reports stating that only a part of her army had been concentrated. The Bolivian Charge D'Affaires in Washington said that "no reserves had been called."

Delayed despatches from La Paz the Bolivian capital, announced that mass meetings continued in many sections in support of the Government's attitude and that volunteers were flooding the administration with offers of service. "In Trinidad a full regiment of 1,000 men was organized and many physicians offered hospital facilities and services.

Martial Activities.

Reports of martial activity also came from Asuncion, the capital of Paraguay, where the newspaper El Liberal said many prominent persons were volunteering for military service, among them two notable leaders of the Opposition, General Rojas and Commander Atilio Pena.

Bolivia was reported from Uruguay to have rejected an offer of mediation from the permanent arbitration committee set up by the Gondra accord, which provides for a permanent commission to avoid and prevent armed conflict between American nations.

Meanwhile, dispatches from Paraguay said the United States had offered its services as mediator in finding a solution of this dispute. Washington explained this to have been only concurrent in the efforts of the Pan-American conference.

Bolivia Greets Conference

While steps were being taken by the Pan-American conference on arbitration and conciliation yesterday to patch up differences between Paraguay and Bolivia, the Government of the latter nation announced its withdrawal from the gathering.

The Bolivian Government declared its action was prompted by a failure to receive from Paraguay any satisfaction for what it regards as the wrong it has received. Because of this, it was explained, Bolivia could not permit any effort at conciliation.

The conference itself, meanwhile, only functioned in committee form, both the committees on arbitration and conciliation meeting for organization purposes.

Although unwilling to publish the text of yesterday's note to United States, Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, Minister Dies De Medina, of Bolivia, indicated its contents revealed Bolivia's unwillingness to engage in any peaceful negotiations until she obtained satisfaction from Paraguay for what is viewed as the "insult" received.

For this purpose the country deemed it necessary to abstain from the present conference. The note said, however, that this attitude does not preclude the possibility of Bolivia later adhering to whatever conclusions will be reached by the conference.

The Paraguayan legation received from its Government expressions of "surprise" at the "manifest inconsistency" between Bolivia's peaceful attitude in endorsing the Kellogg anti-war pact, the Gondra investigation treaty, and in adhering to other peaceful resolutions and her attitude in the present controversy.

Edward Leonard Elected Candidate

CHOSEN REPRESENTATIVE IN OLDER BOYS' PARLIAMENT

Three Candidates In Field For Lakefield Election—Keen Competition.

THIRD MEMBER ELECTED.

Victor Expresses Thanks To Those Who Helped Him Win Election.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 12. — The annual election for a candidate for the eighth Older Boys' Parliament held each year in Toronto is a memory. The campaign was a memorable one, with keen electioneering, red hot election speeches, but a kindly spirit manifested throughout. Three candidates were in the field, Norman Lemay (who for the past two years has been representative), Edward Leonard and Harry Sherin. The field of campaign included the Tuxis Boys and Trail Rangers of Regent Street United church and the boys of Wesley church in Smith, and Knox church in the village. The results were in favor of Edward Leonard, who in an impromptu speech after the election, thanked all who voted for him, the returning officers, E. H. Northey of Lakefield, and Mrs. Samuel Northey of North Smith, for a faithful service and last but by no means least to Rev. S. A. Kemp and Rev. T. M. Wesley, who in their splendid co-operation made the election go off so well.

The two unsuccessful candidates echoed the sentiments expressed by the victor.

Stanley Darling, who represented the district three years ago, was the first member of the Older Boys' Parliament from Lakefield and for the last two years Norman Lemay represented the district, being last year as the minister of co-operation.

The officers of the local Tuxis group are:

Menter—Rev. S. A. Kemp.
Pretor—Edward Leonard.
Deputy Pretor—Ronald Kemp.
Scriptor—Harold Schwark.
Comptor—Harry Sherin.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press).—Mayor T. J. Irwin is elected by a majority of fifty-one as a result of the recount, though the count on election night gave Alderman A. Brewer, his opponent, a majority of thirty-one.

SUGAR VALUES FIRM

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press).—Although not very active, the raw sugar market had a steady undertone and spot prices were unchanged at 3.93 for spots duty paid. At this level an outport refiner bought 25,000 bags of Cuban leadings for next week late Monday. It was believed there was further interest at the same price for nearby supplies, with holders asking 1.32c more. European buyers were credited with purchasing close to 100,000 bags of new crop Cuban for March shipment at a price equal to about 3.89 delivered here.

Reports that Europe had purchased new crop Cuban sugar was responsible for increased covering in the raw sugar future market. Prices were steady throughout the entire session, closing net unchanged to one point higher. The market opened unchanged to two points higher on covering and commission house buying which was promoted by the steadier showing of London and the firmness in the spot market.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

Montreal—The egg market here is quiet and dull on all grades. The poultry market is also dull with prices slightly lower.

Saint John—The egg market here is slightly weaker. Dealers are quoting country shippers extras 64-66, firsts 55-56, pullet extras 46-48. Prices to retailers are, extras 72-75, firsts 62-67, pullet extras 58-60, seconds 50.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12. — (A.P.)— Broadening out of export demand for corn yesterday at the highest premiums yet this season helped lift the corn market and other grains as well. It was estimated, too, by a leading authority here that already there has been 50,000,000 bushels more farm use and country marketing of corn than a year ago. Corn prices finished strong at practically the day's top level, 1½c. gain, oats 1c. to 1 1-8c. advance, and provisions ranging from 5c. decline to a rise of 7c.

Activity and higher prices formed the rule in the corn market from the start. Not only was there evidence of resumption of foreign demand, but corn belt prospects of rain and of mild temperatures indicated likelihood of at least a temporary let-up in the movement of corn to market. Besides, predictions were current that the mid-winter run of corn would not be as large as usual, rural offerings yesterday of corn to arrive were meagre, and yesterday's corn receipts in Chicago, 417 cars, showing a falling off in the face of the fact that 226 cars of corn were reported as being loaded out of Chicago elevators yesterday to fill previous sales.

As much as 13¾c. a bushel premium over the price of December delivery of corn here was reported as being offering for number 2 corn available to be shipped to Europe by way of the Gulf of Mexico, free on board vessels before Jan. 12. Under such circumstances, recent speculative sellers made haste to reverse their market position. Meanwhile, numerous standing orders to buy, and thus put a stop to losses on future delivery contracts, were automatically forced into execution on the advance.

Pit offerings, however, were relatively scarce. Nevertheless, liberal re-instatement of speculative holdings for higher prices appeared to have taken effect as the day drew to an end.

Wheat and oats paralleled the action of corn. Some improvement of export inquiry for wheat from North America was noted, and world prices for wheat were talked of as relatively low. Despite word of good progress of the wheat harvest in Argentina and Australia, a good class of buying developed here, houses with connections east and north-west taking the lead.

Provisions reflected the upward trend of grain and action as well as of hogs.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Dec. 12.—A feature of trading in the local spot butter market yesterday was the steadiness of prices at the general advance registered on Monday. The market undertone was firm for all grades of creamery butter, and a fair amount of business was passing on the curb. Finest creamery solids were moving out to retail distributive channels at a price range of from 41¼c to 41½c per lb. Asking prices were reported as high as 42c per lb., but the trade was not prepared to buy at this figure in a market which was devoid of any unusual activity.

With the arrival of additional supplies of fresh eggs from British Columbia and an increase reported from Ontario henneries owing to mild weather conditions, the local fresh-egg market continues easy for all grades of storage, fresh firsts and seconds. Fresh extras are a firm spot in trading owing to continued scarcity of this grade in incoming receipts. No further price changes were reported on Tuesday. A fair movement to the retail trade was in progress from wholesalers' supplies to fill immediate orders for a good domestic consumptive demand.

Edward Leonard Elected Candidate

CHOSEN REPRESENTATIVE IN OLDER BOYS' PARLIAMENT

Three Candidates In Field For Lakefield Election—Keen Competition.

THIRD MEMBER ELECTED.

Victor Expresses Thanks To Those Who Helped Him Win Election.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 12. — The annual election for a candidate for the eighth Older Boys' Parliament held each year in Toronto is a memory. The campaign was a memorable one, with keen electioneering, red hot election speeches, but a kindly spirit manifested throughout. Three candidates were in the field, Norman Lemay (who for the past two years has been representative), Edward Leonard and Harry Sherin. The field of campaign included the Tuxis Boys and Trail Rangers of Regent Street United church and the boys of Wesley church in Smith, and Knox church in the village. The results were in favor of Edward Leonard, who in an impromptu speech after the election, thanked all who voted for him, the returning officers, E. H. Northey of Lakefield, and Mrs. Samuel Northey of North Smith, for a faithful service and last but by no means least to Rev. S. A. Kemp and Rev. T. M. Wesley, who in their splendid co-operation made the election go off so well.

The two unsuccessful candidates echoed the sentiments expressed by the victor.

Stanley Darling, who represented the district three years ago, was the first member of the Older Boys' Parliament from Lakefield and for the last two years Norman Lemay represented the district, being last year as the minister of co-operation.

The officers of the local Tuxis group are:

Mentor—Rev. S. A. Kemp.
Pretor—Edward Leonard.
Deputy Pretor—Ronald Kemp.
Scriptor—Harold Schwark.
Comptor—Harry Sherin.

ELECTED ON RECOUNT.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press).—Mayor T. J. Irwin is elected by a majority of fifty-one as a result of the recount, though the count on election night gave Alderman A. Brewer, his opponent, a majority of thirty-one.

TORONTO, Dec. 12.—A feature of trading in the local spot butter market yesterday was the steadiness of prices at the general advance registered on Monday. The market undertone was firm for all grades of creamery butter, and a fair amount of business was passing on the curb. Finest creamery solids were moving out to retail distributive channels at a price range of from 41¼c to 41½c per lb. Asking prices were reported as high as 42c per lb., but the trade was not prepared to buy at this figure in a market which was devoid of any unusual activity.

With the arrival of additional supplies of fresh eggs from British Columbia and an increase reported from Ontario henneries owing to mild weather conditions, the local fresh-egg market continues easy for all grades of storage, fresh firsts and seconds. Fresh extras are a firm spot in trading owing to continued scarcity of this grade in incoming receipts. No further price changes were reported on Tuesday. A fair movement to the retail trade was in progress from wholesalers' supplies to fill immediate orders for a good domestic consumptive demand.

OBITUARY

EVELYN MARIE PAYNE

WARSAW, Dec. 12 (Examiner Correspondence).—The death occurred very suddenly yesterday afternoon of Evelyn Marie Payne, 14-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Payne. The child appeared in good health early in the morning, but later took sick and although medical aid was summoned she passed away about 2.00 o'clock in the afternoon. The father was in Port Hope at the time and did not get home until after the child had died. She was the youngest of nine children, some of the others being at school when their sister took sick.

ELIZA ANN JACOBS.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, December 11. — The funeral of the late Eliza Ann Jacobs was held from the residence of her son-in-law, Henry Redden, George street, yesterday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. Interment was in Mount Pleasant cemetery. The services at the house and at the grave were conducted by the Reverend R. C. Tait, St. John's United Church, assisted by the Rev. Sidore of the Free Methodist church. The pall bearers were John Arnold, Wesley Sweet, Harold Rutherford of Bonar Law, Wesley Redden of Trent River, Charles Lawrence and John Lain of Stanwood. The late Mrs. Jacobs was in her 89th year. Her death came after an illness of short duration. She is survived by one brother, Alonzo Gardiner, of Terre Haut, U.S.A., and two daughters, Mrs. John Loucks of Seymour East, and Mrs. George Bamber of Dartford.

MRS. ROBERT IRWIN

MILLBROOK, Dec. 11—(Examiner Correspondence).—The death of Mrs. Robert Irwin, in her seventy-sixth year, took place at the residence of her son-in-law, W. J. Tremaine, with whom she had made her home for some years, on Saturday, December 8, following an extended illness, and removes yet another of the members of a pioneer family of the community.

Deceased, whose maiden name was Annie Deyell, was born in Millbrook and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Deyell, pioneer settlers in this village, and a granddaughter of John Deyell, the first actual settler in Cavan township. He came out from Ireland in 1816, and had the honor of naming the townships of South Monaghan and Cavan, which he also helped to survey. This hardy and broad-minded pioneer carried his grist on his back to Port Hope to be ground for several years, and finally built the first grist and shaw mill in what later became the village of Millbrook, on the site where afterward the large Needler flour mill stood. the first grist and saw mill in what ship was built upon his land, and he also gave the land for the Presbyterian church and cemetery at Centreville.

Mrs. Irwin was one of a family of five children, two sons and three daughters, of whom only two survive —Mrs. Melville, of Sand, Sask., and William J. Deyell, of Wingham; those previously deceased were David Deyell, of Campbellford, and Mrs. Gorge A. Duncan, of Millbrook.

More than half a century ago the marriage of Annie Deyell, and Robert Irwin took place here, and to their union four children were born, all of whom survive their parents: George of Wingham, Aleck of Peterborough, Mrs. J. Isbister of Centreville, and Mrs. W. J. Tremaine, of Millbrook; her husband predeceased her by twenty years; there are five grandchildren.

Deceased belonged to a family connected with the Anglican church, but after her marriage united with the Presbyterians, her husband's people belonging to this denomination.

The funeral, which was largely attended, took place on Monday, at 2.30 p.m. from the residence of Mr. W. J. Tremaine, Tupper street, Rev. W. W. Jones and Rev. John Riddell having charge of the services. The pall-bearers were two sons-in-law, W. J. Tremaine and J. Isbister, three grandsons, Roy and Harold Irwin, of Peterborough, and Ronald Isbister, of Toronto; and a brother-in-law-, G. A. Duncan, of Millbrook.

There were many beautiful floral tributes, among these being a sheaf from Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge, No. 176. Interment was in the Presbyterian cemetery.

Among those from outside points who attended the funeral were: — William J. and George Irwin, of Wingham; Mr. and Mrs. Aleck Irwin; Mrs. J. Bullied; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Irwin; Mrs. Fred Redpath; Mr. Harold Irwin; Mr. and Mrs. George Tremaine; Mrs. Davidson; Mrs. William Zeihr; and Mr. Herbert Tremaine, all of Peterborough.

SHORT-SIGHTED EMPLOYERS.

Reports reaching The Examiner of treatment accorded some of the British farm laborers placed in this district earlier in the year would indicate that there are some very short-sighted farmers in this part of Ontario.

Fortunately, most of them are the other kind, who recognize the importance of ensuring themselves farm help when it is most needed by paying their hired men a fair wage during the winter months.

For such men the problem of farm help usually presents little difficulty; their assistants are glad to stay and show their gratitude for fair treatment by doing good work.

Others farmers expect their hired men to work for almost nothing in the winter, and in some cases refuse to carry them through the cold weather, even for their board.

These employers are hurting themselves, injuring the reputation of the whole district, and causing publicity adverse to Canada to be circulated in the British Isles by such treatment.

And what is more, they are leaving themselves in a position where they may have the greatest difficulty in securing help in their busy season, for those in charge of placing newcomers in farm positions are not likely to send them to employers whose record in this respect has been bad.

NEIGHBORLY SYMPATHY.

It was with a warm feeling of gratitude in their hearts that Canadians on Sunday heard over their radio receiving sets the voices of United States ministers praying for the recovery of Britain's beloved monarch.

In a period of national anxiety and sorrow a neighborly gesture of sympathy and solicitude such as this is a source of comfort and encouragement.

The Canadian people have appreciated the sincerity and feeling with which their friends over the border have shown their affection and respect for the British throne.

They regard it not only as a demonstration of friendliness and good-will toward the British people, but as an indication that the world outside the Empire has come to realize why the British Crown is held in such veneration among the peoples of the far-flung commonwealth of free self-governing nations who regard that Crown as the foundation stone upon which their loyalty is based.

The record of unselfish and devoted service in the interests of his people that has been achieved by His Majesty King George has had much to do with the world's attitude toward the British throne.

RADIO'S POPULARITY.

That there is real work for the newly appointed Canadian Radio Commission to do there can be little doubt, especially in view of the unprecedented demands for receiving sets reported by dealers and manufacturers.

Never in the history of the industry has radio equipment been purchased on such a scale as at present, and the present indications are that the production may not be able to keep pace with the demand and that there may be a radio set "famine" before Christmas.

The radio has passed its initial stages; it is no longer regarded as a fad or a toy, but as a very important source of entertainment, and it is, therefore, essential, as The Examiner pointed out a day or two ago, that conditions in regard to broadcasting should be regulated so as to give the best results to the greatest number.

The Canadian commission will find room for improvement in many particulars, not only as regards a greater number of wave lengths for Canadian stations, but also in connection with a fairer division of those wave lengths among such stations.

Anything that savors of political influence or interference in this respect should be frowned upon, and an effort made to give those stations most capable of reaching the greatest number of Canadian listeners-in the time on the air that they are entitled to because of the service they render.

CANADA'S PROSPERITY.

The story of Canada's abounding prosperity is retold again in a Canadian trade supplement of thirty-two pages published by the Financial Times of London, which stresses the fact that this Dominion is progressing at a rate unsurpassed in proportion to population by any other country in the world.

The supplement of the Financial Times is splendid advertising for Canada, especially when it contains such optimistic editorial references as the following, which should carry much weight, not only with Britishers planning for a new start in life, but with other Britishers seeking a desirable placing of their capital:

"This year's harvest has been the largest in the history of the Dominion, with a consequent wide enhancement of prosperity. The volume of business in the first half of the current year showed an increase of 14 per cent. In the past eighteen months two hundred important extensions have been made to industrial plants and one hundred new factories have been erected. The value of Canada's manufactured products in 1927 was about $250,000,000 in excess of the previous year's. In the past five years the gross value of Canadian industrial production increased 40 per cent. In the first half of this year the Canadian National Railways' net earnings increased by $3,980,400, and those of the Canadian Pacific Railway by $3,439,400. The Dominion mineral output for the first half of this year was $1,-594,300 in excess of that for the corresponding period last year. The value of the gold output was about $1,000,000 in excess of that for the first six months of 1927—a year that saw the establishment of a new high record."

Ruth Elder's husband will sue for divorce. Perhaps he is after some of the Elder-berries.—Chatham News.

"HOME, SWEET HOME."

A multitude of songs, poems and books have been written about home, but it is doubtful if the output will be so plentiful in years to come. Home is losing its hold on the rising generation.

St. John Ervine, the distinguished English dramatist and dramatic critic, who is guest critic of the New York World for a few months, writing his impressions of the New York theatre in his own paper, the London Observer, said:

"The New Yorker takes his pleasures abroad. I doubt if any living soul has fewer resources inside himself than the New Yorker. The idea of spending an evening at home, if it ever enters his head, does so only to appal him. People go to the theatre here, not so much to see a play or a player, as to go to the theatre. . . . I suspect their strongest reason for going is their horror of spending an evening at home."

With very little change that opinion fits most of the youths and girls of to-day.

How many parents get real enjoyment out of the company of their sons and daughters in the evenings? As soon as the evening meal is over the young folks clear out. A few have some church activity, but the majority are off to a movie or a dance.

Home is just a place to eat and sleep; little better than a rooming house.

This restlessness of modern young manhood and girlhood takes the form of wanting to be entertained. The majority would be appalled at the prospect of sitting down at home and reading a book.

Too many organizations connected with the schools, even too many connected with the churches, inculcate in boys and girls a desire to be always going out somewhere. Talk abounds about the importance of home life for young people, but the church and school must bear their share of the responsibility for the crumbling to pieces of the love of home, because of the insistent demands made upon young folks to attend this, that and other club or society on week nights.

Too much pocket money for movies and dances complete the disintegration of the faculty of making one's own pleasures and breaking down home life.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

$8,225,000 FROM LIQUOR CONTROL.

Coming to Westminster once with a good budget, chiefly due to excise taxes, Robert Lowe remarked: "We have drunk ourselves out of debt." Ontario has not quite done that, but with a profit for the year of $8,-225,000 out of the controlled sale of liquor, it has done amazingly well. How well it has done may be gathered from the fact that without this revenue the Province would have closed the year eight million dollars on the wrong side of the ledger. Either that or we would have had eight millions less to put into good roads, education, charitable institutions and a lot of other things.

Some may say, will say, that we shouldn't want profits or revenue from liquor, that we shouldn't be in the liquor business at all. The answer to that counsel of perfection is that we WERE in the liquor business—were in it under the O.T.A. We had our dispensaries, our hypocritical doctors' prescriptions, Government importations, Government sales and profits. And under the O.T.A., as under the Ontario Control Act, we used liquor profits for all the purposes that we have just named.

The only difference, really, between what we had under the O.T.A. and what we have to-day is a difference in method. A different way of selling liquor.

The new system is more profitable. Also, we think, more sensible. For one thing, a lot of money that formerly went into the pockets of bootleggers now goes into the public treasury. Money that was going toward making millionaires almost overnight of some of the worst elements amongst us is now going into better highways, into aid for agriculture, for education, for social betterment and colonization.

It is argued that we are consuming more liquor. Perhaps so. But the liquor we are consuming is at least decent liquor, not poison; and is being consumed in a decent way. Drunkenness has not increased. Intemperance has not increased. Crime has not increased. There has been nothing to justify the dire prediction of what would come under Government control.

The sale and control of liquor will always be a problem. Always while men are human. That being so, no use exists in seeking perfection under the Ontario Control Act or from any other act governing liquor sale. This, however, can be said: That the Ontario Control Act, socially, economically, and from the standpoint of government, has been a reasonable success. It has not undermined the sobriety of our people, has not made for lawlessness, has done something to strike at bootlegging, and has been a tremendous source of revenue. Not much more could have been expected from any liquor law.—Ottawa Journal.

A Thought

A SMILE

A volume could be written on the psychology of the smile in business, another upon the frown in business. The smile is the friend to business, the frown the enemy. The smile opens the door; the frown closes it. The smile is welcome everywhere, the frown is not wanted anywhere. The smile opens hearts; the frown closes them. The smile gets past the office boy, past the buffer to the private office; the frown sits waiting for the admission which he never gains.

The smile opens all hearts as well as doors. It always makes a good impression, while discouragement and despondency repel.

* * *

We thank Thee, our Heavenly Father for Thy care over us through the past night. We thank Thee for the Bible. Help us to understand it, to believe it to obey it and to love it. We thank Thee Blessed Saviour, that Thou didst come from heaven to earth that we might go from earth to heaven; that Thou didst die that we might live. We thank Thee that Thou didst rise from the dead, ascend up on high, and dost ever live to intercede for us. We thank Thee that Thou didst say, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." We come to Thee. Have mercy on us. We have done wrong. Forgive us. We want to do right; help us. We are sinners; be Thou our Saviour. Fill us with Thy Spirit; consecrate us to Thy service. Comfort the troubles; guide the perplexed; strengthen the weak; succor the tempted. Bless our Country. Bless Thy Church everywhere, and bless all Christian workers. Fill the whole earth with Thy glory. We ask all in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ and for His sake we pray,

"God bless our going out,
Nor less our coming in,
And make them sure.
God bless our daily bread,
And bless whate'er we do, whate'er endure,
May death unto His peace awake us,
And heirs unto His salvation make us."

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1928
(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Again sinister stars rule the Earth, according to astrology, and it is well to be careful in all things.

Women are likely to be more fortunate than men under this planetary government and the morning should be the most auspicious time for their activities.

There is a fairly good sway for shopping and for attending to whatever concerns the family, which, however, may be cantankerous.

Under this sway men may be exacting and faultfinding and many domestic jars are to be avoided, especially those connected with money problems.

Business men may be foolishly aggressive while this configuration prevails and they are warned to concentrate on routine matters.

There is a sinister sway for speculation which will offer many temptations as 1928 nears its end.

There is a sign which is supposed to muddle the judgment and to encourage unwise decisions. It is well also to refrain from expressing opinions.

Arguments today will tend toward angry discussion and lawyers should be especially careful.

Aviation today may be subject to unfavorable influences. For this reason those who journey through the air should be doubly careful.

The mind is supposed to be sensitive to evil impressions under this sway, which encourages persons to believe the worst of their neighbors.

Tongue and pen should be guarded against criticisms or faultfinding under this direction of the stars.

Lovers may be less blind than usual and it is well to take no risk that may entail disillusionment.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of suddenand unexpected changes which should be beneficial. Secret influences may bring money and good fortune.

Children born on this day probably will have distinguished careers. The subjects of this sign usually have periods of extraordinary success followed by upheavals that put them in new environment.

THE LUCKIEST LADY

BY RUBY M. AYRES

THE STORY THUS FAR:

BIDDY SAUNDERS — The Little Flapper—always called her young adopted mother, MARNA PAGET, the Luckiest Lady. For she thought Marna had everything she could wish—beauty, youth, wealth and the devotion of a fond husband. But Marna had married GEORGE PAGET, who adored her, without loving him, and three months later had met HUGH HUBBARD and given him her heart. Hugh had fled to China. On his one visit home, he and Marna had realized that they loved each other more than ever.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

VI.—A MEETING, TOO LATE

In spite of the discrepancy in the ages of Marna Paget and the Little Flapper their relationship was more like that of sisters than anything else, although in her loving, innocent way Biddy was sometimes almost painfully conscious of a barrier that kept her outside Marna's complete confidence. She felt that there was a part of Marna's life which she lived absolutely alone a part which even George Paget was not allowed to share. Biddy believed that Marna and her husband were completely happy and satisfied with one another. When Dolly Benson sometimes spoke, in her ultra-modern fashion, of the failure of marriage, Biddy was hotly indignant.

"You talk rubbish!" she declared stoutly. "Look at Marna and George!"

Dolly Benson raised her brows.

"Well, look at them!" she said meaningly. And there followed an eloquent pause, the meaning of which the Little Flapper had been afraid to inquire into. In a way she was fond of Dolly Benson, but she found her very advanced ideas of life and the world difficult to understand, and rather terrifying.

Biddy's confused, tragic memory of Hugh Hubbard had faded with the years, although sometimes she looked at his photograph, which stood amongst many others on the mantelshelf in Marna's own sitting-room, and was conscious of a vague disquiet and foreboding. Would he ever come back? And if he did, what difference would it make to Marna's life, and therefore to the lives of them all?

Once she plucked up sufficient courage to ask Marna about him as they sat together by the fire in Marna's sitting-room.

"Where is he now, darling?" she asked pointing to Hubbard's photograph.

"I don't know. Still in China, I suppose."

"Won't he ever come home again, darling?" she asked after a moment.

"I don't know."

That was all, and the Little Flapper never guessed what rough hands her gentle inquiry had lain on Marna's heart, tearing open afresh the wounds which time could do but little to heal.

And yet Marna was apparently always bright and happy, always willing to entertain and be entertained. But there had been one tragic moment during the five years since Hubbard went away, which the Little Flapper tried hard not to remember, and which she yet found it impossible to forget—a night near Christmas-time, when, with the house full of people, the Little Flapper suddenly missed Marna, and when she hurried in search of her, to see if there was anything she wanted done (for Biddy was never too occupied with her own enjoyment to consider Marna first), she found her standing by the window in her bedroom, looking out into the dark night, and sobbing as if her heart would break.

"Darling!" There was real terror in the Little Flapper's voice as she rushed across to her.

"Oh, what is it? What is it?"

Marna made a pitifully desperate effort to recover her self-control.

"There's nothing the matter. I'm just tired—just tired out! Don't tell anyone, Biddy. Promise me! Promise me!" she sobbed wildly.

"Of course I won't if you don't want me to." Biddy was crying herself. "But if you're so tired——"

Marna laid her head down on the girl's shoulder, and for a moment held her tightly.

"It's not my body that's tired," she whispered. "It's just me. Just my heart and my thoughts."

The Little Flppaer had not understood what she meant; the only kind of tiredness she herself had ever experienced was a delicious sense of fatigue after a game of tennis or after a late dance, when the bed often tugged at her soft limbs in the morning, and would not allow her to get up without a supreme effort.

But to be tired in one's heart and in one's thoughts she realized must be something very different—something from which perhaps only grown-up people suffered.

It would almost have broken her heart had she known that all through those five years Marna's life had been milestoned by just such tragic moments, when her brave pretence of happiness and gaiety failed her as completely as a light fails when its battery is run down and there is no one at hand capable of recharging it.

Terrible moments they were, when the sound of her husband's steps, or of his voice calling to her, made her shudder and long to run away and hide where he could never again find her.

Terrible moments when her last shred of self-control and almost of sanity seemed to tremble on the brink, and she felt that nothing on earth could stop her from leaving everything and joining her life with that of the man she loved.

So many times she had written to him—letters of abandoned misery and passionate pleading—only to destroy them, realizing their pathetic futility.

How did she know that he still loved her? With that whip she often tried to scourge herself to greater indifference and courage.

And yet by the strength of her own love she knew very well the strength of his.

She knew that, although for five year no word had passed between them, their love was still as deep and unchanged as it had always been. Hugh Hubbard had been meant for her from the beginning of all things, even as she had been meant for him.

Then why had they been allowed to miss one another by such a few short weeks?

Why—why? Marna bruised herself in vain against the unanswerable riddle of life, only to struggle once more wearily back to the unsatisfying road on to which Fate had set her feet, trying with all her strength to find happiness, and never succeeding.

Hope was the bellows with which she blew at the dying fire of her courage, and so managed to keep it from being utterly extinguished. At heart Marna Paget was a brave woman, although probably she was unaware of the fact. She had passed an unhappy youth with a nagging, fault-finding mother whose intolerable temper turned life into misery for everyone around her. To escape from it all, Marna had gone out as a nursery-governess for the princely wage of ten shillings a week and her keep, and it was while she was trying to drive discipline and rudimentary knowledge into the heads of two impudent schoolgirls, very little younger than herself, that she met George Paget.

"Only a fool would refuse him." So Marna's mother had dec ared when she first heard of his unashamed devotion to her daughter.

"Marry him if you've got any sense—which I doubt!"

So Marna married him, believing that by so doing she was securing happiness and comfort for the rest of her life—and then, when she had been married barely three months, she met Hugh Hubbard.

From that moment she felt a different creature. It was as if someone had touched her with a fairy wand, transforming her drab, everyday garments into a silver gown.

When Hubbard was with her she was always supremely and completely happy. Sometimes she looked at him and then at her husband, and wondered what it was that the one man possessed and the other lacked.

At first sight George Paget was the more attractive of the two, and yet, while the touch of his hand left her cold and unresponsive, the touch of Hubbard's hand set every nerve vibrating in her body.

"Are we being very kind to one another, I wonder, or very unkind?" Hubbard asked her once when they had spent an entirely uneventful but supremely happy afternoon together riding round London on an omnibus.

Marna shook her head.

"Kind—at least, that is what I think now," she said.

"And when I have gone, what will you think then?" he asked.

And she had found no words with which to answer him. While they were together it had been so easy not to look too far ahead, so easy to blind one's eyes and stifle the thought of the coming parting.

They never spoke of the future, perhaps realizing that together there could be none for them. They never spoke of George Paget, but there was the shared knowledge in their hearts that because of him they could never take the irrevocable step.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE SHIVERY BUG

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Very slowly and carefully Uncle Wiggily felt some one cutting a hole in front of the tall silk hat which was jammed down over the eyes and nose of the rabbit gentleman. Uncle Wiggily had been out walking and had fallen down a snow hole with his rubber boots. At the bottom of the hole, as I told you in the story before this, the bunny gentleman sat down suddenly and his hat slipped over his face.

Then, all of a sudden, at the bottom of the snow hole some one laughed and told Uncle Wiggily he was at a party. At first the rabbit feared he was in a hole with one of the Bad Chaps.

"I'll soon know who is here with me giving a party," thought Uncle Wiggily as he felt the hole being cut in his hat. "I hope I am not too much disappointed."

At last a little hole, like a door or window, was cut in the stiff side of the tall silk hat and the flap was folded back so Uncle Wiggily could see and smell better.

"There you are!" cried the jolly voice.

At first Uncle Wiggily could not se very well, for he had been shut up inside his hat so long in the blackness that his eyes blinked when light came to them. And he found himself in a very light and glittering place. It was almost like fairyland and the rabbit saw long icicles dangling all about, with cakes of ice here and there and drifts of snow.

"Dear me! Have I fallen through to the North Pole?" thought bunny. Then he saw a big, white shaggy shape moving near him and, for a moment, Mr. Longears thought it was a pile of snow drifting. But when he looked a second time the bunny saw it was his dear old friend, Mr. Whitewash, the Polar Bear gentleman.

"Oh, how glad I am to see you!" cried Uncle Wiggily.

"And I'm glad to see you!" growled Mr. Whitewash. He didn't growl because he was hungry, but because growling was just his natural way of talking, the same as mewing is for a pussycat.

"Well, I had quite an adventure!" laughed Uncle Wiggily, looking and talking through his hat. Perhaps you have often heard it said, in gentle slang, that some one is talking through his hat. Well, Uncle Wiggily was, for the hat was down over his face and he had to talk through the hole that Mr. Whitewash cut with his sharp claws.

"You didn't know who I was or that you had fallen down my chimney hole into my ice cave, did you?" asked the jolly old Polar Bear.

"No," answered Uncle Wiggily. "I didn't. But I'm glad I fell into your cave instead of into the den of any of the Bad Chaps. But do you think you can get this hat up over my nose and ears and off my head?".

"I'll try and see what a little grease will do," said the Polar Bear. Living as he did in an ice cave, like an Eskimo at the North Pole, Mr. Whitewash had plenty of grease which he ate to keep himself warm. And by rubbing a little grease on the rabbit's face, the tall silk hat, with a little window or door cut in it, was then easily slipped up over the bunny's nose and ears and came off the top of his head, as was right and proper.

"It's too bad I had to cut that hole," said Mr. Whitewash.

"It doesn't matter," spoke Uncle Wiggily. "I can easily paste it shut again and brush the silk over the seam so it won't show."

"Well, then," said the Polar Bear, "let's go on with the party."

So he and Uncle Wiggily ate some pie and cake and Mr. Whitewash played tinkly tunes on icicles of different lengths, which were like a xylophone, and it was a very nice party indeed.

Then, all of a sudden, a voice said: "Oh, dear me! How cold and shivery I am! Burr-r-r-r!"

"Who is that?" asked Uncle Wiggily, jumping to his feet.

Mr. Whitewash looked in a corner of his cave, and there, inside a round ball of ice, he and Uncle Wiggily saw a poor bug who was shivering with cold.

"However did you get in there?" asked the rabbit.

"Oh, I'm a water bug," was the answer. "When the cold weather came the water on the pond, where I skidded about on the waves, was frozen into balls of ice and I was caught in one. When Mr. Whitewash brought the ice to his cave he brought me in, too. Oh, how shivery I am!" And the bug, who was talking up out of a little hole in the ice ball, shook and trembled.

"Let me take him home with me to my warm bungalow," said Uncle Wiggily. "I'm going back soon, for this party is about over."

"Take him and welcome," said the Polar Bear. Gently the ball of ice was cracked and the shivery bug was put in the warm pocket of the rabbit's fur coat, and there he went to sleep.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY FOOTBALL IS POPULAR

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Football owes its popularity to a number of interesting psychological factors. Football does for the United States what bull fights do for Spain and what the gladitorial combats did for ancient Rome. It brings together vast throngs of people hungry for thrills and excitement. Even those who do not understand the game itself enjoy the band, the cheering and the large, colorful crowds incident to all big games.

The game itself is dangerous enough to make it exciting and still safe enough not to shock our finer sensibilities. It is a miniature warfare in which skill, cunning and deception as well as physical power and courage play a conspicuous part. The spectator exercises his own fighting instincts through the players. It is significant that the yell most often heard on a gridiron is: "Fight! Fight! Fight!" Football is a lot more thrilling than a prize fight because more men participate and more men are likely to get knocked out.

Uncertainty of the outcome adds immeasurably to the interest in a game of football. No matter how strong a team may be it can never be sure of victory. Every season furnishes examples of a team beaten many times taking the scalp from a team unbeaten to date and a top heavy favorite to win. The reason is that no team remains the same from week to week. Some improve, others go "stale." Moreover the nature of the game is such that anything is likely to happen at any time. One team may be on the verge of scoring a touchdown when a fumble or an intercepted pass may result in a touchdown for the opposition.

Another important reason why college football is popular is that while the students are learners and beginners in every other respect they are at their prime physically. The football game they put on is as finished a product in its line as you will see anywhere, not barring professionals. And since college honors are at stake the men fight harder than would a professional playing for money. This same element keeps the game on a high level. It is unheard of for a college to "fix" a game The spectator is assured of an honest hard-fought battle between rivals who place sportsmanship above victory.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper and send stamped envelope for reply.

200 READY FOR HYDRO

Residents Have Homes Ready For Turning On of Electric Current.

BEFORE CHRISTMAS.

COBOURG, Dec. 12 (Special to The Examiner).—Two hundred new customers of the Hydro-Electric Commission in and around Gore's Landing, Harwood and Roseneath, on transmission lines recently strung and now ready for the first turning of a switch, have been assured that every effort will be made to supply them with power by Christmas. Fred J. McArthur, who was the Conservative candidate in the last Provincial elections, has interviewed the Hon. J. R. Cooke of the Hydro-Eelectric Commission and received his assurance that the transformer required for the new system would probably be set up before the holiday.

DISARMED KAISER; NOW IN EDMONTON

Peter Keyser Was on Guard at Holland Frontier in 1918.

EDMONTON, Alta., Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press.)—From Holland and the disarming of Kaiser Wilhelm on a certain historic day shortly after the signing of the Armistice, to Canada and the University of Alberta, seems a very long way, yet the very man who requested the German war lord and his son to hand over their weapons is now a student at the University of Alberta. He is Peter Keyser, B.A., of The Hague, Holland, and he is now rounding out a most remarkable career by a course in scientific agriculture. Just out of school, at 17 he found himself in Utrecht, a second lieutenant in the Dutch motorcycle brigade, where he served until demobilization in 1919. He was a guard on the Holland frontier when the Kaiser and his son fled from Belgium and received the weapons of the war lord.

THIRD PETERBOROUGH "VIMY" TROOP

The Third has been very active lately. Meetings are being held regularly every Friday from seven to eight thirty with an average attendance of fourteen scouts and 3 recruits. Two scouts have been invested within the last month, namely Harry Marsh and Jack Weddell, who are now members of the Wolf Patrol.

Tests are being passed regularly by several of the scouts. Half a dozen scouts passed compass points one evening. Four scouts passed the tracking test for the first time. For Barc McKone and Harold Dawson this one test was all that was required to complete the tracking and kim's game test for the Second Class Badge, and they are working hard on the balance of their tests. Bill Hogan completed his first aid last Friday night and showed himself competent to deal with simple accidents. Three scouts have passed the 50 yard swimming test and three Second Class Scouts have taken the first class hike—these hikes under conditions that would discourage many an older and more experienced boy. They showed resourcefulness and initiative in carrying out the directions contained in their instructions and all reached the objective in due course.

From this list of tests passed within the last two weeks (with the exception of the first class hikes, which were taken the first two weeks in November) it will be seen that the scouts of the Third are working hard to add to their laurels and incidentally considerably increase their knowledge of many useful subjects.

The Third is making plans for building up the new Troop Troom by adding to its conveniences and appearance so that it will be one of the best headquarters in Canada. Permanent patrol corners are to be made using beaverboard for walls. This will all run into considerable money and already the drive for funds has started. A paper collection is to be held on Saturday and by this means we hope to raise considerable of what we need. We will appreciate it very much if anyone who has old newspapers, magazines, etc. to dispose of will telephone 688-F and leave their name and address so that scouts may call and collect the paper. If desired, the Scouts will attend to bundling the paper up when they come.

Plans for the hockey team are under way. Bob Ross has been put in charge of the scouts until after the first practice, when the team will be chosen and a captain elected. A cake and pastry sale will be held in the market hall each Saturday for the next two or three weeks to raise funds to pay the rink charges of all the members of the team.

PASSES AWAY

Miss Daisy Crawford, 21-year-old Canadian missionary, who left Toronto on September 6 with a band of missionaries from the "Faith and Truth Temple," died recently as the result of malarial fever in the city of Lagos, French West Africa. Ralph Curlew, who was a member of the same party, is also reported to have succumbed to the disease.

BOY IS GIVEN ACCLAMATION

Ronald Payne Will Represent Peterborough in Older Boys' Parliament.

ACTIVE WORKER.

Ronald Payne, 747 Aylmer street, was elected by acclamation to represent the city in the coming sessions of the Older Boys' Parliament to be held at the Ontario Provincial Parliament Buildings, Toronto, during the last week of the year. There were three boys nominated, but the other two withdrew from the election campaign and Ronald Payne thus received the Peterborough seat in the parliament without a fight.

However, he is well worthy of the honor, having taken a very active part in one of the most progressive groups in the C.S.E.T. work in the city, the T.O.B. Tuxis Square of George Street United Church which is mentored by Bill Hamilton. Ronald Payne was president of the Square for two years and has always been to the fore in all its undertakings. He has been closely associated with the program of C.S.E.T. for many years having first been a Trail Ranger and then graduating to Tuxis Boy.

He favors an annual field day of sports for Tuxis Boys in sections throughout the province and he may enter such a motion before the house.

In the city he hopes to be able to induce more Sunday school groups to undertake the C.S.E.T. program and follow it through believing that it is the best program ever drawn up to develop the boy into the man.

KNOX WOMEN MEET

Routine Business Was Transacted at Regular Monthly Meeting.

Regular routine business was transacted at the monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Knox United Church, held last week, with the president, Mrs. W. Watt, in the chair.

Devotional exercises were taken by Mrs. Watt and Mrs. J. Ego and prayer was offered by Mrs. A. Morrison.

The convenor of Supply work reported a bale valued at $21.45, and encouraging reports were given by the missionary organizations, showing all to have gone over the top in their allocations.

Papers on the study book "Drums in the darkness" were given by Mesdames McDonald, Gerard and Long.

The annual meeting and election of officers will be held on January 3rd.

Wright-Hargreaves Leads Mine Trading

TORONTO, December 12. Canadian Press. — Wright-Hargreaves proved the sensation of the Standard Mining Exchange to-day and led all other issues in trading, while the price fluctuated between 1.40 and 1.65, receding to 1.50 at noon for a net gain of 8. After opening at 57.00 Noranda rose 25c but later fell to 56.00, a net loss of 10c. The market generally had a strong tone, and trading was brisk. Lake Shore went as low as 14.75 for a loss of 1.35 but came back to 15.50, a net loss of 60c. McIntyre dropped 50c to 20.00; Nipissing 15 to 3.80; Sudbury Basin 5 to 6.65; Teck-Hughes 30 to 7.55, and Hollinger Consolidated 20 to 8.05. Sherrett-Gordon registered a 5 cent gain at 6.30. Murphy was active and rose 9 points to 69, reaching a high of 75. Kirkland Lake following Wright-Hargreaves moved up three to 1.21. Dome mines gained 25 to 9.00. Abana sold off heavily for a loss of 17 to 2.95, while Hudson Bay gained 15 to 18.50.

Losses Follow Selling Movement At New York

NEW YORK, December 12. Canadian Press. — Reactionary price tendencies again cropped out in to-day's stock market as a rally, which had been under way since Monday, appears to have run its course, although some disappointment was apparent that call money should be renewed at 8 per cent after being as low as 6 1-2 in the outside market yesterday afternoon. There was nothing in the day's business news to influence the selling movement. Early gains of 3 to nearly 15 points were in many cases converted into losses of similar extent.

Steel trade reviews were again optimistic in character, Iron Age reporting that "steel production is exceeding expectations as they are ending approaches, and the business outlook for the early part of 1929 is promising."

The purchase of a large block of stock of the Standard Milling Company by Gold Dust is but one of the series of consolidations and new business associations reported to be impending.

A wide open break of 15 points in Houston Oil, which sold down to 102 or 65 points below the year's high, confirmed fears that the market had not been purged of all weak spots in last year's drastic reaction. This tended to chill the speculative enthusiasm for other high priced specialities. Radio and Wright Aero cancelled their yearly gains of eight and seven points respectively and sold below last night's final quotations. Weakness of merchandizing issues was attributed in some quarters to expectations that the recent decline in stock prices would impair the holiday trade.

International Nickel Outstanding At Toronto

TORONTO, Dec. 12.— (Canadian Press.) — New International Nickel was the outstanding issue on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day when yesterday's sales were more than tripled while the pirces rose a half to 36.50. A twenty-point gain in two days was registered when Goodyear Tire gained an additional ten points to 235. Prices maintained a general upward trend throughout the market. F. N. Burt opening at 81, shot up to 90 but by noon had re-acted to 85 for a net gain of five over yesterday's close. Bell Telephone jumped two points to 167 as did gypsum and Alabastie to 77. Shredded Wheat suffered a reverse over recent high trading and dropped two points to 85¼ after selling as high as 89 during early trading.

Massey Harris gained 1½ to 86 and Cockshutt 1 5-8 to 34¾. Oil stocks were stronger. British American gained ¼ to 48, Imperial a quarter to 88¾, International Petroleum 1 to 48 and Service Station 1 to 53½.

Wheat Exports Higher For Present Year Crop

OTTAWA, December 12. — Canadian Press. — Wheat exports shot upwards during the present crop year. For the four months ending November 30 the total was 171,083,763 bushels, or nearly double the amount of 96,502,855 bushels for the same period in 1927. Figures were published today at the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Of the total 115,142,984 bushels went to the United Kingdom; 5,602,778 bushels to the United States, and 50,-338,001 to other countries. Canadian sea ports handled 70,796,599 bushels of the amount.

For the month of November alone, wheat exports were 75,416,597 bushels, of which 56,673,308 bushels went to the United States, and 16,252,435 bushels to other countries.

Exports of wheat flour for the four months were valued at $4,144,613, an increase of nearly 1,000,000 over the figure of $3,239,304 for the same period last year.

In the coarse grains oats showed the sharpest advance. The figure for the four months was 4,806,300 bushels, as compared with 1,701,593 in the former corresponding period. Barley totalled 19,314,881 bushels as against 11,006,000 bushels. Rye exports were decreased in the comparison of 3,-349,649 bushels to 4,449,244 bushels.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

SAN ANTONIO

The general meeting of San Antonio Monday was of a routine character. The two proposed by-laws to increase the capital from 2,000,000 to 4,000,000 shares and to move the head office from Toronto to Winnipeg were approved without opposition. Mention was made of a vein having been picked up at the 600 foot level previously indicated by diamond drilling, but officials would not hazard a guess as to what drifting results on this vein might be since three or four others already developed had proved to be very erratic.

KEELEY

During the month of November the regular production of approximately 50,000 ounces monthly was maintained by Keeley. The value of silver and cobalt produced was about $35,000. This production leaves sufficient profit to pay for much new work including the lateral operations at the lower contact as well as work at the second level where an effort is being made to pick up the downward extension of the vein recently discovered on the surface. Keeley has a treasury surplus of approximately $1,100,-000 which is drawing good interest.

NEWBEC

The shaft at Newbec has now reached a depth of 140 feet. A new hoist has been installed which will speed up operations considerably.

NORANDA

We are informed that Noranda's concentrating plant is now handling 120 tons of ore daily, most of which we believe comes from the Waite-Montgomery.

LUCKY TIGER

We are reliably informed that the Lucky Tiger have pulled out from their property tying on to Malartic to the southeast. They have carried out an extensive diamond drilling campaign with the hope of picking up an extension of the Malartic ore zone, but were not successful. To the northwest of Malartic the Cartier Malartic stopped operations some time ago.

NOBLE FIVE

Concerning the recent strike at the Noble Five Mine, a local stockholder is reported as having the following message from their general manager: "I believe that the finding of this large ore body and the presence of so much grey copper, carrying high silver values, makes this the most important strike that has ever been made in the Slocan district and the most important strike in the province for the year 1928." Mr. Lincoln adds that shipsments of ore are being made direct to the smelter and that where struck by the crosscut the ore body is 30 feet wide and with a developed length of 150 feet to date. Average values are not determined but samples are reported as running as high as 475 ounces of silver and up to 58 per cent lead.

WRIGHT-HARGREAVES

According to northern advices there is no truth in rumors that Wright-Hargreaves will curtail milling operations. It is not expected that this will be included in the report of Mr. Summerhay when such has been made. Underground conditions are reported as being such that they have no difficulty in supplying the present mill tonnage of from 700 to 750 tons daily. Developments shoul shortly yield material ore addition and broken reserves are reported a being increased steadily.

COMMENT ON THE MARKET

Amalgamation Endorsed by Power Shareholders

Montreal. — Shareholders of the Northern Ontario Light and Power Company, Limited, and the Northern Canada Power Company, Limited, at a special general meeting of shareholders, held yesterday at the head office of the companies, Montreal, it was the unanimous vote of the shareholders present, and by proxy to confirm the amalgamation agreement recommended by the directors.

The controlling interest of both of these companies is held, by Canada Northern Power Corporation.

New Steel Plant Planned at Trail

Vancouver.—There came yesterday the announcement from the Parliament Buildings at Victoria that the Consolidated at Trail would have in operation by early next year the first steel plant in Western Canada, following the announcement on Saturday from President J. J. Warren that Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company was now ready to proceed with its copper smelter and refinery on the coast.

The Consolidated Steel plant's first unit will have a capacity of ten tons daily of high-grade steel. Other units will be added.

Production will be by the electric method. New construction plans inaugurated this year by the West Kootenay Power Company will provide adequate electricity for the steel plant.

Iron ores from the Consolidated's plant around Trail will be used as the raw material for the steel production.

Costly Improvements Planned by Bell Telephone

London, Ont.—In 1929 the Bell Telephone Company of Canada plans to spend the sum of $37,000,000 on extensions and improvements in Ontario and Quebec, according to General Manager P. A. McFarlane, who addressed the Rotary Club yesterday. In the next five years expenditure for such purpose will reach $123,000,000.

Nucleus Acquired by U. S. Store Chain

New York.—Formation of a department store chain having an aggregate sales volume of more than $1,-000,000,000 a year, and with units throughout the country, took concrete form yesterday with the announcement of the acquisition of 22 department store companies by the Hahn Department Stores Incorporated, of which L. Hahn, formerly managing director of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, is the head.

The stores acquired are among the most important in their respective sections of the country. They will be the nucleus of the system, which will be enlarged by negotiations now nearing completion for the addition of other department stores of first rank.

The largest department store in New England, the Jordan Marsh Company of Boston, founded seventy-five years ago, and ranked as one of the country's greatest stores is included in the properties acquired.

Perfection Glass Progress

J. H. Charles, secretary-treasurer and general manager of the Perfection Glass Company, Limited, is writing shareholders telling them of the company's progress in the fiscal year closing with the present month. Mr. Charles states sales in 1927 amounted to $502,000 and the management expects an increase of at least 50 per cent., in 1928 and the balance sheet to show a profit. "To convert such a large loss, as shown in 1927, could not be done in a day. We are pleased, however, to be able to assure you that your company is now making a profit in both the Montreal and Toronto plants each month," is the message Mr. Charles has for the stockholders. Prices for all classes of glass have improved during the year and cutting of prices contributing to the 1927 loss, has been, so far as Perfection Glass is concerned, completly eliminated.

Satisfactory Year for Tobacco, Says Ontario Department.

Commenting on the tobacco crop of this province, the Ontario Department of Agriculture says:

"It was a season of some concern for the tobacco, but a good crop in the long run. Tobacco worm and grubs were reported in the early season to be active after frost and hail had done some damage. Barley tobacco seemed to have come on well, quality varying with locality. On heavy soils the summer rains did considerable damage, but in well drained soils the crop was uniformly good. Along in September an alarm of frost damage was spread from several points, but later information indicated that the actual percentage of the whole crop hurt would be small. A correspondent gives it as his impression that more care is being taken with tobacco and that this season was notable in such respect. In Kent the tobacco crop cured up satisfactorily and speaking in general terms, the total percentage of damage to crop was slight. A few Elgin reports put damage as high as 20 per cent. The cured tobacco in Norfolk was very good.

Liverpool Quotations Affect Chicago Values

CHICAGO, Dec. 12. — (Canadian Press).—Wheat prices here tended downward early to-day influenced by a comparative weakness of the Liverpool market and by reports of the unlikihood of farm legislation before spring. Unsettled weather over the corn belt gave relative firmness to corn values. Opening at ⅛ off to ¼ up, Chicago wheat later underwent a general sag. Corn started unchanged to ⅝ higher and subsequently held near to initial range. Oats followed corn.

Wheat, December, 116; March, 119½. Corn, December, 84¾; March 87⅞. Oats, December, 48¾; March, 43¼.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

A development at Kirkland Lake Gold Mines that has proved a surprise to the management is the fact that ore came into the winze much sooner than was anticipated. Following the plan of establishing a level at every 125 feet, a station was started at 3100 feet, but the second shot brought the workings into ore averaging $7 to $8. This work was stopped and the winze proceeded to 3225 feet. Just below the 3100 foot horizon the winze came into the ore.

* * *

It will be recalled that when the top of the winze at 2500 feet was located 400 feet south of the main shaft it was calculated that the vein system would not be encountered until about 3500 feet depth. While the new development may present problems when stoping operations begin the presence of ore in the shaft immediately below 3100 feet can only mean that the enrichment has widened very materially and lengthened substantially as well. At upper levels the drives from the end of the crosscut had to be carried some distance before entering pay ore.

* * *

The management of the Kirkland Lake Gold are reported to be greatly elated at the fresh developments. Conditions are shapingg in a way similar to those on the adjacent Teck-Hughes.

* * *

A report just received from Mine Manager John Willman of Columario Gold Mines Ltd., by the secretary of the company, is to the effect that progress at the mine is exceeding all expectations, the addit on vein No. 4 at the 2000 foot level, has reached a distance of 360 feet from the portal, the vein has carried excellent values over an average width of 4 feet for over 200 feet, and at the present face the vein has now widened to over 6 feet of well mineralized quartz, at 330 feet the vein contained 18 inches of solid sulphides running very high in values. This vein is now being developed at the 2000 feet level and with the vein persisting to the top of the mountain as it does at the surface it creates a back ore of over 3000 feet.

GRAIN SHIPMENTS.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., December 12. — (Canadian Press.) — Two grain boats cleared from the ports of Fort William-Port Arthur yesterday, with 794,000 bushels of wheat for Buffalo.

The Fitch is in port waiting orders and eight grain boats are due to-day, in which six expect to clear down the lakes before the insurance expires at midnight to-night.

Theer are now some thirty boats at the head of the lakes with charters for winter storage, of which more than half have grain now on board, including the giant Canadian freighter, Lemoyne, which is holding 533,000 bushels in her holds.

Weather conditions could not be better, with warm temperature, light breeze and a rising barometer. It is anticipated that the fleet of eight boats now en route will be about the last of the arrivals at the head of the lakes this winter. Following is the report of vessel movements:

Cleared — Philip D. Block, Charles O. Jenkins, Buffalo, wheat.

Storage Food Stocks Decrease For Month

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 12 (Canadian Press).—Food stocks in storage in Canada on December 1 show reductions in nearly every item except poultry in figures published yesterday at the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

The following tabulation shows in pounds stocks at December 1, 1928, and the five year average at that date:

	1928.	Average.
Butter	17,216,783	22,082,227
Cheese	19,527,489	20,723,597
Lard	1,958,868	2,036,915
Beef	19,680,499	24,557,792
Poultry	4,629,062	3,363,698

PEND-OREILLE NOW PAST EXPERIMENTAL STAGE.

Information is to the effect that the results achieved by the diamond drilling program on the Pend-Oreille Lead and Zince Company's property this summer show sufficient ore developed to warrant construction of a large concentrating plant and an electrolytic-zinc smelter.

All summer long diamond drilling operations were very extensive, from 5,000 to 7,000 feet per month having been completed. A large staff of experts was kept busy making and tabulating 200 assays a day from the drill cores. These assays were later coordinated by Dr. J. J. O'Neill, professor of geology at McGill University, and his assistants.

Ore is now being blocked out on the Josephine-Sullivan ore-bodies on the 300 foot level. On the Metaline Falls Mars ore-body a shaft is being sunk, and drifting is being carried out on an ore-body there, 50 feet of which was passed through in the sinking of the shaft. Samples of this ore assayed as high as 25 per cent. combined lead and zinc. For the past three months work has ben carried out on the Mars claim on the 400-foot level. Churn-drilling is now being proceeded with and with very satisfactory results.

Pend-Oreille is long past the experimental stage, although a great deal of exploration work remains to be done. With the near approach of mill and shelter construction marked interest is being manifested in the property.

WRIGHT FLEXIBLE AXLE MOTORS, LIMITED.

Announcement of a public offering of its capital stock by Wright Flexible Axle Motors, Limited, comprising 50,000 Class "A" shares with preference as to dividends and 50,000 Class "B" shares, is creating widespread interest throughout the country in this new Canadian motor car corporation.

Incorporated in 1927 under the "Companies Act," Canada, with an authorized capital of $5,000,000.00, Wright Flexible Axle Motors, Limited, proposes to place on the market for home consumption and export trade, a high-grade medium-priced motor car of 65 h.p., having a wheelbase of 116 in. Five types are being produced, including a 5-passenger standard touring car, sport touring, 4-passenger sport coupe, 4-passenger roadster and a 5-passenger sedan, the latter weighing 2,450 lbs., fully equipped.

The manufacturing plant of the Corporation, situated in the town of Montreal East, embraces a floor area of 107,698 square feet, and has an annual production capacity of 30,000 cars, with sufficient spare ground area adjoining to double this output by the erection of an additional assembly building. The plant is presently being equipped with machinery and necessary facilities for quantity production, and it is reported that the tool and maintenance department has been functioning for some time, producing special equipment. It is expected that peak production will be reached about the beginning of March next, thus permitting the company to take full advantage of the spring trade.

Texas Oil Town Threatened By Fire

GALVESTON, Texas, Dec 12 (Canadian Press).—The oil town of High Island, thrilled a week ago by a big oil producer, battled to-day to subdue a fire which threatened the town and the wells. The levee thrown around the well had checked the flow of burning oil after the machinery had been blown away.

LITERARY SOCIETY IS WELL ATTENDED

Membership Campaign is Going Over Big With Springville-Fairmount Organization.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

SPRINGVILLE, December 12. — The Springville-Fairmount Literary Society met on Friday evening in the basement of Springville Church, with the new president, Miss H. Staples, in the chair. The captains for the membership campaign presented their reports to the secretary, Walter Brown, who read aloud the names enlisted on each team. The membership was reported stands at fifty or more.

The young people were very sorry that Mr. Wearing could not be with them as planned, but were fortunate in having so able a substitute in the person of their pastor, Rev. A. H. McConnachie, who gave an interesting talk on the "Life and Works of Mark Twain." "Humor," said Rev. Mr. McConnachie, "is one of God's great gifts to the world. A blue mood can often be cured by reading Mark Twain, who is the world's greatest humorist. During Mark Twain's younger days he was a pilot on a steamer on the Mississippi River. The man on board who took the soundings frequently called out, "mark twain" (meaning two fathoms of water)—hence the nom de plume 'Mark Twain.' He, like Sir Walter Scott, was a slave to book writing."

Rev. Mr. McConnachie followed his short biography by the reading of "Scotty Briggs and the Parson."

Clairemont Morgan and Robert Rose favored the audience with instrumental solos and the meeting adjourned. Candy was served during the social hour that followed.

Early Sunday Morning Fire Destroys Home in Spry Settlement.

SMALL INSURANCE

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BONARLAW, December 12. — On Sunday morning a very disastrous fire broke out in the home of the late Joseph Wellman, in Spry Settlement, about two o'clock. Mrs. Hines was awakened by a noise, and she rushed upstairs, and at first thought it was the chimney, but in a few moments the flames burst through the second floor. It was with great difficulty that the children were rescued.

The house was a very large building of brick, and is known as the James Spry property. Mr. Wellman has only lived there a few years when he died, leaving a widow and eight children. His widow was married to Mr. Hines recently, and they were living in the house. It is a very big loss, with only a small insurance.

The evening was spent in music, and dancing, the party breaking up at 6 o'clock next morning. The community at large are sorry that Mr. and Mrs. Gray and daughter are leaving the community as they were good citizens.

PRINCE ARRIVES

The brothers rode together to the Palace, the Duke recounting the progress of the illness as he had seen it in constant attendance at the Palace as the only son of the King then in England.

A mighty throng of all classes, such as has gathered daily outside the Palace to await medical bulletins on the King, had waited for more than one hour behind strong police lines at the railway station for a glimpse of the young man who may soon be called upon to lead England. Some of the men and women in the close-pressed ranks wore fashionable furs, and others shivered in shabby suits. All burst into a spontaneous cheer, despite the gravity of the situation, when the Prince appeared.

Strain of Anxiety.

He looked well after his hunting trip in East Africa, but his face showed the strain of his anxiety and the marks of his journey by land and sea for nine days and nights.

Complete informality ruled in greeting his Royal Highness at Victoria. There was not the customary red carpet for his feet and there were no photographers.

At the Palace the Prince met the physicians who have been caring for his Majesty. It was learned authoritatively that they permitted him to see his father.

When the Prince clasped hands with his brother at the station he listened with most acute concern to the message which the Duke brought of the state of their father. Strong relief showed on the face of the Duke. He alone of the four sons had been present to aid and comfort his mother and the Royal household during the time of this great and continuing trial.

Hurries to Palace

The throng at the station was dismayed for a moment by the dash of the Princes for the Palace. They wondered whether the critical condition of the King made this imperative rather than a first visit to the Prince of Wales' own house.

At the Palace the Prince was shown into the apartments of the Queen, where her Majesty awaited him. Then the anxious and burdened mother and her eldest son were alone together to give reciprocal comfort under the still menacing shadow of the illness.

The Prince left the Palace with the Duke and Duchess of York at 11.25 p.m. The Prince accompanied his brother to the home of the Duke in Piccadilly, and, after a short stay, motored to his own residence.

Traces of sunburn were observed on the cheeks of the Prince as he descended from the special train which had rushed him here from Folkestone, and this recalled that only a few days ago he had been in the open wilds 500 miles below the Equator. He wore a dark overcoat and a light grey bowler hat, which he had obtained en route to replace the scanty tropical hunting costume in which he started his homeward dash.

The shouts of greeting which welcomed the Royal heir at the station quickly subsided in recognition of the anxious state which brought him home.

Thousands followed his car along the road to Buckingham Palace, but they moved with unusual order and quietness.

People spoke in whispers, as though afraid that their voices even at that distance might disturb the sick man who is their beloved King. They obeyed the slightest gesture of the directing police. Thousands came to join the multitude already standing before the Palace. They made no demonstration, standing silently while awaiting any new indication of the condition of his Majesty.

The gallant and tireless journey of the young heir in his desperate effort to reach the Palace before tragedy should crown him King and Emperor had progressed under the eyes of a world which watched the drama with almost unparallel interest and sympathy.

The spectacle of an affectionate son hastening from the ends of the earth to support his disease-ridden father and sorrowing mother had stirred all races and peoples, and none could forget that in his race a Royal crown and an Imperial throne hung in the balance.

Avoidance of Ceremony

The Prince of Wales last night, even at the climax of a 6,000-mile forced journey, showed characteristic avoidance of ceremony.

DRAMATIC SOCIETY ELECTS OFFICERS

Deloro Organization Has Very Successful Year — S. B. Cheeseman President.

MARMORA, Dec. 12.—(Examiner Correspondence).— Deloro Social and Dramatic Society, parent society of the many now flourishing in that village held its annual meeting on Monday evening at the hall.

H. A. McNally presided and following reading of minutes by J. H. English, secretary, made a few remarks. Having outlined the functions of the society, he spoke of the various changes made to the hall during the year such as the furnishing of a new exit door, fixing of seats, re-decorating and relighting. He also mentioned that pictures and dnces comprised the main activities for the year besides a fair patronage of the library run in its connection. Interesting and concise was the secretary's report. A favourable balance at the end of the year ending September 30, showed $151.32 as he presen working fund plus $350 held in reserve to be applied on the purchase of a new picture machine.

Discussion on the matter of an improved library was ably led by W. R. Reynolds and F. Bapty the matter to receive attention at the hands of the new committee.

Officers Elected

The election of officers was then carried out, S. B. Cheeseman, last year's vice president, being elected president and thereupon assuming chairmanship of the meeting. C. H. Buskard was elected vice president and J. H. English re-elected secretary treasurer. S. J. Sanderson and W. Kerr ran close for the position of M.C., the former receiving the majorit. W. R. Reynolds was unanimously elected as librarian and C. R. Quinn was reappointed auditor. The committee elected are: F. Groves, W. Simmons, F. Leal, K. Buchmann, J. Hemphill, F. Gray, N. Kilpatrick, G. O'Neill, A. Hart, R. D. Murray, W. L. Rigg and W. Kerr. A vote of thanks was tendered H. A. McNally and A. V. Yates for their services in connection with the hall renovations. S. B. Wright, manager of the company, expressed his pleasure in hearing of the prosperous year under review and told of the inception of the society over 20 years ago and of an earlier Society which functioned thirty years ago. He remarked that such a society was a feature very necessary in a small community such as Deloro where residents had to make their own amusement. F. A. Bapty, secretary of the Company, also made some appropriate reparks which included the hope that any who had suggestions for the improvement of the society would pass them along to the committee so that another prosperous year might be reported. The entertainment of the evening was provided by the Harold Lloyd eight reel comedy "Speedy" which provoked much mirth. Free smokes were given out during the evening.

ONE TRUSTEE

Col. E. E. Snider, both school inspectors.

Purpose of the Bill.

During the discussion, Mr. Morris said that the township school board bill had been designed to provide for a greater cooperation of the school trustees over a larger area than at present in order to get advantages the rural people want for their children. Technical schools were being built in the cities toward which the province paid half the cost of construction and maintenance. Farmers were contributing their share of this money, but what benefit did their children get from it? A three-trustee school board could never get anything like that. As the Government invited suggestions it might be helpful to propose an amendment which would retain the local school boards, but also set up a township or county board composed of one representative from each local board.

LADIES HOLD ANNUAL FAIR

Christmas Sale is Well Attended by Members of Regent St. United Church.

MANY BEAUTIFUL BOOTHS

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, December 11. — The annual Christmas Fair of the Ladies' Aid of the Regent Street United Church was the outstanding event of the week, being held on Friday afternoon in the school room of the church, with a record attendance. The afternoon was delightful, and even the delicate people were able to spend at least a few minutes with the Ladies' Aid.

The guests were received by Mrs. Albert Darling, president of the Ladies' Aid, Mrs. (Rev.) S. A. Kemp, and Mrs. S. S. Spence, who was one of the organizers of the Ladies' Aid, and who has held the office of treasurer for many years. The kindly greetings made everyone feel at home, and one started on a tour of inspection around the hall, enjoying the artistic decorations, the attractive wares, and, above all, the friendly spirit which predominated. The decorations were carried out entirely in red, green, and white, the Christmas colors, used in a variety of ways, originality and good taste blending to make an artistic effect. Christmas greens and scarlet flowers were used with good effect in conjunction with yards and yards of crepe paper. The first booth at the right, conveniently situated for the smaller purchasers, was devoted to candy, and at the hour of opening was loaded with "sweeties" in many varieties, but before closing time was entirely empty. Mrs. A. E. Higgins, Mrs. Harry Dunford, and Mrs. Percy Spence were in charge.

Woollen Booth.

Next door to the candy was the woollen booth, where the daintiest of woolies for the baby were sold, and also tea cosies, toques, and serviceable hand-knit mittens. The Woollen Committee enlarged their activities this year and produced a handsome autograph quilt, one of the prettiest specimens displayed in the village, and carried out in shades of rose and white. The work was beautifully done, and it attracted a great deal of favorable notice. Mrs. John Charlton, Mrs. J. Reid, Mrs. John Murphy, Sr., and Mrs. Frank Darling were in charge.

Next on the north-west corner was the home cooking, cakes, pies, cookies, tarts, bread and lots of other dainties which tempted the palate and found ready sale. Mrs. Jefferson Moore was the convenor, and her assistants were Mrs. Silas Pearson, Mrs. Purdy, Mrs. H. J. Abbott, Mrs. James Morrison, Mrs. J. E. Galvin, Mrs. W. Northey, and Mrs. H. Ingram, the latter being the cashier.

Next at the west end of the room was a Christmas tree bearing pretty handkerchiefs as its fruit, and like other trees being rapidly denuded of its fruit. Mrs. F. H. Richardson, Mrs. Robert Nugent, and Mrs. J. Northey were the guardians of this attraction.

On the south-west corner a small booth was attractively labelled "Treasure Island," and had a variety of surprise packets which were excellent value for the amount asked. Also there was a collection of pretty artificial flowers, sweet peas, roses, etc., giving a colorful note. Mrs. Robert White was in charge, assisted by Mrs. R. A. Bell and Mrs. Stanley Millage.

Next came the aprons of all sizes, designs and colors, all well made and all combining the useful and ornamental qualities in aprons. The ladies in charge were Mrs. G. A. Welbourne (convenor), Mrs. John Hendren, Mrs. F. G. Erskine, Mrs. A. E. Carveth, Mrs. W. H. Stabler, Mrs. H. J. Brown, Mrs. J. R. Northey, and Mrs. Morgan Abrams.

Attractive Needlework.

The fancy work booth was especially fine this year, even when one considers the past high standard and the most attractive needlework of all descriptions was being rapidly sold. Mrs. Nathan Payne, Mrs. S. A. Kemp, Mrs. T. Crawford, Mrs. Walter Hamblin, and Mrs. H. R. Wagar were in charge.

Mrs. D. H. Webster and Mrs. N. S. Moore were joint convenors of the tea room, which occupied a central position, and which was so attractive that each table had a waiting list, which grew as the afternoon advanced. One entered through a gate in a pretty picket fence, and once inside delectable afternoon tea was served at small tables. Assistants were Mrs. C. Bell, Miss Lulu Darling, Mrs. John Millage, Mrs. Sargent, Mrs. N. S. Osborne, Mrs. Clare Chittick, Mrs. A. V. Hill, and Mrs. W. J. Dunford. Tea was poured by Mrs. E. J. Sanderson and Mrs. T. A. Northey.

When the returns were counted and the money turned into the treasurer's hands, it was found that the financial results were far in excess of any previous year, and amounted to more than $616.00. The Ladies' Aid as an organization feels that it has done well, and as individual members there is a feeling of the reward being worth the effort.

SAD FISH STORY.

LONDON, December 12. — Thirty entrants in the Braintree, Essex, angling festival fished vainly for four hours and then gave up. As no one caught a fish, the medals and cups, offered as prizes, were packed away until next year. The last festival held saw the winning of two cups and a medal by an angler who caught one fish of less than 8 ounces.

WOMEN'S SOCIETY ELECTS OFFICERS

Mrs. Thomas Thurston is New President of Dunsford W.M.S.

(Examiner Correspondence)

DUNSFORD, Dec. 11.—The annual meeting of the Dunsford W.M.S. was held at the parsonage on Thursday afternoon with twenty-two members and five visitors present. The president, Mrs. P. H. Skitch, occupied the chair. The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Robert Brien. The pastor, Rev. J. F. Everson, offered prayer. The treasurer's report presented by Mrs. W. F. Thurston, showed that the society had had a good year and that the allocation given to the society was well in sight and that when all the monies were paid in it would be fully realized. Mesdames Ezra and Nelson Thurston sang beautifully a duet entitled, "It Was Alone He Suffered." In the absence of Mrs. Irwin E. Thurston, Mrs. Skitch gave a brief synopsis of the last chapter of the study book, "New Paths For Old Purposes." Here it was stated that to speak of the Missionary as a leader gave the Easterners the idea that they were inferior, on the other hand the term fellow-worker and friend met their approval. The missionary will do better work when he learns to appreciate the civilization of the East. "The building of the Kingdom of God needs the spiritual insight of the East Indian, and patience and the genial wisdom of the Chinaman, the courtesy, self-control and love of beauty of the Japanese, the sunny-hearted philosophy of the African as much as the initiative and practical genius of the Anglo-Saxon." Foreign people must receive the gospel in their own way. Denominational differences are nothing to foreigners. They are impressed by the uniting and uplifting power of the gospel. Lunch was served at the close of the meeting.

Mrs. Skitch requested Mr. Everson to conduct the election and the following were the officers chosen for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. Thomas J. Thurston.
First Vice—Mrs. John J. Thurston
Second Vice—Mrs. Albert Thurston.
Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Nelson Thurston.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. Vernold Thurston.
Treasurer—Mrs. William F. Thurston.
Pianist—Mrs. Walter Brien.
Temperance Secretary—Mrs. F. E. Gordan.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

To Marion:

In Wayside recently you mentioned Mary's inclination to be overbearing. I forget how it was worded, but that was the idea. People and their ways are always intensely interesting to me. Most of us, if we have learned to control ourselves, especially women, live lives which their home-folk, and perhaps the community sees and judge by, and another life within themselves, unknown and unsuspected by others, perhaps not realized by themselves, and if a bit of it occasionally shows everyone is so surprised. Man is man, and woman is woman the wide world over.

I love to watch people in street cars, and in other public places. Once into a rather crowded car came an elderly woman and a young man. They had to stand in front of me. I gave the woman my seat, she thanked me, the man lifted his hat. Shortly after a man sitting beside her left. The young man quickly crowded into the vacated seat and I stood during a long trip while he sat.

Men and women are not the same. Did you ever try to draw a cockerel and a pullet of the same age? If so, you surely noticed how much tougher he was. It would seem that same physical difference runs through the whole male creation, and probably God intended it so, else it would not have been. If they are made physically stronger, they must be intended for physically harder work. I am not speaking of Amazons, but of ordinary people. Man is somewhat inclined to consider himself superior. Adam was created first. Later we read "The sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair," and took wives. In nearly all non-Christian countries woman is assigned a very inferior place. She does the drudgery; he does the fighting—but that fighting is to protect his home, and that idea of protection—no matter how perverted, has existed since the time of Adam, in the majority of communities. In many cases the protection existed or exists only so long as man had use for, or his temper approved of his wife. When angered at her he could torture or kill, and no one objected. But the other way would not work.

At present in civilized Christian places, the average man delights to think he is providing for, cherishing, living for, his wife. They really are unconscious of any other motive, but there is a mighty lot of self in them. The more tactful a woman is, the more of that innate self she can remove. There are so many spoiled men, for in the homes, when there are children, to very many mothers, while teaching the boys to be polite, considerate and kind, counteract that teaching by considering the boy's wishes first. They seem to think that by, in certain ways, sacrificing the girls, it will keep the boys out of mischief, when otherwise they would be far better men in the community and in their own homes. Almost any woman can gaily endure any hardship—if necessary, but if she feels it is unnecessary the burden becomes terrible. Generally, man needs woman's strength in time of trouble. They need each other, for a complete life. There must be love and trust, not blind agreement, but forbearance, with high ideals, and a remembrance of the marriage vows before God.

They have told us woman's place is in the home. Man now quite realizes that if a woman remains within the four walls of her home her husband and family are going to suffer. Living conditions are such that a woman who simply attends to her household duties is not a help-meet for the man, and he may seek other and wrong friendships. As a co-partner in the greatest business of life she should have a fair understanding of, and interest in, the business which provides the income. Their friends should be mutual. She has a right to know his anxieties. He has a right to know and should know, without whining, however, somewhat of her difficulties. Troubles will draw them closer, mistakes will be made. We are all human. Woman has, as never before, the chance to be a queen in her own home. The may enter any profession she chooses—may make a career for herself, but have you noticed that there is a tinge of unhappiness in the bachelor-woman?—or it may be bitterness or jealousy, or possibly she is disdainful of a married sister who has to put up with a man and children, and not have any more income than the unmarried one, who has no one to think of but herself. If selfish motives have kept a woman single, she rarely seems really happy. No woman is wise who, with the best intentions, gives in and does without too much. She is apt to pity herself eventually, and also encourage her husband in selfishness, and perhaps end in a grand quarrel, which may or may not be disastrous.

Woman has so much, more than the power behind the throne in her own hands now; let her beware it is not carried too far. Companionate marriages, easy divorce, quick re-marriages, freedom for girls and boys, early, forced marriages, illegitimate children are becoming too frequent, and people seem to think so little of it.

Homes are growing a bit too easy; a happy mean should exist.

Nothing that I can write would add to the effectiveness of your letter, "Quid Est," so I will content myself with saying "Thank you."

"Dear Marion:

Just a line to-day to ask for the helps underlined on coupon enclosed. I intend writing you in the near future but I must add right now that to us The Examiner is wonderfully improved since the addition of "Marion's Page."

Thanking you, I am,

Yours very truly,

Mrs. J. M. K."

I'll be looking forward to receiving that longer letter your note implies, "Mrs. J. M. K."

"Dear Marion:

In a letter sent you yesterday, with a coupon for some helps, by an oversight there was not a stamp enclosed.

As it has possibly reached the W.P. basket, I am enclosing another coupon.

We wish to thank you for the helps already received.

Sincerely,

Mrs. D. R. C."

It would not be nice, in a friendly circle such as this, to throw away a request because of an oversight, would it, Mrs. D. R. C.? The helps were sent you—but thanks for the stamp! I must keep expenses down, or someone will be divorcing me from our page!

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

SUGAR SAVING LIVES

Sandow, the strong man, had a habit of eating taffy a few minutes before he went on the stage to do his "strong man" act. Footballs players during rest periods are often supplied with molasses taffy, chocolate bars, or other forms of candy.

Many swimmers before entering distance swims in cold water have a habit o feating candy.

What is there about sugar that makes it such a valuable food?

It is the speed or short time that is required to have it available in the blood.

However there are some ailments in which sugar cannot be eaten, because the sugar causes gas in stomach or intestine; cases where it would cause nausea and vomiting; other cases in which the patient is unconscious and so cannot avail himself of this valuable food. And this food is so valuable and physicians so anxious to get it into the patient's blood that they are now injecting a sugar solution directly into the muscles.

Sugar is not only valuable in itself as a food, but it is necessary also for breaking up fat, and thus making fat also available for the needs of the body. Fat next to sugar, is the principal source of energy for the body.

Dr. Jerome Glaser, Chicago, who has done considerable work with this method, reports his own and other cases of pneumonia and broncho-pneumonia in which the injection of sugar so enriched the blood that the heart, which after all is only muscle, was immediately strengthened and able to carry the patient past the crisis.

Your doctor will tell you that it is not usually Flu, broncho-pneumonia, or pneumonia, that causes death, but that the heart simply gets tired out trying to pump blood through congested areas.

It is comforting to know that this new and safe method of increasing the blood sugar is now known and available.

It means the saving of many lives where other methods of feeding are impossible, and other heart stimulants have been unavailing. Remember also that sugar is a good cheap food.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

It costs no more to serve coffee in the drawing room or living room than in the dining room, and it is one of those little gestures that add a note of formality to every-day living that is often decidedly helpful. Any little custom of that sort that makes the daily humdrum facts of family life seem more important is, I think, well worth while. Theoretically we may have no taste for forms and ceremonies but actually most of us find them decidedly tonic—and of course family life would become unendurable if we didn't retain some formality, some ritual in our every-day existence at home.

So if you don't already follow this little custom of drinking your coffee in the living room or drawing room, I am seriously suggesting that you do so.

Of course, it is a trifle difficult if you do not have a maid, but it is not entirely out of the question. There is something to be said in favor of getting through dinner as soon as possible and then getting the table cleared and dishes washed as quickly as possible. There is also something to be said in favor of postponing these after-dinner duties until a little later.

One woman I know—who doesn't keep a maid—insists on eating dinner in leisurely manner and then having members of the family linger for a short time in the dining room over their coffee and conversation. There are four grown children in this family and each week one is appointed in turn on what they call the after-dinner committee. Then when the little coffee drinking ceremony is over mother and the helper for the week retire to the kitchen and dining room, setting themselves a time limit of thirty minutes for the cleaning up and dish washing. And this arrangement proves to be a great deal more satisfactory all round than the usual informal scramble to "do the dishes" that exists in many a maidless household.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHORS CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

I have taken to-day's reading from the poems of James McCarroll, gathered in a little book entitled "Poems, Songs and Ballads." Mr. McCarroll was editor of the Peterborough Chronicle in 1843.

DECEMBER 12, 1928

"THE ELM TREE."

"Old giant from the days we call primeval,
In solitary greatness rooted there;
Lifting thy splendid head in pride coeval
With the dark mountain to the higher air.

"A grand old elm, but not an elm tree only,
For in thee dwells the spirit of the years;
The passer sees thee standing vast and lonely—
To him no awful presence there appears.

"He does not see the phantoms thee surrounding,
Nor hear the voices from thy branches all,
Nor the low echoes from the rocks resounding;
Thy myst'ry cannot be resolved by all.

"But there is one within my father's dwelling,
Who from his window gazes out on thee;
He knows, old tree, the tale that thou art telling,
He hears and sees what none else hear or see.

"Thou hast a secret, old elm, worth the keeping,
We children knew it not in early days;
But they who far beyond thy shade are sleeping
Revealed it to us ere they went their ways.

"God pity us who wait with shrinking,
Like one sweet spirit for the falling leaf.
O brother, mine! in darkness I am thinking
Of severed branches and a scattered sheaf.

"Down the long road that dips into the valley,
The love-crowned visions of our youth have fled;
While like lost mariners we keep a tally
Of the sad years in desolation sped.

"But oh, remember, in these doubtful mazes
There is a fountain by the elm tree blest,
And the weird presence in its branches gazes
Through hope's bright portal in the happy west."

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

IF SHE CAN'T GO

If she can't go then I can't go—
But don't misunderstand:
She doesn't tell me yes or no,
Or question, or command.
But when you're wedded half your life,
Like Mother here and me,
A place they do not want his wife
No husband wants to be.

If she won't go then I won't go,
Not for her sake, but mine,
For home will be more fun, I know,
The friends however fine.
I don't imagine any man
Would really care to roam—
I don't see how a fellow can
And leave the wife at home.

For when we go we both shall go,
Or here at home we stay,
For all the fun we ever know
We find no other way.
We long have learned—and who has not?—
Whatever fun they start,
Together we have had a lot,
But never much apart.

HIS VOICE

(By Willo Dunk.)

As Janet Lansing rose to answer the telephone, a strange feeling of faintness crept over her. She wondered vaguely why she had felt all day that something was going to happen. She had slept fitfully the previous night—a rather new experience for her. And, of course, she had dreamed of the old farm days and the Christmas tree of years ago when she and Harold had taken part in the usual dialogues and choruses. But she had often dreamed of that night and the strange events which followed. Her dream could not not have unnerved her like this and aroused such a sense of expectation.

"Expectation? Just what am I expecting?

"Nonsense," she whispered sharply, without allowing her thoughts to form a definite answer to her query. "You twenty-six-year-old maiden, come down to reason," she admonished, closing her fingers firmly on the telephone instruments, and shaking her head at her reflection in the small mirror before her.

"Hello! Hello!

"Yes, this is Janet Lansing. Oh, Mrs. Stinson, is that you? Why, whatever is wrong? Are you ill? Oh!!!

"Yes, yes, I'll run in on my way from the office. Do try to quiet yourself. Let me send Dr. Marver, or some one to stay with you till I come. No. . . . Well, please calm yourself and I'll come as soon as possible, I assure you. . . . Yes, dear, I'll stay if you wish it. Good-bye."

"So this is what it means," she whispered to herself. "I knew something was going to happen,—something startling. And—oh, how can I hold out till 5:30 with such a look?" she demanded of the old mirror as she glimpsed her white face and misty half-incredulous, half-fearful, staring eyes.

"But I can do it," she defied her reflection. "I've stuck to it for eight years and I'll not fail now. Perhaps it is just for her after all, and I must control this foolish longing, and get back to work."

Even as she spoke the manager's bell was ringing, impatiently demanding her return and for the next three hours she had scarcely a minute in which she was free to wonder.

"Free at last," she breathed softly, as the office gong announced closing time. "Now I'll soon know what the message is."

She sped swiftly out into the already darkening street, and, snuggling her chin well down into her cosy fur collar, made her way through the lazily-falling snow-flakes down the crowded main street, and off to the southwest, taking all possible short-cuts.

At the front window in the Sherbourne street that afternoon sat a bewitching-looking little old lady. She was struggling nervously to control the trembling hands and forcing them to "carry on" with the inevitable piece of knitting.

It required an unusual effort to-day to make the clicking needles keep time with the cheery little creak in the floor under her rocking-chair. But the song which usually accompanied the knitting was missing entirely. No effort could possibly have steadied that sweet quavering voice as tears of relief and thanksgiving splashed unheeded on the little mitten over which she bent.

"Come," she admonished bravely, "you simply must get this last mitten finished for wee Bobs and Bertie before you and Janet take time to enjoy your good tidings."

And she worked to such advantage that before Janet arrived the mitten had been completed, pressed and parcelled with other three ready for old Santa's pack.

Janet had agreed to spend the evening with her and after getting supper ready the wee old lady slipped again into the seat at the front window to watch for the girl who had been her greatest comfort and confidant for the past weary eight years.

And now at last there had come relief from all the uncertainty and reward for all the prayers their longing hearts had together sent up to the Great White Throne above.

Harold had written after eight years' silence! Her boy—her bright, happy wilful son! How she had loved him and feared for him! What a noble heart he had in spite of the rash temper which had always seemed to clash with his father's stern will!

"Dave was too severe,—too unbending," she murmured again, to the creaking of the rocking-chair, as she had murmured almost every day during those long years of hoping and waiting.

Thus had she always justified her boy.

When Janet ran up the front steps, Mrs. Stinson was there to meet her firmly clasping to her heart the letter which held so much of Christmas joy for her this year.

"Ah, Janet," she exclaimed, "it is good of you to come so quickly. See, here is the letter. He is well—doing fine—and, oh, you must read it yourself," she finished brokenly as she thrust the letter tremblingly into Janet's hands.

Slipping one arm around the old lady, Janet went with her into the living-room and seated her in her comfy rocker again.

"Just tell me about it, please, Mrs. Stinson," she faltered. "You see it seems so—sort of sacred and—just for you alone—I can't seem—well, I just couldn't read it," she finished desperately.

"But, dearie, it has a message for you too, and so you must see for yourself, and I must get your supper on the table right away. You must be hungry after coming all this distance home from work," and the little old lady trotted off to the kitchen and busied herself there while Janet rather confusedly opened and read the long-looked-for message.

The letter was short, but it quite satisfied both his mother and his boyhood's sweetheart and as they sat at supper the younger eyes responded to the happy light in the older ones, and the younger cheeks glowed pink with joyful excitement.

"We must hurry, Janet dear. You know we have to get a radio and have it ready to listen in on tomorrow at twelve. Harold said if nothing unexpected happened we would hear his voice as we sat at our Christmas dinner. And you're to be with me then, by special request, and see, here is his cheque for five hundred dollars to buy everything we need for a real happy Christmas. It's the first thing he has asked me to do for eight years and I'm going to do it thoroughly." And the dear old mother's eyes were bright, and her joyous quivering tones were good to hear, as at last the burden of doubt and dread was lifted, freeing her to be her own sweet happy self again.

Never did any one, or rather any two, spend such a deliriously gay time as she and Janet spent that Christmas Eve. They selected the radio first, of course, and made all arrangements for installing it speedily, paying generously for their anticipated pleasure.

Then they went from store to store purchasing every thing necessary for their day's enjoyment, and buying dozens of gifts which Janet helped the old lady to choose and dispatch to dozens of "those who need Christmas cheer," as the old lady confided to Janet.

When at last they could think of no one else with whom to share their Christmas joy they returned to the house on Sherbourne street and gaily decorated and planned everything to their entire satisfaction.

Christmas day dawned as clear, bright and sparkling as any one could have wished and Mrs. Stinson and Janet could scarcely realize that all their happiness and thankfulness was genuine.

As they sat down to dinner exactly at twelve with the radio tuned in to station WKJ, as Harold had directed, neither of them could even pretend to eat a bite. The dear old lady could not control her trembling hands, so held them tightly clasped in her lap—listening for the voice of her long-lost son. Janet's heart was pounding so loudly that even she never noticed a light step in the hall till the door swung open and facing them for a moment stood a tall, fine-looking man, hat in hand, and slightly graying hair thrown back from a broad forehead below which shone deep blue eyes that begged for recognition. Those same eyes had already taken in every detail of change, development and beauty in those two who had risen from their untasted meal at his sudden intrusion and now stood breathlessly facing him.

"Mother! Janet! Don't you know me? I told you," he said as he swept the startled pair into his arms, "that you'd hear my voice at noon to-day and—here I am.

"Can't you even wish me 'A Merry Christmas'," he teased, holding them off at arms' length. Then soberly, "This is my first real Christmas in eight long homesick years, but I vowed I'd stay till I 'made good,' and then I'd be able to give you both all the good time s you deserve for your patient waiting," he finished, giving them another hug.

"But how did you know we were patiently waiting when we received never a word from you in all that time," pouted Janet, blushing prettily.

"Ah, my saucy lady, I received The Peterborough Examiner regularly and have kept close watch over 'Wedding Bells, Personals, and Announcements.' But you name won't be long among the missing now, I'll promise you," he retorted, kissing her shamelessly while his mother hurried to place a plate and arrange the "Prodigal's Christmas Dinner."

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

Mrs. P. W.: I have heard it said you can clean oil paintings by rubbing lightly with a freshly cut slice of potato dampened in cold water. Wipe off the lather with a damp sponge, and finish with luke-warm water, and dry and polish with an old silk handkerchief.

Perhaps some neighbor will tell us another method.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once.

Rub Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief as effectively as the messy old mustard plaster.

Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, methol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

I found I could cover the blemishes with cosmetics, but this was only a temporary relief. My druggist recommended your purely vegetable laxative, and suggested my trouble might be constipation. XVIII, CHEESE.

What has happened to cheese-making in Peterborough county, and why? Gone are the days when wagons, each bearing some dozen cans, rattled out from every side line and delivered their 'standard' of milk at the factory before eight a.m.—the days when factory meetings, the test of milk, the increase of one-eighth cent in the price of cheese, and who were slated to take the next loads of cheese to Peterborough were main topics of rural conversation. And do you recall that eventful time when the loads of cheese from Cedardale factory were crossing the old ferry at Gannon's Narrows? When, on reaching the Ennismore shore, the wheels of the first wagon rolled onto the 'apron'. It became evident that the ferry had not been snubbed. The weight of the wagon on the 'apron' forced the ferry back—the load went into the lake, dragging the horses with it, and an exciting time was had by all for a few minutes.

Though in recent years its importance seems to have waned—locally at least—cheese was probably the first milk product, and there are over three hundred and fifty varieties on the market. These are divided into two main classes, soft and hard. In the soft class are found such varities as Brie, Camembert, Gorgonzola, Limberg, Neufchatel and Stilton; among th hard are Cheddar, Edam, Emmental, Pharmesan and Roquefort.

The composition of cheese is: Water 35 p.c., fat 34 p.c., protein 25 p.c., mineral matter p.c. Cheese is a combiantion of the greater part of the protein and fat of milk, it is high in calcium and phosphorus, while salt (sodium chloride) is added in the process of manufacture. The protein of cheese is the casein of milk digested in varying degrees according to the ripeness of the cheese.

Cheese is a concentrated food; one pound provides as much food value as twenty-one eggs or two and one-half pounds of beefsteak.

To make cheese more easy of digestion the following rules should be observed:

1. It should be combined with a carbohydrate food as toast, macaroni, etc.

2. It should be thoroughly masticated.

3. It should be eaten in small pieces and at the beginning of a meal.

4. If cooked, the cooking should be properly done — never subject cheese to intense heat.

5—Serve at once.

NOTE—Test souffle with a knitting needle; when needle comes out of centre clean, souffle is cooked.

PADDED HANGERS.

Fine velvet frocks and other perishable fabrics should never hang on thin wooden hangers. It takes a little time to pad out the shoulders. Stuff sleeves with tissue paper, also, and your frocks will stay looking newly pressed.

The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion

(Copyright)

NEARLY everyone has troubles that are known to her alone, and it is a trait of our sex to keep these troubles hidden, at least f om those whom knowledge of them might hurt.

* * *

It is a very admirable idea, and fully in accord with the self-sacrificing spirit that has animated woman from the world's first beginning. But I doubt whether all our trouble is necessary to be borne.

* * *

Some women, of course, don't keep their most intimate troubles to themselves—there was the Hungarian woman mentioned in news dispatches the other day who requested a divorce because her husband had shaved off his lovely little brown mustache. The court ordered him to raise another crop.

* * *

That, which to you or to me would have been inconsequential, loomed so big as a trouble to the Budapest woman that she was willing to endure a court scene to gain separation!

* * *

Perhaps I can't do better than quote Burns

"But human bodies are sic fools,
For a' their colleges and schools,
That when nae real ills perplex them,
They make enow themselves to vex them."

* * *

Some neighbors are inclined to allow trivialities to prey on their minds; I know people who are never really happy except when they have some trouble.

* * *

And this in spite of the fact that it is not work that kills; it is worry. As Beecher wrote: "Work is healthy; you can hardly put more upon a man than he can bear. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery, but the friction. Fear secretes acids; but love and trust are sweet juices."

* * *

I believe we women would be much the better for ignoring some of the things over which we worry. When a difficulty arises, by all means face it, but don't anticipate. If there is nothing you can do to-day to prepare for Christmas, forget it for the day and do what must be done.

* * *

This isn't an argument against preparedness—by no means. If you have half-an-hour to spare to-day to prepare for Christmas, go to it. My point is, if you haven't, then don't worry; don't let thought of what you can't do prey upon your mind.

* * *

Personally, I believe in getting ready what I can well ahead of time—I'm the greatest little planner ever was. What if half time my plots DO go agley? So long as I think I am ready for emergencies, I don't worry.

* * *

There's just as much opportunity in housekeeping for this planning to avoid worry as there is in my business of conducting our page.

* * *

Just as I sit down over the week-end to plan the pages for the week, couldn't the housewife chart HER course? Couldn't she take her recipe cabinet and plan the meals for every day? Couldn't she decide what housework is to be done day by day?

* * *

Do I hear some neighbor remark, "You don't know much about housekeeping?" And does someone else say: "You can't do it, because something is always turning up."

* * *

Don't you think, neighbors, that anything ever "turns up" to knock my schedule crooked? How about Monday, when the printers could give me only one page instead of the two for which I had planned? Did I weep, or worry? I'll say not!

* * *

It wouldn't have done any good, and it would have detracted from my efficiency for the rest of the day. One can't work when one is worried, or angry, or weeping.

* * *

Emergencies are bound to arise in the best conducted family, but my point is that the better-conducted your affairs are the better able you will be to meet the emergency.

* * *

Just for instance, if you have planned for a week's meals ahead, and have the materials ordered, and on Tuesday some unexpected guests come, won't you be in better position to entertain them than if you had been living and ordering from meal to meal?

* * *

Just as, if the printers came to me at 2.30 some day and said they wanted enough Women's Page material for another page, I could the better supply them because I have my articles scheduled. I know what I can spare and on what I should save.

* * *

There are neighbors, I know, who are just as methodical as I believe it would help every woman to be, and I shall be glad to hear from them as to the success of their plans for avoiding worry.

* * *

One coupon is beginning to look like Christmas, isn't it? There are helps for nearly everything you need for the festive season—one tells how to make gifts at home, a second tells about decorating the house and arranging parties, a third gives many hints for inexpensively decorating the tree and table, and a fourth tells how to make the "Christmas negligee" that will be so much appreciated by many.

* * *

All of these are practical, and the directions are easy to follow. You may have one or all by simply filling out and returning the coupon, printed on this page. But hurry!

* * *

The announcement of the result of the Christmas Story contest appears elsewhere on this page. The stories were splendid, and I was compelled to judge them on all counts of the art—plot, images, structure, dialogue, emotion, characters, originality, and so on.

* * *

I wish to thank all the neighbors who took an interest in this competition, and to express my regret that all the stories could not be gathered in the Christmas number. There simply wasn't room.

* * *

Every story submitted to me in time was used, however, by Saturday night, and all were included in the contest. Some which arrived late I handed to the Editor, but fear they cannot be used.

* * *

And now I suppose everyone will be looking forward to the next competition. It will be one that everyone can join in, and will be particularly apt at the New Year season—but I don't wish to announce it until next week.

* * *

In case I do not get around to writing personal letters, I wish to take this opportunity of thanking all those who have consented to help with the "Big Sister" column. Some inquiries have already been sent out.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall

Brown velvet trousers are worn over the yellow silk blouse in this new negligee ensemble. The short jacket is of orange and gold brocade.

The fashion for overblouses originated in Paris. It came to this country as a novelty when we were still taking great pains to wear our blouses securely anchored beneath the waist bands of our skirts.

My own impression has been that French women, here and there, retained the old-fashioned tuck-in separate blouse long after it had come to be regarded as quite an absurdity on this side of the Atlantic. But the present fashion for tuck-in blouses originated not in France but in America, and it is the American flapper who is responsible for the revival. She chose to wear her skirt on top of her blouse, not beneath it, in much the same spirit of daring in which she chose to wear her little felt hat pushed back so that her forehead might be seen.

Now, of course, the hat that shows the forehead has become an established fashion—and most of us wear it because the French milliners exploited it, not because a few years ago American school girls pushed their hats slightly to the back of their heads. And most of us, I suppose will adopt the new tuck-in blouse because a number of prominent French dressmakers have put the stamp of their approval upon it—not because some harum-scarum American flapper thought it would be rather amusing to launch the fashion a few seasons ago.

Some of the newest negligee pajamas from France show this new tuck-in arrangement of the pajama blouse. Often there are three pieces—the tuck-in blouse, the trousers and a short hip-length jacket, or a coat that is quite long. As a contrast to the pajama trousers that actually fitted closely over calf and ankles, most of the new ones have trousers that are remarkably wide and full.

WORK OF NOTED SCULPTORS IS DISCUSSED BY ART STUDY CLUB

Two Interesting Papers Are Delivered at Regular Club Meeting.

EPSTEIN BORN IN 1880

Mestrovic Made His First Appearance in Vienna in 1902.

Noted sculptors in the persons of Jacob Epstein and Ivan Mestrovic, formed the subject of two interesting papers given at the last meeting of the Art Study Club, when Mrs. V. S. Foster spoke on Epstein and Mrs. B. V. Moore gave the address on Mestrovic.

Mrs. Foster opened her talk by describing the characteristics of Epstein's work, which showed a frankly romantic trend with passionate intensity as a marked attribute. Featured by an Oriental influence and a vigorous denial of Greek inspiration, Epstein's work has a strong Asiatic tinge. It is thought that he may have chosen his intense human shapes as fit moulds for his own thoughts and emotions, and his portrait busts, in particular, exhibit a passion for details which is very noticeable in the ears. They are expressive of poise rather than gesture.

Jacob Epstein's early life was full of hardship. He was born on the East Side in New York in 1880, with an ancestry of Russian-Polish-Jewish stock. Until he was twenty years old he lived in the New York Ghetto, in a garret on Hester street. The turning point in his career came when the publishers accepted his illustrations for a book entitled "The Spirit of the Ghetto," and he took the $400 he received for this work and went to Paris.

Later he went to London, and aroused a storm of criticism among the art lovers of that city, so much so that he gained the title of "The Stormy Petrel of British Art." But although his work always draws comment, sometimes of scorn, it is more frequently of appreciation.

Mrs. Foster went on to describe some of the attributes of Epstein's achievements as a sculptor, and mentioned some of his best known work, which includes eighteen figures by him placed on the Medical Building in the Strand, a figure of Venus, a figure of Christ, and the Hudson Memorial in Hyde Park.

Ivan Mestrovic.

Mrs. B. V. Moore's paper on Mestrovic gave an outline of his life and work. He was born in 1883 in a small hamlet in Slavonia, the child of peasants. Day by day, in the foothills of the Dinaric Alps, he watched his flock of sheep and at night by the fireside he listened to the passionate songs of his enslaved race.

Encouraged by his father, who was a gifted craftsman, and by the village priest, he made his first crucifix, and when thirteen years of age he was apprenticed to a marble cutter and made angels and altar ornaments for the church. Later, through a friendly Jew, he was enabled to study under Professor Hellmer in the academy at Vienna, and came out of this school with his own personality unspoiled, ready to foster a strictly native art. His is a national type, an expression of Jugo-Slav ideas and temperament.

He is animated by a sense of rude power and yet he has developed into a very sophisticated type which assimilates attributes of various schools of art, so that at different times he is in turn antique, medieval and again extremely modern.

In 1902, Mestrovic made his first appearance in Vienna and in 1910 he exhibited in Paris, where he was acclaimed as a great artist. At the International Exhibition in Rome in 1911, he made the Serbian Pavilion an object of enthusiasm to the critics, his productions exciting them by their novelty and strength. In 1915, the English people were wildly enthusiastic over his exhibition at the Victoria and Albert Museum. In November of 1924 his work came to America and was exhibited at the Brooklyn Museum.

One critic said of him that his work showed both skill and genius, but was "wilful, inchoate, amorphous and even monstrous and unwholesome in influence. Mestrovic's defect is that 'you are unable to see the forest because of the trees.'"

In the Toronto Art Gallery are the bronze head of Moses, the work of Mestrovic, and a kneeling figure, representing his mother, hewn out of white marble.

RANGERS TIGHTEN GRIP ON LOOP LEAD

NATIONAL LEAGUE CHAMPIONS WIN FROM MAPLE LEAFS 3-2

Keeling Plays Prominent Part in Defeating His Former Club.

TIGHT FIXTURE.

Fast Ranger Forwards Make Up For Absence of Defence Men.

NEW YORK, December 12. — Despite the handicaps of injuries and an early score by their opponents, the New York Rangers came home last night to tighten their grip on first place in the United States section of the National Hockey League schedule by scoring a 3 to 2 victory over Toronto. The fast Ranger forwards more than made up for the absence of Ching Johnson, the star defence man, and the injury to his running mate, Aaffy Abel, by holding off the Toronto attack while scoring three times.

Coupled with Detroit's defeat at Montreal, the victory put the Rangers alone at the head of the American group.

Cox opened the scoring for Toronto les sthan six minutes after the start, taking Bailey's rebound for the shot. The Leafs did not score again until a few seconds before the end, when Day tallied.

Butch Keeling, young Ranger spare, played a large part in the scoring, passing to Bun Cook for the first goal and making a brilliant shot on Murdock's rebound for the third. Abel, who played most of the game in spite of a slashed leg, put the Rangers in the lead in the first period with their second tally.

New York Rangers—Goal, Roach; defence, W. Cook and Bourgault; centre, Boucher; wings, Keeling and F. Cook; subs, Murdock, Thompson, Boyd, Abel, Lane.

Dundee Fails To Have Ban Upon Bout Lifted

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—A carbuncle on his neck will keep Rene Devose, crack Belgian middleweight boxer, out of the ring indefinitely the State Athletic Commission announced in authorizing postponement of his scheduled bout with Ace Hudkins at Madison Square Garden, Dec. 28.

Protesting that he is not too old to fight, Johnny Dundee, veteran former featherweight champion, asked the commission to rescind its ban upon a bout with Al Singer, sensational young New York featherweight. But the solons refused. Ray Miller, of Chicago, who created a sensation by knocking out Jimmy McLarnin at Detroit recently, was suspended until such time as he fulfills a contract to box at the Broadway arena, Brooklyn.

CHICAGO WINS FROM OTTAWA

Ripley's Two Goals in the First Period Prove Enough For Victory.

VICTORS BY 2-1 SCORE.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 12.—With Vic Ripley instilling confidence into the Black Hawks with two quick goals in the opening period, the Chicago Black Hawks won their second National League hockey game last night at the expense of the Ottawa Senators, 2 to 1, at the Coliseum.

A crowd of 6,000, the largest of the season, saw the Hawks' rookie sweep through the Senators' defence for two goals in the first fourteen minutes of play and then watched the light, but fast, Chicago sextette present a defence that had the Canadians baffled.

Not until the third period, when the Hawks had two men in the penalty box, were the Senators able to score. After sending four men down the ice, Clancy poked the puck past Gardner for the only Ottawa score. Brilliant guarding in the closing minutes of play turned back the repeated threats of Touhey, Nighbor and Clancy.

The teams:

TEAM IS SELECTED FOR SECOND MATCH

C. E. Kelleway and J. T. E. Andrews Counted Eligible By Committee.

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 12.—The Board of Control, which governs cricket in Australia, yesterday announced that C. E. Kelleway, New South Wales, and J. T. E. Andrews, selected as eligibles for the second test match with England, which opens here on Friday, will not play. Mr. Kelleway was taken ill with ptomaine poisoning during the first test match at Brisbane last week and could not finish at the game.

Selection of Dr. O. E. Nothling, the Queensland all rounder, for the team was announced. Dr. Nothling was fairly successful in the two appearances he had made against England. Playing for the Australian XI. at Sydney, he took three wickets for 61 runs, while for Queensland at Brisbane he captured five wickets for 78 runs.

Mr. Andrews is an old test match player and was chosen for the second match provisionally. He was not on the first team. Evidently, the Australian baord of Control is being influenced by criticism, such as that of Joe Darling, well known veteran Australian cricketer, that too many men over forty-five years of age are being used on the Antipodean test match teams against England. Mr. Darling also demanded spin-ball bowlers and trundlers who would be good on wet wickets. Dr. Nothling may be found to qualify in both

MADOC TO HAVE SKATING RINK

Company Plans To Start Construction of Covered Ice Arena.

LARGE SEATING CAPACITY.

MADOC, Dec. 12 (Examiner Correspondence).—That the village of Madoc and the surrounding communities will soon have a skating rink to be proud of is assured by the formation yesterday of the Madoc Skating Rink Company, which plans to start immediately the construction of a big covered rink. The rink will be 80 feet by 195 feet, and will have a seating capacity of 1,500 to 2,000 persons. The Mechanic Roofing Company has been given the contract for the building and work begins immediately. The rink will be built of metal sheeting and will be complete in every detail. The estimated cost will run well over $9,000. It will be strategically located on Baldwin street, just west of the public school.

The company and officers consists of the following, all Madoc men: President, Frank Smith; secretary, W. J. Hill; treasurer, Fred Curry; executive committee: Dr. S. Eagleson, W. E. Connor, E. E. Pusps, Thomas H. Rupert, Thomas Coverly, and R. R. Bristol.

It is expected by the company that the Madoc rink will become one of the big community attractions of the whole district and that it will fill a long felt need in supplying the youth with a fine building in which to play the great Canadian game of hockey. It promises to give the game a great new impetus and that championship teams will soon be upholding the honor of the community.

AMERICANS AGAIN DEFEAT BRUINS 3-0

Sensational Goal-tending of Worters Responsible For New Yorkers Blanking Boston.

BOSTON, Dec. 12.—The sensational goaltending of Roy Worters was responsible for the New York Americans' 3 to 0 victory over the Boston Bruins here last night. It was the second setback that Boston has received from the Americans in three days.

The play was even until the second period, when Reise and Connors slipped through the Boston defence and the latter caged a rebound for the first score. In the final period when every one of the Bruins except Thompson was playing deep on the offence, Conacher grabbed the puck and outskated the home players for a straight shot at Thompson and a score. A minute later Burch pulled the same act and registered New York's third tally. The line-up:

Boston Bruins—Goal, Thompson; defence, Hitchman and Shore; centre, Frederickson; wings, Oliver and Galbraith; subs, Pettinger, Green, Gainor, Clapper, Welland, Klein and Dennenay.

New York Americans—Goal, Worters; defence, Reise and Conacher; centre, Burch; wings, Broadbent and Connors; subs, Spring, Simpson, Himes Dye, Sheppard and McVeigh.

Officials—W. O'Hara, Ottawa, and R. McKenzie, Montreal.

MILLIONAIRES LOSE TO NIAGARA FALLS

Cataracts Climb Into Second Place Tie in Canpro Standings.

TORONTO, December 12. — Niagara Falls created a four-cornered tie for second place in the Canadian Professional Hockey League standings by beating the Millionaires 3 to 0 at the Arena Gardens last night, leaving the locals alone in sixth position. The Falls, although unpolished in their play, deserved the promotion for they were in the game every second. Their rugged checking upset the locals' play, and while their tactics may not have been according to the letter of the law, they were effective. The Millionaires relied on straight hockey, but it was useless against the Cataracts' crude checking, when any system was adopted to stop a charge.

The Millionaires had almost as much of the play and did not deserve a 3 to 0 drubbing; but they had to deal with Rollin Beaudry, the best goal guardian to appear here in a Canpro contest. Beaudry, a former Montreal University student, who was picked up by Philadelphia Blue Arrows last season, was in the Falls nets, and on his display he will stay there until advanced to the big league. He is not a stylist by any means, but he sure stops shots. Many times the Millionaires were in on top of him, but that was as close as they came to scoring all night.

The teams:

Niagara Falls — Goal, Beaudry; defence, Cain and Fournier; centre, Quesnel; wings, Kelterborn and Godin; subs., Maddin, Duggan, Williams, Prestia, Harrington and Steel.

Millionaires — Goal, Fisher; defence, Green and Young; centre, Rice; wings, Gray and Gauthier; subs., Cameron, G. Clark, Martin, Metcalf, A. Clark, and Wedgewood.

Referee—I. Masters, Kitchener.

The Summary.

First Period—

1—Niagara Falls, Williams, 15.00.

Second Period—

No score.

Third Period—

2—Niagara Falls, Cain, 6.00.
3—Niagara Falls, Kelterborn, 13.30.

Final score—Niagara Falls 3, Millionaires 0.

Penalties—First period, none. Second period, Godin 2, Metcalf and Maddin. Third period, Green, Clark, Gray and Harrington.

HEYDLER AGAIN HEADS LEAGUE

Loop Will Not Change Offer To Minor Leagues On Draft Question.

LEAVE FOR CHICAGO.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The National League concluded its annual meeting here yesterday afternoon with an executive session, at which such weighty matters as the re-election of John Heydler as president, and the awarding of the pennant to the St. Louis Cardinals were passed upon without opposition.

The magnates will leave to-day for Chicago to take part in a joint meeting with the American League Thursday.

Behind the placid scene of this dullest of National League meetings was an undercurrent of opposition to proposals from the minors regarding the draft and the disposition of minor league franchises. The American League may do what it likes, but the older major circuit will not deal with the West Baden committees from the National Association.

"We have made our offer about the draft, and it is a generous one. We have no need to be represented at West Baden," the club-owners here said. Committees of the minor leagues will meet at the Indiana Springs January 10 to discuss the draft, and to propose that all major leagues give up their minor league franchises within three years.

HOCKEY EXECUTIVE TO HOLD CARNIVAL

Considerable Business Discussed at Meeting of Campbellford Hockey Executive.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 12 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).— There was considerable business done at the meeting of the local hockey executive held at eight o'clock Monday evening. The members present were: G. A. Ironside, Wilbert Robers, L. H. Stover, Dr. S. L. O'Hara, Charles Holmes, Perry Saunders and B. H. Beatty. A point which came up for considerable discussion was the advisability of holding a carnival early in the season. It was pointed out that the first game of the season was scheduled to be played in Campbellford on the night of February 2nd, and with this in mind, the executive thought it a good plan to start the season off with a rush by staging a carnival on the eve of the New Year. Before the meeting closed, this date was definitely decided upon, and a committee of three formed to make necessary arrangements. The committee consisted of G. A. Ironside, L. H. Stover and Wilbert Rogers. They were given power to add to their numbers.

The duties of the different officers were detailed in full. Some time was devoted to discussing whether or not to sell season tickets for the home games of the schedule. There are eight of these games. Before any definite conclusion could be arrived at, it was found necessary to interview the owner of the arena, Charles H. Davidson. Suggested changes in the penalty boxes and sub. players' boxes met with a similar fate. It was suggested that these be placed on the same side of the rink instead of on either side, as they are at present, and possibly to have netting stretched in front of them. The executive also wish to have the boxes made wider in order to allow the players to pass each other more easily, and higher with an idea of added warmth for resting players. The goal nets will be repaired and altered to meet the requirements of the latest rules and other minor details were arranged. It is expected that when the playing season gets started, the team will take the ice with everything possible to help them make a good showing.

MAROONS DEFEAT DETROIT COUGARS

Losers Score First Goal, But Montreal Overcomes Lead To Win.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12.— (Canadian Press.)—The Montreal Maroons held their position at the top of the Canadian section of the National Hockey League by scoring a 2 to 1 victory over Jack Adams' Cougars from Detroit here last night. The loss shoved the visitors out of a tie for first place in the American section, as the New York Rangers, with whom the Cougars had been tied, defeated Toronto at Madison Square Garden.

Jimmy Ward's goal midway through the third period on Dutton's pass-out settled the issue in favor of the Marcons. The teams each scored one in the first period, while the middle frame was scoreless. Hay opened the scoring when he beat Benedict two minutes after the start on a pass-out from Herbert Lewis. Less than eight minutes later Hicks tied it up for the locals on a lone effort, getting his own rebound past Dolson. It was Hicks' first goal in major league hockey.

Detroit—Goal, Dolson; defence, Noble and Traub; centre, Lewis; wings, Cooper and Hay; subs, Aurie, Connors, Herberts, Fraser and Brophy.

Montreal—Goal, Benedict; defence, Siebert and Dutton; centre, Smith; wings, Ward and Stewart; subs, Lamb, Phillips, Trottier, Robinson, Hicks and Oatman

Officials — Dr. Jerry Laflamme, Woodstock, and Bobby Hewitson, Toronto.

The Summary:

First Period.

1. Detroit, Hay (Lewis). 2.08.
2. Montreal, Hicks, 7.32.

Second Period.

No score.

Third Period

3. Montreal, Ward (Dutton) 10.26.

Penalties—First period, Dutton and Smith; second period, Noble, Aurie, Ward, Siebert and Phillips; third period, Noble, Cooper and Fraser.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F.D.C.

Less than twenty-four hours after their return from their strenuous Parry Sound trip, and after travelling 500 miles and going for 36 hours without sleep, the Peterborough team of 1906 found itself in action on the night of March 2 with the Goderich team, western intermediate winners.

The first game of the finals was played at Brock street rink, which was jammed until the wall threatened to bulge out, until after half time it looked as if the Petes were up against it at last for the westerners packed their defence with the point player acting as a second goal keeper and the rover as a second cover point and, although they were in possesion of the rubber most of the time the Peterborough crew could not break through for goal. At half time the score was 1-1 and chances of a Peterborough victory looked far from rosy.

In the second half, however, the Petes succeeded in drawing out the Goderich defence and with their combination working perfectly swept in for nine goals and finally won the game 10 to 3.

The Goderich sailors were bigger and heavier than the Petes but lacked the speed and cleverness of the winners.

Cavanah scored the only Peterborough goal in the first half, while McDonald found the net for Goderich. In the second half the Peterborough scorers were Cavanah 3, Whitcroft 2, Morgan 2, Graham and Glover.

The second game was played in Goderich on Tuesday, March 6, and while the Petes were nosed out 5 to 4 and thus suffered their only defeat of the season they captured the round and championship by a margin of six goals. In fact if they had received strict justice the final game would also have been a victory for the Petes who contend that Goderich scored twice on offsides while a goal fairly scored by the new champions was not allowed.

The Sailors' hopes ran high at half time for the Goderich team were leading 4 to 0 and were only three goals down on the round. In the second half the fighting Petes got going. Crowley started the scoring by finding the nets with a nice shot and Morgan added two more. Then Glover went the length of the rink to beat McIver with the Petes' fourth goal while he also found the nets again only to have the Goderich goal umpire disallow the score. Meanwhile the Sailors scored but one more goal and the game ended 5 to 4.

The excitement was not yet over, however, for some of the Goderich fans, incensed at the defeat of their favorites attempted to mob the Peterborough players at their hotel and thus the legend is handed down of how Eugene Hurtubise the Petes' big trainer, held the hotel stairway as Horatius of old held the bridge. Gene was armed with a bag of hockey sticks and there is no record of any of the assailants reaching the second floor.

The line up:

To-morrow—The Peterborough-All Star game of 1906.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

BABY ELEANOR, STAR OF THE "OUR GANG" COMEDIES WILL DO A CLEVER ACT, AT THE CAPITOL ON THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY. "CAPTAIN SWAGGER" WITH ROD LA ROCQUE AND SUE CAROL THE SCREEN FEATURE. 6

The personal appearance of Baby Eleanor, star of "Our Gang" Comedies at the Capitol Thursday, Friday and Saturday, will prove a real treat for Capitol patrons. Baby Eleanor is one of the cleverest child actresses on the stage. She does a very clever singing, talking and dancing act, with numerous character changes. Her father, Mr. O'Hara, works with her on the stage while her mother looks after her wardrobe. Baby Eleanor will appear at all performances afternoon as well as evening.

The feature screen attraction in addition the The Collegians will be "Captain Swagger", with Rod La Rocque and Sue Carol in the leading roles.

In the earlier sequences of this story, the handsome and popular star is seen to excellent advantage as an expert in tailspins and nose dives, who does his part to make the world safe for Democracy as a flyer with the Lafayette Escadrille. He believes airplanes will be common as automobiles in the near future.

So interesting did Rod find his excursions into the air during the making of the picture that he has continued the practice since that time. He purposes to purchase a plane as soon as his picture contract gives him time to indulge in this sport to a great extent.

Sue Carol plays opposite La Rocque in this exciting story, which brings in the war zone of France and reaches a dramatic climax in the night clubs of New York. As Rod's war-time mechanician and peace-time valet, Victor Potel provides some rare comedy scenes, while Ulrich Haupt and Richard Tucker have other important roles.

AT THE REGENT.

Positively Last Chance to see "The Port of Missing Girls." A Startling, Sensational, Gripping Picture.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday. BIG CAST, COLORFUL SETTINGS, THRILLING COMEDY SITUATIONS IN JOHNNY HINES' SPECIAL

Johnny Hines' latest First National Picture, "Chinatown Charlie," produced by C. C. Burr, which has been declared by New York and Hollywood critics to be the comedian's biggest and funniest production to date, has been secured for the Regent Theatre Thursday and is expected to draw capacity audiences.

"Chinatown Charlie" is a screen adaptation of the famous old melo-comic extravaganza from the pen of the prolific playwright, Owen Davis, and it scored a great success on the speaking stage at the time "McFadden's Flats" was on the boards. The film adaptation of the picture has been treated in a highly humorous manner, burlesquing New York's underworld, and at the same time retaining the thrills of the original play.

Producer C. C. Burr secured a large cast of comedians to surround his star in the production, with Louise Lorraine playing the leading role. Others figuring prominently in the large cast are Anna May Wong, Harry Gribbon, Sojin, Scooter Lowry, George Kuwu, Edna May, Fred Kohler, Fred De Silva, Emmet Wagner, Jack Burdette, Jack Carlyle, Rolf Sedan, Betty Egan, Billy Tayo, Joy Lynn and Alyce Richards.

An added feature is the appearance of the famous Mazzetti Troupe of acrobats who take part in the Chinese cabaret scenes, and also furnish a sensational thrill by forming a human bridge from one second storey window to another across a Chinatown street. Louise Lorraine and the comedian effect their escape from a Chinatown den on this human bridge.

The settings of "Chinatown Charlie" are declared to be the most elaborate ever built for a Johnny Hines Picture. When the comedian was in New York he photographed actual scenes in Chinatown, and then had a reproduction of the winding streets, resorts and rabbit warrens built at the studio. The action begins in New York's Times Square, where Johnny Hines is a guide on a sight-seeing bus taking a party through Chinatown. It is when he reaches the Chinese quarters that sequences of a thrilling nature begin to happen.

CHURCH HOCKEY LEAGUE MEETING

Election of Officers Will Take Place On Friday Evening at Y.M.C.A.

The Church Hockey League will meet at the Y.M.C.A. Friday night at seven o'clock to make plans for the coming season. An election of officers will be one of the important parts of the business and constructive plans will be made for a most successful season.

The Church League is one of the best training grounds for young players and teaches the true ideas of clean sportsmanship and it is hoped that there will be a large number of representatives of the churches throughout the city present at the first important gathering.

VIEWS ON SPORT

To-day work began on a new covered rink for Madoc, which will have a seating capacity of 1,500 to 2,000.

The Church Hockey League is calling a meeting for Friday evening at the Y.M.C.A., and plans will be made for the season.

* * * * * *

The building of a large covered rink at Madoc will put that district on the same plane as Lakefield in hockey and as a sporting centre. These covered rinks are used for a variety of purposes, and soon become a community centre.

* * * * * *

The rinks are going up at the Public Schools, and soon all the boys will be carrying their shinny sticks to school with them. The Public School Hockey League always gives the youngsters a chance to play in organized games, and "How those youngsters do play."

* * * * * *

"Bobby" Robinson, of Hamilton, has been appointed temporary secretary of A.A.U. of C. to replace Dr. A. S. Lamb, who has withdrawn from the union, following the convention at Port Arthur. The convention ended friendly after all the grievances had been fully aired, and Canada will now step with a strong executive at the helm of sports.

* * * * * *

"Stuffy" Mueller, goal tender and member of the Varsity Grads team, will mind the nets for the St. Michael's Hockey Club. The St. Mike's is a famous club in hockey circles, and this year has resumed playing in the O.H.A. after many years' absence, and all indications point that they will have a strong team.

* * * * * *

It has been rumored that Percy Williams was going to turn professional, but this has been flatly denied by the runner. Williams is only young, and it is hoped that he will be able to run for Canada at the Olympic Games of 1932 to be held in Los Angeles.

"Good ball players are hard to get" is the lament of the managers of the National League. All commented on the tightness of the ball player market and the scarcity of good material.

REPORT SHOWS COMMISSION HAS HAD PROSPEROUS YEAR

Board Indicates Its Desire To Carry On Program.

NEW RULE BOOK

Will Open Camp For Instruction of Boys Next Summer.

TORONTO, Dec. 12.—The Ontario Athletic Commission held its annual meeting at its offices, 15 Queen's Park, yesterday afternoon, with the following present: Chairman, T. A. Murphy, Toronto; Vice-Chairman, H. I. Price, Toronto; M. M. Robinson, Hamilton; T. A. McGinnis, Kingston; and Secretary J. P. Fitzgerald.

After reviewing the year in the reports of the Chairman and Secretary, it was plain that the Commission enjoyed the most prosperous year since taking office. They had a greater income, secured splendid results from the coaching of school boys, branched out into the helping of team games, and, in a word, were able to extend a helping hand where heretofore they had not been able to do so because of lack of funds.

Last year the Commission was able to send out five coaches, three of them teachers qualified in athletics, and purposes pursuing the same policy next summer.

Toward Permanent Camp.

The forward step in the work of the Commission in its coaching is foreshadowed in the decision to open a camp for a month next summer. This camp will be distinctively a Commission one, and the best boys at the various district games throughout the Province will be taken to this camp at the expense of the Commission, and will be given advantage of training under the best coaches available. It will not, however, be limited to these fortunate boys, but will be open to any wishing to go there at their own expense, and also to any teachers.

This is to be the first step in the formation of a permanent camp, and it is the intention to have this summer at least a track laid. Tents may have to be used for the housing of the athletes this year, but it is the intention to erect permanent houses later on.

The location of this camp has not yet been decided on, but it will be within easy reach of Central Ontario and away from any city. It is hoped that the Hon. Mr. Finlayson of the Department of Lands and Forests, who is very sympathetic with the idea, will be able to locate a suitable site from some of the lands held by the Ontario Government. This idea is decidedly the most forward move yet made by this or any other Commission, and the results should be immeasurably better than any yet secured. The matter was placed in the hands of Messrs. Murphy and Price, who will report progress next month.

For Athletes' Guidance.

Perhaps, next to this advance movement in importance was the task given Mr. Robinson. He was commissioned to compile a "Book of Instructions and Rules" covering the whole field of sport as applicable to the boy in the school. This work will be complete in instructions as to training, methods of getting the best results in track and field work; rules of the games most played in the schools; records; in fact, a complete and much-needed compendium of sport for the boy and the man. It is an ambitious work, but it is in capable hands, and should, when completed, be decidedly the handiest volume ever placed in the hands of an athlete.

The matter of the delimitation of districts and the formation of new districts was placed in the hands of the several Commissioners. Mr. Murphy will look after Toronto, Cobourg and North Bay districts; Mr. Price, Georgian Bay and Northern Ontario; Mr. Robinson, Hamilton and Niagara Peninsula; Mr. McGinnis, Eastern Ontario; and Mr. Womey, Western Ontario. Deputies to work under the supervision of the Commissioners will be named to promote and foster the work of the Commission in the centres that are without Commissioner. These districts and their centres will be defined before the end of next month.

AERONAUTIC WORK TO BE DESCRIBED

Professor J. H. Parkin is to Address Engineering Institute on Thursday Night.

The next meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada will be held in the Chamber of Commerce Rooms, at 8.30 p.m., Thursday, December 13th. The speaker will be Professor J. H. Parkin, Assistant Professor of Mechanical Engineering, University of Toronto. Professor Parkin will speak on the Aeronautic Work at the University of Toronto.

In view of the recent rapid advances in aviation, this paper should be of particular interest not only to members but to the public at large. Visitors will be welcome.

Prior to the meeting two films of topical subjects which have been loaned by the C.P.R. will be shown. This will commence at 8 p.m.

COLLEGIATE NOTES

The first regular meeting of the Peterborough Collegiate Literary Society was held in the new auditorium on Friday afternoon. President Howden occupied the chair and the newly formed P.C.I. orchestra, composed of seventeen pieces and directed by Arnold Spencer provided the music.

The president in his opening remarks greeted all present and thanked H. R. H. Kenner, the principal who so willingly gave the opportunity to the students to hold the meeting. He also invited all the students to co-operate and make the annual "At Home" which will be held on Friday, December 28th, the best ever.

The program opened with Hedley Vickers leading the student body in the school yell after which followed an excellent musical program. The orchestra played, "In A Monastery Garden" after which Robert Wyllie favored the audience with a violin solo.

The Four Horsemen, so called, consisting of Allen Heidemann, Scott Medd, Kenneth McCannon and Reginald Storey at thfie piano sang the old familiar melody, "Just A Song At Twilight" and for an encire "Show Me the Way To Go Home." Miss Irene Foster played two instrumental numbers and then an instrumental trio followed consisting of Donald Green, violinist; Jack Thackeray, cellist and Miss Mildred Morphet at the piano.

Gordon Roper demonstrated his ability as a cartoonist and Harold Wilson favored the school with a cornet solo. The last selection on the program was "Al and His Gang" or "The Harmonic Three" and for an encore Allan Heiderman played and danced the Highland Fling.

SEE CANADA FIRST.

The twin coastal cities, Vancouver and Victoria, at this time of the year appeal with endless charm to the holidaymakers, wanderers, and tired business men and women, for the weather is ideal and the foliage in the gardens and parks of wondrous color. Not a day passes, too, but sees the twelve golf courses gay with happy and enthusiastic players, while riding in the early mornings and afternoons is particularly favored. There are splendid motor highways on Vancouver Island, and innumerable ones running into Vancouver City from all directions. The winter season's attractions include theatres and concerts of the highest calibre, while the Hotel Vancouver at Vancouver and the world-renowned Empress at Victoria are the centres of the social and commercial activities of the two cities and districts. During the winter the Canadian Pacific Railway operates the only through train to Vancouver from Toronto. The "Vancouver Express" leaves the Union Station every night at 9.00 and reaches the coast four days later. Comfortable and convenient connections can be made with all western points by using this famous train.

Cascara is Your Doctor's Choice

When physicians pronounce cascara the PERFECT laxative—why experiment with things that lash the system into action? Cascara you know, is the bark of a tree. A natural and normal stimulus to the bowels.

The Indians, who used to chew this bark, had no word in their language that meant "constipation"!

Perfect regularity is possible today, and to all of us. We have cascara in ideal form; the very delightful-tasting candy Cascaret gives us pure cascara. It has helped at least a million people to habitual regularity. Millions of others, unfortunately, have stuck to stronger things and acquired only the laxative habit.

Your first Cascaret will demonstrate how THOROUGH this gentle laxative is, after all. Your next surprise will be the length of time before you need another. Eventually, you'll see that cascarizing tends to make the bowels move thereafter of their own accord!

A modern drugstore must stock many laxatives, but for you own good the druggist would rather have you ask for the inexpensive little box of Cascarets than anything else.

Sanitary Inspector Reports Two Cases of Measles in City.

ONE OF CHICKEN POX.

"As sure as we tell you fellows that we have a clean slate, something crops up right away," declared the City Sanitary Inspector, Charles S. Stapleton, to The Examiner this morning. "About the end of November, I stated that there were but two cases of typhoid fever, and they were both confined to the Isolation Hospital. Since then one case of chicken pox and two cases of measles have materialized.

"Placards have been posted for the last three, and the chicken pox case confined in the Isolation hospital as well," he concluded.

TRUE BILL IS RETURNED to the great fight the King was staging for his life, and the sympathy it had aroused in the hearts of every member of the British Empire.

"I speak with almost bated breath when I say it. We here in Canada boast of many things; we boast we are Canadians, and properly so, and we boast, too, that we are part and parcel of the British Empire, subjects of His Majesty King George V. It has been borne in upon us very strongly to-day, and has been for the past two or three weeks, that our beloved King, His Majesty King George is fighting for his life; whether he is going to be taken from us I do not know, but he is going through and the Empire is going through a very serious crisis. Some of us who are older, perhaps you do not all remember the time of Queen Victoria's death; it looked as if there was a revolution in the world we were living in, because she had been there so long, so dignified, so beloved, she was looked upon as an institution that could not depart; she went, and was succeeded by her son King Edward VII., who did more for the peace of the world and for the dignity and prestige of the British Empire than any man ever did in all history. He was accompanied during his reign, all to short, by Queen Alexandra, the best beloved woman that Britain ever had and was succeeded by their son King George V., a man who has done his duty, a constitutional monarch of the very first order, who perhaps without all the diplomatic skill of his father, as to that I do not know; but he has always been safe, sane and sensible; he is beloved and properly beloved, and our hearts all go out to him and his, and to-day we pray as we sometimes sing, 'God Save the King'."

The Grand Jury retired to hear the evidence in the case of the Crown vs. James Webber at 1.30, and returned a true bill at 4.25.

IN POLICE COURT

If reports were authentic, William Drain, until recently employed at Colborne, sat before Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning while his inner man struggled with the foreign problem of ground glass. Drain was charged with having attempted to commit suicide at Havelock on December 11, by swallowing ground glass, and through his counsel asked a remand until Friday morning, without electing or pleading.

A resident of South Monaghan pleaded guilty to being intoxicated in a public place and was fined $15.00 and costs. "You will find that it isn't the old days when a fellow could get tight for $2.00," observed the Magistrate.

Garnet Inkpen, of this city, was fined $2.00 and costs for driving without proper lights on Lock street south.

When John Stronach of Toronto entered hastily an half hour or more late for his appointment with the magistrate, counsel for the complainant and for the defense breathed easier, as disconcerting thoughts of his having broken bail were ended. He had been allowed his freedom last night, to appear in court this morning. The charge he faced was a disconcerting one to meet—of procuring lodging for himself and a woman he falsely declared to be his wife, at the Lakeshore House, in the township of Otonabee. The woman's husband, Harry L. Switzer, also of Toronto, had laid the charge, being represented by J. E. Pritchard of the firm of Miller and Hunter of Toronto.

The Magistrate was plainly annoyed at his late arrival, and said so; but allowed an adjournment until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Shortly after two o'clock, the case went on, Stronach pleading guilty. One witness was called, namely, the wife of the proprietor of the Lakeshore House at Hiawatha, and also Stronach himself.

Magistrate O. A. Langley stated, in imposing a fine of $100 and costs, that the Ontario Statutes did not indicate just how far the immoral side should be considered, being chiefly concerned with the prevention of false registrations. He believed, however, that some account should be taken of the other side of the matter.

The meeting was held at half past six o'clock in the Assembly Hall of the Sunday school, where lunch was served by ladies of the Co-Workers' Bible Class.

Owing to the illness of the president, C. S. Thompson, the chair was taken by the vice-president, J. E. Smith. Reports were heard from various committees.

The president in his report outlined the work of the organization, consisting in creating a social atmosphere among the men of the church, sponsoring the church's picnic, holding meetings at the Protestant Home, conveying the aged to and from church on several occasions and helping the ladies in distributing Christmas cheer. He also briefly outlined the programs of meetings held by the society.

The secretary, T. Pratt, gave a more detailed report of the year's efforts and a financial report was presented by B. Allen, showing an increase over last year in the balance on hand. Dr. J. E. Middleton reported on the literary work of the organization and Rev. Dr. A. I. Brown on church work. L. M. Richardson, reporting on the membership, stated that there were 53 members and that he hoped this number would be raised to at least 100 by the end of 1929.

I am very anxious to find out if there has been, or is a family living in Peterborough by the name of Samuel O. Thompson or Mrs. C. G. Thompson. The Samuel O. Thompson must have lived there twenty-five years ago.

I wonder if you could possibly find out and immediately let me know I have a stamped envelope enclosed. I am more than anxious to know for it means much.

Wedding Bells

McBRIDE—THOMPSON.

Miss Ruth Graham, younger daughter of Mr. C. A. Thompson, of Lindsay, Ontario, was married to Mr. Douglas Luton McBride, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald J. McBride, of Lindsay, on Saturday afternoon, in St. Paul's Church, Lindsay. Rev. Canon Marsh officiated. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory Salome velvet gown, period style, made with long, tight sleeves and close-fitting bodice, with shirrings, the skirt very full and long, and the train falling from the waist lined with shell pink georgette. Her veil of old Limerick lace, fashioned in Juliet cap effect, caught at each side with clusters of orange blossoms fell gracefully over tulle, the latter extending beyond her train. She carried a shower bouquet of Columbia roses and lily of the valley. Miss Jessie Thompson, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, in orchid chiffon, the tiered skirt forming an abbreviated train, velvet girdle with large bow and brilliant buckle at one side. She wore an orchid velvet hat and carried an arm bouquet of Sunset roses and violets. The flower girl, little Miss Dorothy Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Lloyd Wood, Jr., was frocked in orchid chiffon, with frills around the neck and skirt, the latter having clusters of French flowers in her hair and carried an old-fashioned nosegay. The best man was Mr. Arthur Graham Thompson, of Toronto, brother of the bride, and the ushers were Dr. Leonard Shier, of Lindsay, and Mr. Gordon K. Watson, of Toronto. The church was decorated with orchid chrysanthemums and pots of primulas and ferns, and the chancel was banked with palms, ferns, and primulas.

CHURCH SOCIETY ELECTS OFFICERS

Christmas Shower Held By Members of St. John's Women's Auxiliary.

The monthly devotional and business meeting of St. John's W.A. was held on Tuesday in the drawing room of the Parish House at 3 p.m., with the president, Mrs. A. W. Turner, in the chair. The devotional exercises were conducted by the Vicar, Dr. R. C. Biagrave. There was the customary large attendance. After the usual routine business, the election of officers for the year 1929 took place. Another very interesting feature of this, the last meeting before Christmas, was the Christmas shower of good things from the members, which were very tastefully decorated in honor of the festive season, to be sent to permanent shut-in members of the society. After the members' prayer and benediction, afternoon tea was served by the refreshment committee, with Mrs. H. Leeming in charge.

BASKETBALL TEAM HOLDS WORKOUT

Western Clock To Field Strong Outfit in Girls' League.

Last night the gymnasium of the Y.W.C.A. was the scene of a snappy workout when the girls composing the entry of the Western Clock Company in the Girls' Basketball League had the first of their weekly workouts. Some splendid material was disclosed and the manner in which the girls flashed the ball around the gym gives promise of many stiff games for any opponents. Nearly all of last year's players will be available again this year and with the addition of some new faces there is great promise of a real flashy team that will make a mark in the league.

The next practice will be held on Friday night at 7.30 instead of Monday night as on the latter evening the gym will be occupied by the great Christmas entertainment which the "Y" has planned.

For grief often dwells where it seldom is seen.
Many a day her name is spoken,
And many an hour she is in our thoughtz;
A link in our family chain is broken,
'Cause Violo is gone from our home, but not from our hearts.

BOLIVIAN YOUTHS VOLUNTEER FOR SERVICE WITH COLORS; AWAITS MOVE FROM PARAGUAY

Both Countries Reply To Settlement Plea of Geneva Council.

LEAGUE AWAITS ANSWER.

Paraguay Recognizes Country's International Obligations To Settle Dispute.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Dec. Dec. 13 (Canadian Press). — Offers of men, munitions, and other aids to warfare continued to rush in upon the Bolivian government to-day. The government on its part appeared to be marking time, awaiting a move from Paraguay on the demand for "prior reparation" for the frontier class at Fort Vanguardia.

Youths throughout the entire republic seized with war fever, were volunteering in thousands and the military authories were rejecting their services. In La Paz alone 15,000 volunteers have offered to join the colors.

A committee of conscripts sent a notice to the government pleading that they be enrolled and sent to the disputed territory of Chaco. They said that their lives were insignificant before the peril which hung over territorial integrity.

Reply to Note

Paraguay and Bolivia have replied to the appeal from the council of the League of Nations for Pacific settlement of the dispute between them. League officials said to-day that the Paraguayan reply recognized that country's international obligation to settle the conflict by Pacific methods. The Bolivian foreign minister cabled that the council's appeal had been submitted to the president of Bolivia.

Awaits Answer

Council of the League of Nations to-day had under advisement communication from Paraguay and Bolivia and was waiting further messages regarding the League's appeal for amicable settlement of boundary dispute between two republics.

Paraguayan foreign minister declared that Paraguay would accept and fulfill her international obligations and charged that Bolivia had refused to take part in the plan for summoning a commission to avoid a conflict. The Bolivian reply said matter had been submitted to the president of the republic and further reply would be sent.

1,500 Christmas Trees Shipped From Manvers

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Dec. 13—A carload of Christmas trees, fifteen hundred being in the lot, was shipped to a dealer in Toronto on Saturday, the trees, six feet or so in height, having been cut from the swamp in Manvers, shipment being from Manvers Station. H. Lord and W. Budd have had the task of cutting the trees, and drawing them to the roadside whence they were carted to the station for loading, and sending on to their destination in the Queen City.

So far as is known this is the first time that trees for this purpose have been cut and shipped from this vicinity in such quantities. There were a few hundred trees, necessary to complete the order, left over until this week when they are being cut and will be shipped as soon as possible.

PRECEDENT TO BE FOLLOWED

Prince of Wales Would Likely Take Name of Edward Or George.

DAVID SUGGESTED.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 13. — (By Henry Somerville, Special Cable Copyright).—Questions which anticipate the death of the King recall to many here the protest made by Queen Elizabeth against those who would dig her grave while she was alive. It may be intimated, however, that the period of three months' deep mourning, customary on the death of a monarch, would not be curtailed in the unhappy event of a fatal termination to His Majesty's present illness.

As regards the name to be chosen by the new king nobody anticipates any departure from the English precedent such as would be involved in the name of King David 1. Edward VII was called Albert Edward when he was Prince of Wales, but Albert was only a compliment to the Prince Consort, his father, and it was dropped in favor of Edward, the name of former English kings. On his accession to the throne, the present Prince of Wales undoubtedly will take the name of Edward or George.

GARBAGE MAN IS SUING TOWN

John T. Pearce Only Held the Position Nine Days in Port Hope.

ASKING $800.

(Special to The Examiner.)

COBOURG, Dec. 13.—When John T. Pearce, Jr., was appointed garbage collector by the Port Hope Council, he had visions of at least a year's engagement. But the job lasted an embarrassingly brief nine days, and because of certain financial commitments, he has sued the town for $800 and costs.

Mr. Pearce's claim states that he was regularly appointed garbage collector on May 9, 1927. On May 10, he hired an assistant for a year at a salary of $50 a month, with free house and garden. The next date in his diary was May 16, when he actually began garbage collecting and then on the 25th of that same month he was dismissed.

Pearce alleges that he paid $275 to his assistant by way of compensation for unlawful termination of his services which were to have been for a year. Pearce had about eighty pigs which were to have fattened on the garbage, but, he says, he had to dispose of them quickly and actually sold them below cost. Hence his suit for $800 and the costs of the action, which was adjourned by Judge O'Connor on Tuesday, until January 23.

Leaps From Airplane

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 13.—James Collins, civilian test pilot for the Curtiss Company, joined the Caterpillar Club, made up of men who have jumped from aircraft by parachute, when he leaped from a disabled Curtiss fighting plane this afternoon near Bolling Field while trying it out for the navy. He landed safely. The plane was completely demolished.

During a full-power, vertical dive at a height of nearly 6,000 feet, the wings of the plane were torn away, the descent being so rapid that 3,000 feet were traveled before Collins could get out. He was unable to explain just what had happened, but it was believed that a strut collapsed.

BROTHERS END FEUD OVER GIRL

Had Been Quarrelling for Thirteen Years Over Some Lady.

MURDER AND SUICIDE

NEW YORK, December 13 (Canadian Press). — A long-standing feud between two brothers over a girl ended early to-day in murder and suicide. The brothers, Robert Ricker, 43, and William, 39, made their home with two sisters, who told the police that they had been quarrelling for thirteen years over a girl, whose affections William accused his brother of alienating.

The quarrel was renewed to-day, and the sisters, fearing violence, hurried for the police. When they arrived they found William with two bullet wounds." Robert admitted the shooting and collapsed when placed under arrest. It was found he had taken poison. Both died shortly after.

Prince George (upper right) sailed yesterday from Bermuda, where he is stationed with the British fleet, and will sail from New York on the Benengaria on Friday. He will reach England on Dec. 20, his 26th birthday. NOVELTY SHOPS NOT AFFECTED BY CITY'S CLOSING BY-LAW

Metropolitan and Woolworth Stores May Remain Open in Evenings.

CHIEF MAKES STATEMENT.

Law Permits Other Businesses To Keep Open Four Nights Before Christmas.

Indicating that certain novelty shops are quite within their rights in remaining open in the evenings, despite protests from other merchants, the views of Chief of Police S. Newhall shed an interesting light on the matter.

In an interview with the Chief Constable this morning, regarding many complaints received regarding the Metropolitan Company's store on George Street remaining open, The Examiner reporter was quoted the law as laid down in Chapter 375, section 12, page 3482, Volume 3, of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, which reads as follows: "A shop in which trades of two or more classes are carried on, shall be closed for the purpose of all such trades during the hours on which it is, by any such by-law, required to be closed for the purpose of that one of such trades which is the principal trade carried on in such shop."

"Therefore, off-hand, it appears to me," said the Chief, "that the sale of novelties being the principal trade of the stores in question by long odds, they do not come under the closing by-law relating to drygoods stores.

"It was intimated to me that some of the drygoods merchants were going to allow their stores to remain open in order to compete with the above-named company. If they do so, it will be at their own risk, as the drygoods by-law only allows them to remain open four nights before Christmas, the first of which nights would be Wednesday, December 19."

Asked if such stores as those of the F. W. Woolworth Company, Routley's and other novelty companies would come under the same category as the Metropolitan Store, the Chief replied in the affirmative.

McMILLAN WINS ACTION

Jury Allows Plaintiff the Sum of $300 In County Court Case.

APPEAL EXPECTED.

In the case of Thomas McMillan vs. Harvey Wallace in which McMillan was suing for $400 the jury retired at 12.30 an dat 2.30 came out with their verdict that McMillan should be paid $300 damages and each pay their own costs. The judge asked if they had found the negligence evenly divided and if that were the reason that they had divided the cost in such a way. The foreman said that they hadn't settled about the negligence and asked that the jury be retired again. Some 45 minutes later they again entered the court room only to be again retired because they had missed the point regarding the placing of the negligence. Later they returned with the final verdict favouring Thomas McMillan and granting damages to the extent of $300 and placing all the negligence on the defendant Harvey Wallace.

J. A. O'Brien acted for the plaintiff and Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., for the defendant. It is expected that the case will be appealed.

40 Year Old Revenge Is Cause Of Shooting

CARBONDALE, Illinois, Dec. 13 (Canadian Press).—Revenge for a killing forty years ago, is believed to have been the motive for the shooting of J. C. Hudley, wealthy pioneer and former Mayor of Carbondale and his wife at midnight yesterday. The two were shot to death in their home. Hudley once killed a music teacher, for holding a tryst with his first wife and was acquitted on a plea of the unwritten law.

HOLD-UP MAN IS SENTENCED

William Morgan Is Given Four Years in Kingston Penitentiary.

HAD BAD RECORD.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., December 13 (Canadian Press). — William Morgan, convicted of holding up an operator at the C.N.R. Station last July was sentenced to four years in the Penitentiary in the County Court to-day. The accused denied robbery on the stand, but admitted escaping from the jail in Winnipeg in 1923 and being convicted of shopbreaking there. As James Morgan, he was sentenced to three years and lashed in Toronto for robbery while armed.

He also received two years for jail breaking, which is to run concurrently with to-day's sentence. Morgan still faces three more charges in Welland and one in Hamilton.

OLD NORMANDY IS DESCRIBED TO CANADIAN CLUB

Professor Campbell Delivers Illustrated Address On Norman Customs.

DIJON'S DARK STREETS.

Tapestry in Cathedral at Bayeux Was a Most Interesting Portrayal.

"A Trip Through Normandy" illustrated by lantern slides, was the subject of the address given yesterday afternoon in the auditorium of the Public Library to members of the Women's Canadian Club by Professor P. G. C. Campbell of Queen's University, Kingston. There was a good attendance and audience listened attentively to a very fine explanation of various scenes from old Normandy.

Professor Campbell spoke of the ugliness of "man's country" as exemplified in so many of the modern buildings, and said that it was a pity that the idea of beauty could not enter more largely into the construction of edifices of a public utility type.

"I have been admiring, in a very mild way, the addition to your Collegiate Institute nere", he remarked drily.

Typical Examples

The slides, which were managed in his usual capable fashion by V. R. Henry of the Collegiate Institute staff, were given as typical examples of the buildings of Normandy, as gleaned from pictures taken here and there during a stay in that section of France.

They depicted Norman market halls, with their high-pitched roofs and open sides, the timbered houses of the sixteenth century, "which were built with an eye to something more than a straight line and a brick wall" with their narrow fronts and their depth extending a long way back, their ornaments of wooden figures and their great height.

As the cities of medieval times were walled about with stone embattlements, it was impossible to stretch out in any direction except heavenward, so the houses were narrow and very high and extra width for each succeeding storey was gained by projections of a foot or more outward.

The Castle of Palaise, where William the Conqueror was born, was shown, with its donjon keep, sixty feet each way.

Dijon's Dark Streets

There were the dark, narrow streets of Dijon, where in olden times, the sewer traversed the middle of the road; the beautiful Gothic cathedral at Caen, favorite city of the Norman William, with its glass tower, its rounded apse and its beautiful flying buttresses; the gatehouse of the citadel, with rounded loopholes for the extension of the arquebus and the two churches of Caen, built by William and his consort, Queen Matilda, after the Pope had commanded them to erect such churches, when he released them from the terrors of excommunication after their marriage. They were related by blood and failed to secure a dispensation before the ceremony.

These two churches at Caen illustrate different types of architecture, the building erected by Matilda having been spoiled by the imposition on its towers of what the speaker called "Louis Quatorz" tops, square structures which upon irremediably the rounded lines of the edifice.

The similar type of two cathedrals erected to St. Michael, one at St. Michael's Bay in England and the other at Mont. St. Michel, Normandy, was illustrated where the monks exercised and prayed, tought their pupils and engaged in task of illuminating and transcribing old manuscripts.

Ancient Tapestry

One of the most interesting of thep ortrayals was the depiction of the ancient tapestry hanging in the Cathedral at Bayeux. This was made by Queen Matilda and her handmaidens, over a period of three to four episodes in the career of her husband, William the Conqueror, up to the time of the Battle of Hastings in 1066.

This tapestry is two hundred and thirty feet long and about two feet wide. Figures worked in colors, with explanatory sentences above their heads, show the career of the Conqueror and the many scenes of battle and strife which surrounded his life. These slides were most interesting, giving an insight into the manners and life of that day. Sixteen hundred figures, human and animal, were used in its delineation.

Four methods were used by the ancient Church, said the professor, in their efforts to impress the faithful realities of spiritual things. They depicted scenes from the Bible in their stained glass windows, in their paintings, in their tapestries, and in the sculptural ornamentation of their churches.

The final slide showed the port of St. Malo, from which Jacques Cartier set sail so long ago.

The address of the speaker was enlightening in the extreme and ap-

Second Operation Is Performed on Patient; More Fluid Removed

Three O'clock Bulletin Says That His Majesty is Making Progress—Queen and Princess Mary Take Their Afternoon Motor Drive.

PRAYERS OFFERED IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY ANXIOUS WATCHERS GATHER AT PALACE EARLY

Many Expressions of Thankfulness By Large Crowd When They Hear Royal Patient Had Considerable Periods of Sleep During Night.

LONDON, Dec. 13 (Canadian Press).—King George relieved by last night's operation for the removal of fluid from the lung was making progress to-day, it was stated authoritatively at three o'clock. Shortly before the statement was made Lord Dawson of Penn and Sir Stanley Hewett returned to the Palace to see the royal patient. Queen Mary went for a motor drive this afternoon as did Princess Mary.

Speaking at a League of Mercy meeting in St. James' Palace this afternoon, Princes Mary said: "You will be pleased to know that so far the condition of the King is satisfactory."

There were many expressions of thankfulness by those who gathered in front of Buckingham Palace this morning when inquirers were told unofficially that King George had considerable periods of sleep during the night. It was added that his condition appeared to continue satisfactory.

The news that the King had undergone two operations, the second of which was of a trying nature brought numerous anxious watchers to the Palace early in the day.

Anxiety Continues

Despite the successful result of two operations performed on King George yesterday, anxiety for him continued at Buckingham Palace to-day.

Considerable weakness mentioned in the morning bulletin, though a natural and expected result of the ordeal of yesterday was causing his doctors great concern. It was authoritatively stated that the weakness was not unduly alarming but for the next few days until it is known whether the King's strength is sufficient to overcome it, the anxiety must continue.

The feature of this morning's bulletin which struck the public as most satisfactory was the statement that His Majesty was not losing ground. The general public had anxiously awaited the physicians' morning report in fear that the surgeons' work, however necessary, might in the weakened condition of the patient have brought about a collapse.

It was not expected that the afternoon bulletin would be issued to-day as was done yesterday following the first operation.

Crowd is Larger

The crowd on hand to watch the posting of this morning's bulletin was larger than usual because of the sensation nature of yesterday's developments and widespread concern as to how His Majesty had stood the shock of the operation.

Each day at noon until further notice prayers will be said for the King in Westminster Abbey. To-day all classes and creed were present.

Department Aids Prince.

NEW YORK, December 13 (Canadian Press). — Prince George, the youngest son of the King of England, was en route to New York from Bermuda to-day aboard the British cruiser Durban to catch the Cunard liner Berengaria for England. The liner sails tomorrow.

The State Department has ordered that every facility be extended to him here to expedite his journey. The Commandant of the Third Naval District has been ordered to receive him and aid him in every way.

The cruiser is expected to arrive here late this afternoon. It is to go to Pier 56 in the Hudson River, near where the Berengaria docks, and the transfer will probably be made without the Prince setting foot on United States soil.

Sailing at midnight the liner's schedule calls for her arrival in England on December 20, the 26th birthday of the Prince. His 4,500 mile journey rivals that of his brothers, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Gloucester, who were hunting in equatorial Africa when the King's illness became serious. The Duke of Gloucester is en route on a mail steamer.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—With the heir to the Throne once more at home, the finest surgeons of the Kingdom yesterday made two desperate efforts to save the life of King George. They performed two successful operations, one in the morning and another more serious one last night.

The condition of his Majesty was considered satisfactory and the hopes of his people for his recovery are rapidly rising from the despondency of the past two critical days.

Marvellous Rally

Since last Friday the physicians had been exploring by needle and X-ray for the effusion. The infection which had been localized in the right lung, spread generally throughout the body, and this was what gave rise to the grave anxiety of the last 48 hours The King's rally last night just before the Prince of Wales completed his dramatic journey from Africa followed what doctors describe as an almost miraculous return of localized infection instead of the general infection.

The doctors seized the opportunity to begin aggressive treatment. With the morning operation successful, another was performed last evening, after which a bulletin was issued stating: "An operation on the King for drainage on the right side of the chest has been successfully performed this evening. The condition of his Majesty is satisfactory."

The fact that the King has been able to maintain his strength despite the ravages of the disease during the past three weeks was one of the principal contributing factors to the success of the operation. It could not have been carried out without the helpful determination of the King to do everything possible to get well.

Surgeon Called In

The operations last evening was performed by Sir Hugh Rigby, Honorary Surgeon to the King since 1917. He is senior surgeon at the London Hospital, and is surgeon to the Popular Hospital for accidents. He was surgeon to the household of the late Queen Alexandra, and has been surgeon-in-Ordinary to the Prince of Wales since 1923.

The operation was finished at 7.50 p.m., and the cheerful news was conveyed to the Prince of Wales and the Duke and Duchess of York who had stayed with Queen Mary during the ordeal.

The succinct medical bulletin was broadcast by radio, and was given to press representatives and posted at the Palace gates. It was signed by Sir Stanley Hewett, Lord Dawson of Penn, Sir E. Praquhar Buzzard and Sir Humphrey Rolleson, who have been in close attendance, and also by Sir Hugh Rigby and Dr. Francis S. Shipway, neither of whom had appeared in the case before yesterday.

The Prince and his brother left the Palace half an hour after the result of the operation had been made known.

NEW SYSTEM IS SUGGESTED

Attorney General Says Policing of Counties By Ontario Officers Is Likely Next Year.

WANT CO-OPERATION.

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—Legislation providing for the policing of counties by the Ontario Provincial Police under General Victor Williams is likely to be introduced at the next session of the Legislature.

Attorney-General Price stated last night that a great deal of data regarding such a system had been collected by his department of late, and, although no legislation had been framed or policy outlined as yet, he hoped to bring down an act at the session which will open the last week in January.

This legislation will be permissive in form. The Government, Colonel Price emphasized last night, desires to approach the question on a basis of co-operation rather than of coercion. "Anything that is done," he added, will make for better law enforcement all round."

At the present time the Northern Ontario districts and one or two counties are furnished "law and order" by the Provincial force. Results of the arrangement have been so satisfactory that many other municipalities, it is said, would avail themselves of the scheme if offered it. In time, it is felt, all police units of the province will be consolidated under one head.

Before the next session—at least before any legislation which the Attorney-General may have in mind is introduced to the House—a conference of county wardens and officials of the Attorney-General's department is likely to be arranged.

BOLIVIANS ARE EAGER FOR WAR FUND HAS ALREADY BEEN BEGUN TO BUY COMFORTS FOR SOLDIERS

Many Inscribe Names On Roll As Ready To Proceed To Front.

THEATRES CLOSED.

Volunteer Nurses Enrol—Argentina Said To Be Backing Nation.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, December 13. — Canadian Press. — Patriotic manifestations continued all day yesterday throughout Bolivia as the citizens rallied to the support of the foreign policy of President Siles. Offers of all kinds constantly poured into the Presidential Palace, ranging from automobiles to medical supplies and man power.

A local concern dealing in motor cars and motorcycles offered its complete stock for military use, if requested, while the League of Industrial Employees addressed a communication to the General Commander of the army requesting that its members be the first enrolled "to march to the great crusade of conquest and civilization against Paraguay."

In Sucre, the alternative Capital of the Republic, enthusiasm was evidenced by the "Book of the Soldier," where all men who wish to march on the Boreal Chaco may write their names. The Municipal Council voted to suspend all theatrical amusements in Sucre until the international situation became clarified.

Students Hold Meetings.

Here in La Paz, university students held meetings in which ardent patriotic speeches were made, while the crowds gathered in front of the bulletin boards of the newspapers anxiously scanning the latest reports with bearing on the situation.

At the local military hospital many women, young and middle aged, have enrolled as volunteer nurses, and a special class for them was started yesterday.

Hotels, restaurants and motion picture theatres have offered their net receipts for six days toward a national war fund, and other business concerns have promised to send cigarettes to the Bolivian soldiers now in the Chaco region.

A solemn campaign mass was celebrated heer to the memory of those who fell in the clash at Fort Vanguardia.

A communication from the Argentine Patriotic League addressed to President Siles, and requesting that Bolivia endeavor to avoid war ,was published here, together with the anhe begged the Argentine organization swer of the chief executive in which to consider the far-reaching effects of the Paraguayan "aggression."

GOLDEN GIZZARDS.

She recently found a gold nugget in the gizzard of a chicken she had butchered and the word was passed around that some of the other chickens may be "goldfilled" too.

OTONABEE CLUB PRESENTS PLAY

Audience Greatly Enjoyed "Too Many Husbands," Given in Keene Hall.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

KEENE, December 12. — Members of the Otonabee Young People's Club, presented their play, "Too Many Husbands," in the Town Hall on Friday evening.

The club recently bought a piano, and has been giving different entertainments for the purpose of raising the money to pay for it, and Friday night's effort was a great success. It was one of the best plays put on in Keene in recent years, every member of the cast doing his part splendidly.

The audience was kept in constant laughter at the "husbands" and their efforts to extricate themselves from toils they were continually putting themselves into. Between acts a guitar duet by Miss Minnie Edwards and A. E. Fletcher was well received and especially so was the male quartette, consisting of Roy Francis, Earl Doris, W. Fletcher and A. E. Fletcher. The club will present their play in Warsaw on December 20.

To Hold Entertainments.

Christmas entertainments are being given by the United Church Sunday School in the town hall on December 19th, and by the public school on December 21, in the town hall.

Personals.

Mr. Joseph Taylor of Detroit, is visiting his sister, Mrs. David Edwards of Keene. Mr. Taylor is recuperating from his recent illness.

Mr. Frank Brown has been appointed manager of the curling and skating rink here. If the cold weather continues there will be skating on Saturday night.

Mrs. G. S. Taylor is confined to her home through illness.

Dr. Wright and family of Barrie have moved to Keene, where Dr. Wright is taking over the practice of Dr. Walsh, who is leaving for New York, in the near future.

Mr. John McIntyre of Edmonton, Alberta, is visiting his mother on the Mill road.

Hundreds Of Wild Ducks Are Swept Over Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 13.—In the heavy fog which blanketed this district during Tuesday night and Wednesday forenoon, hundreds of ducks were swept over the falls, many of them being killed or maimed. One boy picked up 17 dead birds on the shores today. The birds were canvasbacks and bluebills. Crippled birds are to be seen in the lower river. A flock rested in the upper river last night, and apparently did not know they were being taken over the falls.

DAIRYMEN ARE HONORED AT BANQUET

One Hundred and Fifty Guests Attend Big Supper For Cheesemakers.

SPLENDID RECORD.

Roy Brown, of Stanwood, Wins Trophy With 100 Per Cent Firsts.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 13 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Though cheesemakers may be slaves to their profession during the summer season, last night they were the idols of the people when officials and friends of the industry, with their ladies, sat at table in the Parish Hall, Rear Street, for the purpose of doing honor to the men who had landed the district so high up the ladder of success of the cheese-making branch of the dairy industry. Covers were laid for one hundred and five guests and the tables were filled. Wm. B. Drury of Warkworth occupied the chair and received many warm compliments for the excellent program he had arranged. The banquet was catered for by the ladies of Christ Church. The excellence of the meal won for them glowing tribute from each of the many speakers. During the meal, music was furnished by a four-piece orchestra under the direction of A. Hazel. The program consisted of two vocal solos by John Storie, a solo by Mr. Hazel and community singing. A long list of speakers and the presentation of fifteen prizes served to round out the evening.

After honoring the King, Wm. B. Drury officially welcomed all the guests who were present. G. A. Kingston, Mayor of Campbellford, was the first speaker. He congratulated the association on the splendid turnout and the excellent meal that had been served. He was proud to know that he resided in a district which had piled up such splendid records in the dairy industry, and which could boast of such excellent factories. They were second to none, he thought. The Mayor also wished to congratulate everyone connected with the industry for the remarkable progress that had been made in the last twenty-five years, both financially and in the standard of the product. The co-operation which was practised was essential to success in any branch of life. Perhaps the best example of this was the British Empire. People were beginning to realize that town and country were closely allied. Prosperity to one meant prosperity to the other. The reverse would also be true," he said.

Miss Doherty of Brickley was appointed to officially welcome the ladies. She considered this a pleasure and also a great privilege and confined her remarks to very few words.

In Competitive Industry.

H. N. Carr, owner of the Trent Creameries at Campbellford and Keene, and president of the District Creameries Association, considered it a very high honor to be asked to speak at such a gathering, since he was engaged in a competitive industry. But he hoped that the competition was friendly. He congratulated the cheese-makers on their splendid organization, and reminded them that it was only by such associations that men realize that the other fellow is a real man just the same. Briefly, he touched on the growth of the butter industry and extended the right hand of fellowship of his industry by stating that he was sure the creamery men would be glad to co-operate with the cheese-makers and officials in any way possible that would aid in the advancement of the dairy industry in general.

W. H. Hicks, dairy instructor for Prince Edward County, said he had not come prepared to make a speech. He was very proud to be associated with the dairy industry, and particularly in this district. He had attended the recent convention in Belleville, and was glad to see that there was so much co-operation in force in the district of Campbellford. At the Belleville convention, he said, one of the speakers had claimed that the future of the dairy industry was shrouded in darkness. He did not believe this to be the case. But if it were, the light would soon be let in. The cheesemakers' association of the dairy industry was not new in Prince Edward County. It had been formed as far back as 1907, as the result of a small convention held in Picton on the thirteenth day of April, 1906. He hoped that while all the districts were making remarkably good showings, Prince Edward would make the best in 1929.

C. F. Lynn, dairy instructor from Stirling, opened a much discussed topic, though in a humorous manner, when he expressed his surprise that there were no turnips served with the banquet. He did not think that it could be truthfully said that turnips were being fed in the Campbellford district. He was pleased to see many of his old friends in the gathering. Regarding the local organization, he was sorry that it had not

RECALLS INTERESTING INCIDENTS OF PIONEER DAYS IN THIS DISTRICT

Mrs. Robert Porteous, of Millbrook, Celebrates Her Eighty-eighth Birthday.

BORN IN IRELAND.

Travelling Was Done By Ox-Cart—Winters Long and Cold.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, December 13. — Mrs. Robert Porteous, who is at present making her home in Millbrook, and who is undoubtedly one of the oldest residents in this part of the countryside, being now in her 88th year, is wonderfully bright and active considering her advanced age, and recalls many interesting incidents of pioneer days in this country.

More than 85 years ago, Ann Jane Crozier came to this country from County Fermanagh, Ireland, her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. James Crozier, settling in Manvers township, not far from Bethany, though there was scarcely even the nucleus of that village in the vicinity then.

The voyage was made by sailing vessel, and occupied six weeks and three days. A baby boy was born during the time at sea, so it was with two children in their family that Mr. and Mrs. Crozier began the heavy task of establishing their home in the virgin forest, and Mrs. Porteous, whose memory is remarkably good, recalls clearly the log "shanty," as the pioneer settlers styled their little one-roomed cabins, and the fact that bears and wolves were quite commonly seen, and indeed at night would sometimes come into the clearing round the home, even rubbing up against its one door, as though desirous of gaining an entrance.

Long and Cold Winters.

The cold was extreme, and the snow drifts many feet in depth, during the long winters of those early days, and Mrs. Porteous tells interestingly of watching her father putting the "back log" in place in the wide fireplace, other smaller logs in front of it, and the children piling on brushwood until a roaring fire was the result. Coals would remain in the morning ready to start up a fresh, hot fire for the new day's cooking and heating. She remembers, too, the big hook with the black iron pot, in which stews and soups were cooked, suspended over the flames, and also recalls her mother drawing out the red coals on the flat stone which covered the hearth, putting the bake-kettle thereon, placing more coals over its lid, and so the bread was baked.

Bunks were placed along the sides of the cabin for sleeping purposes and visitors and family alike had this accommodation. Once a surveyor was staying over night with the Crozier family while doing some survey work on the line between theirs and a neighbouring farm, and when bedtime came the mother tried to keep the little ones quiet and occupied before the fire until the guest might get into his bunk. There is a twinkle in this bright old lady's eyes as she tells, "Of course we 'keeked' once in a while and saw him pull a bright red nightcap over his head, fitting it closely by pulling the drawstrings and tying it tightly over his forehead. He caught us looking and said, 'Well, you will always remember the old man with the red nightcap.'"

Oxen, and a cart without springs, were the only means of travel, but Mrs. Porteous recalls her father carrying his grist upon his back to Taggart's mill, somewhere on the Port Hope road, to have it ground. Once when a baby sister accidentally had two fingers of her tiny hand nearly severed while with a brother a little older, who was playing with an axe-head minus a handle, the trip to Millbrook for medical attention was made in the ox-cart, and Mrs. Porteous remembers her mother saying it was harder on her than a fortnight's steady work.

Seven children were in the family, five girls, of whom one died in infancy, and two boys, and Mrs. Porteous is not only the eldest but also the only surviving member. One cannot but wonder at the amazing endurance of the hardy and courageous pioneers who, so far from neighbors, and with no chance of either doctor or nurse, living in a one-roomed log cabin with even the drinking water to be carried a considerable distance from a spring in the woods, yet reared large families of sturdy boys and girls, and lived, many of them, to a ripe old age.

MORE

Big families being the rule in those days, Mrs. Porteous tells of the log school house built not far from their farm, and how rapidly it filled with pupils, particularly in the winter

FINE ADDRESSES

A great deal of interest is being taken in the Farmers' Day which is being held in the Canadian Packing plant, George street, Peterborough and the Market Hall on Friday, December 14th. Farmers wishing to see a modern packing plant and view the actual killing and dressing of hogs should make an effort to be at the Canadian Packing plant on this day, when the killing of hogs will be in progress, and the plant will be thrown open for inspection to the farmers wishing to see same.

The afternoon program which will be held in the market hall, and will begin at 1.15 sharp, will be a demonstration of hogs and lamb packing. A demonstration will be held in parasite prevention conducted by Dr. L. Stevenson, of Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, with addresses by expert livestock men. An invitation is extended to the farmers generally, to avail themselves of this opportunity of seeing hog packing plant in operation and dealing with the actual operation which will be conducted during the day.

DIRECTORS PLAN BIG EXHIBITION

The Fair this year will be held on January 8th, 9th, and 10th, in the Market Hall, Peterborough.

The prize list will be distributed in the course of a week and exhibitors are asked to have their birds in shape for the keen competition that will exist.

Briand Expresses Satisfaction After Long Conference With Stresemann.

MINISTER SPEAKS.

LUGANO, Switzerland, Dec. 13. (Canadian Press).—Foreign Minister Aristide Briand of France last night expressed great satisfaction with the situation, after a long conference with Dr. Gustav Stresemann, on the eGneva agreement of September concerning reparations and evacuation. He added that the conversations will continue.

Before the conference the German Foreign Minister took occasion to belittle current reports that Germany is expecting early and complete evacuation of the Rhineland.

He emphasized that Germany is counting upon complete evacuation of German soil when the reparations problem has been adjusted, but remarked upon the great uncertainty as to when ad whether the reparations question would be sattisractorily liquidated.

Germany's View

He also deplored what he felt the tendency of other countries to link these two problems, which to the German mind should be disposed of as separate issues.

It was learned that the conversations of the Ministers already have touched upon the proposed creation of a Committee of Verification and Conciliation in the Rhine area, once that region is liberated of troops.

An unconfirmed report also was current that the allied powers contemplate making a gesture of the second Rhineland zone simultaneously with opening of the reparation negotiations of the committee of experts.

To Lessen Tension

Count Quinones de Leon, Spanish member of the Council, labored hard yesterday trying to discover some plan for lessening the tension between Poland and Lithuania. He had been named by the Council official reporter on this question.

That the Baltic situation has not improved became clear at yesterday's session of the Council, when Premier Waldemaras of Lithuania went to the extent of accusing Poland of nourishing aggressive intentions for the absorption of Lithuanian territory, and when Foreign Minister Zalesky of Poland told the Council that the time had now arrived for investigation of the conflict by League experts.

Canadian Tree Nuts at Royal Fair

MANY SPECIES ARE DISPLAYED

Exhibition Includes Collection Grown in Canada and Northern United States.

LARGE VARIETY

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Dec. 13.—The Fruit Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture had a varied and excellent exhibit of horticultural products at the Royal Winter Fair this season, among these being a large collection of nuts grown in Canada and the northern United States. It was in charge of Professor James A. Neilson, Extension Horticulturist for Eastern Ontario, whose headquarters are at Port Hope, in the office of the Department of Agriculture.

The display consisted of species adapted to northern areas, and included many varieties of walnuts, hickories, chestnuts, hazels, fine nuts, almonds, and other interesting but little known species. Among the specimens of interest were excellent English walnuts from the Niagara district and British Columbia; fine heartnuts from Ontario and the province on the Pacific coast; hickories from Ontario; chestnuts from the Lake Erie counties and the Niagara district; and hazels from many parts of Ontario and British Columbia.

In small jars were also displayed a large collection of varieties of the Japaneses walnuts, hickories, pecans, black walnuts, pine nuts, chestnuts and heartnuts from the Northern United States, and these formed a valuable and interesting feature of the exhibit.

Excellent Quality.

The large variety and excellent quality, of some of the specimens in this exhibit shows what can be done in our own country and the northern States, and suggests the possibility of great expansion in this hitherto practically neglected phase of horticulture. The planting of a good variety of the more hardy species would undoubtedly improve the appearance of many rural and urban homes, and would yield a highly nutritious food besides.

If the value of an exhibition may be determined by the number of people who stopped to examine it, and ask for information, this one was an unqualified success. Crowds of people could be seen at nearly all times around this display, and many folk asked for information regarding varieties for planting, and where trees could be obtained. Mr. Neilson took the names and addresses of people who were particularly interested, giving promise to send the information required. Unfortunately the memo pads containing these names were accidentally destroyed, and hence it will be difficult to fulfill all the promises made. Possibly some of these interested may read this article and again send to professor Neilson the name and address so that the information desired may yet be given.

A rather amusing incident in connection with the display of homegrown nuts at the Royal Fair lay in the lively interest of the small boys who completely cleared of several plates during the temporary absence of Mr. Neilson, whose attention was, for a brief interval, directed elsewhere. One little girl, after inquiring as to the why of the empty plates, and being informed of the boys' lapse from rectitude, summed the matter up with the remark, "Well, that doesn't say much for Canada, does it?"

Mr. Neilson had to watch his exhibit carefully when the boys were in its neighborhood, and one day said to a small marauder, "Please do not touch those nuts"; another child dragged the offender away urging, "He said 'please'"; and the tempting array was safe for that time. Evidently politeness pays both with grown folk and children, this being a practical object lesson in this regard.

SOCIETY HOLDS ANNUAL BAZAAR

Enjoyable Event Held in Basement of Millbrook United Church.

BOOTHS DECORATED

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Dec. 12.—The Ladies' Aid Society of the United Church held its annual bazaar in the church basement on Saturday afternoon, the event proving quite successful, an enjoyable social side being one of its popular features.

The decorative scheme struck a patriotic note, streamers of red, white and blue, being draped between the pillars, the same colors outlining the various booths, and a large Union Jack covering the wall space between the two windows immediately back of the platform.

The "country store", in charge of Mrs. T. H. Aiken, Mrs. W. E. Ball, and Miss Martha Earle, was just inside the entrance door, and had a variety of wares, including a big yellow pumpkin, displayed on its counter; next to it the home baking table did a good business, those selling the toothsome pies, bread, buns, cakes, etc., being Mrs. J. L. Byam, Mrs. H. A. Earle, Mrs. J. A. Brown, Mrs. Arthur Fallis. The "candy circle" was arranged on the platform, and had disposed of its tempting array of sweets long before the closing hour of the sale; Mrs. Ross Edmunds and Miss Jean Burnham attended to the customers in this section.

Across the large room was a succession of booths, with well-laden counters, some beautiful examples of needle craft being noticed in the fancy work department where Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. Cecil Hubbeard, and Mrs. G. Locke were looking after the sales; in the apron section were also many attractive materials and designs, Mrs. G. E. Burnham, Mrs. C. C. Garside, and Mrs. A. J. Henderson giving attention to the many buyers throughout the afternoon and early evening. The children's wear counter was well supplied with dainty garments, Mrs. W. W. Jones and Mrs. J. H. Might making capable "saleladies."

The usual fish-pond took the form of a Christmas tree this year, its branches, besides being gay with tinsel and ropings of red crepe paper, having an abundance of many-shaped parcels which soon disappeared once the little folk arrived at the bazaar. Mrs. W. West and Miss Burnham had charge.

Tables Decorated.

Mrs. Will Armstrong and Mrs. Wesley Brown looked after the tea-tables, which were most attractive with red runners down their entire length, candles burning in brass holders, and a fine, green vine daintily trailed across the bright crimson of the runners, and the white background of the tea cloths. The menu was of a most satisfying nature, and the tables were filled again and again once the tea hour had arrived. Among those assisting in waiting upon the guests were: Mrs. Austin Sutton, Miss Mary Widdis, Mrs. Allie Fallis, Mrs. M. Thexton, Miss Marjorie Skitch, Miss Vera Armstrong, Miss J. L. Burnham, Miss Sadie Rowland, Mrs. George Fallis, and several others.

The financial receipts were in the neighborhood of $150, and it is probable that the Ladies will hold a sale of some of the articles, which remained unsold at the closing hour, on a Saturday afternoon in the near future, choosing a store down town which will be more convenient for buyers and will save them the necessity of climbing the hill to reach the church, taking up time which some of them, apparently, could not spare when other shopping must be done while they are in the village.

Mrs. H. W. Johnston, vice-president of the Aid Society, had a general oversight of the proceedings on Saturday, welcoming the incoming customers as well as the workers, and giving advice and assistance wherever it was required.

District News.

The many friends of Mrs. I. E. Needham will regret to learn that she is seriously ill with an attack of pneumonia. Mrs. Needham had the misfortune to fall down stairs in her home last Thursday, and the subsequent nervous strain coming on top of an illness with flu has apparently developed into the present trouble. Dr. H. A. Turner is in attendance, and a nurse from Peterborough is assisting in looking after the patient who is making some progress toward recovery.

Miss M. E. Needham was called home from Toronto on Friday evening owing to her mother's illness, Mrs. (Dr.) Montgomery, of Embor, who was visiting in the city, accompanying her here for the week-end.

The local link in the chain of Haboco stores, operated by the H. J. Boyle Company Limited, was opened here on Saturday, Mr. Parkes of Campbellford, being in charge. The store has been leased from the estate of the late Alfred Leach, and was formerly occupied by J. L. Byam.

The many friends of Wilbert Belch will be glad to learn that he is convalescing satisfactorily after an operation for appendicitis at St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough.

Mrs. H. Rae and Mrs. E. Armstrong have returned after a pleasant visit with friends in Toronto last week.

Abraham Cranston, who has been with H. A. Earle for the past two or three years, has gone to Toronto to remain until after Christmas, and will then go on to Montreal where he expects to work in a rope factory.

John Pitt and his daughter, Miss Mary Pitt, left for London on Sunday, the former intending to have the advice of a specialist for a serious trouble in his right hand. It is likely an operation will have to be performed in the immediate future.

Mrs. W. Wilkinson has returned home after spending last week visiting her sisters, Mrs. C. Raines and Mrs. Gillespie at Peterborough.

F. W. Burton left on Monday for Campbellford where he will be relieving agent at the C.N.R. station for the next few weeks.

John Crocker, of the Queen's hotel, is quite ill at present, his condition being regarded as serious.

M. Johnston, a nephew of Mrs. Wilfrid Fallis, Fallis Line, was seriously injured in a motor car accident last week, and is in the hospital at Brantford near which city the accident occurred. His father, Melville Johnston, lives at Springville.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—With receipts of over 10,000 cattle this week, fresh arrivals are receiving a poor reception. Enough cattle have been acquired by abattoirs to last them over the holiday season, and commission men are advising their shippers to hold back stock.

A few good quality butchers, steers and heifers have sold for $10.50, but this is an exceptional price as bids are fully 50 cents per cwt. lower. Plain and unfinished kinds of butchers are meeting with a very draggy feeling.

Cows are selling lower by 50 cents per cwt. yesterday. Choice fat cows are bringing $8 tops, with only an odd one higher.

Bulls of all classes are practically steady, with no change seen so far in sales. Choice heavy are $7.50 to $8, and light butchers $8 to $8.50.

Trading on springers and milkers is undergoing a slump. Choice springers bring $90 to $120. Fresh milkers of choice quality sell for $75 to $90. Choice calves bring $15 to $15.50, with some fancy reaching $16. Medium from $12 down.

With a run made up of thin lambs, a decline to $11 on lamb bids is current. Packers' buyers say they have enough for selling now, without acquiring more. Some better finished lambs will bring $11.50.

Receipts—Cattle 1,292; calves 127; hogs 1,876; sheep 1,226.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 13 (Canadian Press). — Fading away of orders to buy grain went hand in hand yesterday with reported wide notice of unlikelihood of farm legislation at Washington before spring. In all the grain pits yesterday, commission house selling was on a fairly large scale, replacing the brisk buying movement which developed during the previous day.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, ¼ to ¾c net lower, with corn ½ to ¾c down; oats ¾ to ¼c off, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 7c.

According to comprehensive advices which were circulated here yesterday, many farmers are now proceeding on the basis that no farm measures will be enacted at Washington in time to affect values of this year's crops. It was asserted that as a consequence the recent movement to hold grain back on farms was no longer expected to be general, and primary receipts of all cereals are much larger than a year ago. For example, primary arrivals of wheat during three days this week total 4,725,000 bushels against 2,286,000 bushels in the corresponding period last year.

Bearish sentiment regarding wheat was increased by word of enlarged offerings of Argentina wheat to Europe. Meanwhile, export wheat business from North America yesterday amount to only 400,000 bushels, whereas Canadian country marketings of wheat so far this season have been 374,000,000 bushels, about 115,000,000 bushels more than a year ago, with 60,000,000 bushels expected yet to come from Canadian farms.

Another handicap yesterday to friends of higher prices was an unresponsive attitude which the Liverpool wheat trade showed concerning Tuesday's price upturns on this side of the Atlantic.

Current arrivals of corn yesterday were apparently ample for the demand, with 100,000 bushels sold to go into store here. Under such circumstances, the future delivery market showed signs of being tired, despite unfavorable weather for the crop movement and notwithstanding evidence that considerable amounts of corn are being disposed of to Europe. Oats were easier, sympathizing with corn.

Provisions kept about steady.

Cables, $4.86¼ to 5-16.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 13 (Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for Canadian grain here yesterday was quiet but a moderate amount of business was done with domestic buyers in cash grain at unchanged prices.

The demand for spring and winter wheat flour showed a slackening off, but values were firm.

The feature of the millfeed trade was the weaker feeling that developed for middlings and prices were reduced $2 per ton, bran and shorts were unchanged. The inquiry for standard grades of rolled oats was fair and prices were steady.

A fairly active business was done in butter and values were firmly maintained. Receipts were 110 packages.

Further weakness developed in the cheese market and prices were marked down another fraction which was attributed to the inactive demand. Receipts were 585 cases.

Prices for all grades of fresh and storage eggs were well maintained under a good demand. Receipts were 709 cases.

Beans continued scarce and many demands could not be met owing to inadequate supplies. Canadian beans were firm at $5.25 per bushel, with jobbers selling at 9½c per lb., and yellow eyes at 9c.

There was no change in the local potato situation. Prince Edward Island whites sold at 77c, and Green Mountains at 85c per 90 lbs. in bags.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Dec. 13. — The egg market here is easy on both fresh and storage. There has been some increase in fresh egg receipts, and this, coupled with an increased movement of British Columbia eggs to Toronto, has resulted in some reductions in price. Dealers yesterday were quoting as low as 53c per dozen for fresh extras, delivered, cases returned. Storage extras are moving freely, but the market is draggy, particularly for seconds. This latter grade is being pressed for sale and is offered as low as 30c on spot; even at this price they are difficult to move. Storage eggs are selling to retailers at, extras, 42c to 43c; firsts, 39c to 40c; seconds, 35c to 36c.

Commenting upon the fresh and storage egg situation in Canada, the current issue of The Egg and Poultry Market Review states in part, as follows:—

"The period of lowest fresh-egg production appears now to be definitely past and increasing receipts of fresh eggs may be expected. The extent of the increase will depend very largely on weather conditions. In British Columbia production has already reached a very heavy volume and shipments to the Prairie Provinces and the East are increasing. This is having a bearing on prices all over the country and some easiness in fresh-egg values is evident."

Butter was holding a firm position at mid-week, although no general price advance was reported in a jobbing way, as there was not enough activity on the curb market to warrant any price appreciation. Finest creamery solids were turned ovr on spot in small broken lots at a range of from 41c to 41½c per lb., with ¼c higher obtained for fancy and fresh stocks when required for immediate wants. Undergrades were being fairly well cleared at values which show very little change from early dealings.

The market for cheese continues dull and dealers do not anticipate any upward drift in movement or price trend at the present time. The volume of business passing is limited to hand-to-mouth requirements with dealers quoting at from 21¼c to 21¾c per lb. for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government-graded, delivered Toronto.

OBITUARY

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MRS. JOSEPH HERLIHEY.

KING'S WHARF, Dec. 13. — The funeral of the late Mrs. Joseph Herlihey was held from her residence on Tuesday morning to St. Luke's church, Downeyville, at 9 o'clock, where requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Gillogly, who also said the prayers at the cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs. Peter Perdue, Robert Sullivan, Martin Devine, Jr., Michael Harrington, Earl Herlihey of Emily, and Martin Devine, Jr., of Lindsay.

The late Mrs. Herlihey, whose maiden name was Mary Devine, was a general favorite with both old and young, as was shown by the numbers of spiritual bouquets covering the casket, and her sudden death was a great shock to her friends and relatives. She was born and raised here in this community and was married three years ago.

Besides her sorrowing husband, she is survived by her father, Patrick Devine, one brother, Martin, and one sister, Anna, all at home.

CHILD'S COLD WAS GONE IN JUST A FEW HOURS

Relief Began Instantly When Doctor Advised Home Use of Pleasant Hospital Method

A safe, sure method of treating colds at home—so pleasant children love it—is now being recommended by physicians as a result of its splendid record in extreme hospital cases and in home use among so many people in Peterborough and throughout the Province.

Mrs. A. H. Webster, for example, called her doctor when her son, Albert, Jr., awakened her by his harsh coughing. When the doctor arrived the child was breathing with difficulty and the thermometer showed fever. Relief began almost immediately then, when he gave double strength doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a hospital certified compound of ingredients approved by the leading clinics. In a few hours congestion had cleared up surprisingly and he ate heartily for the first time in three days. Next day he was out playing and in another day or so the cold was completely gone.

Note: See other cases—all certified by the attending physician.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral can be had at the nearest drug store. Even sick children love the pleasant taste—and doctors advise it because it is as harmless as the purest food—made of wild cherry, terpin hydrate and other ingredients which cold clinics and more than a million mothers have found to be the quickest and most effective to stop a cough and end the cold.

IS IT GOOD BUSINESS?

It is declared that municipalities which have not protected themselves by passing the necessary bylaws are powerless to prevent gas stations from encroaching not only in areas near city parks, but almost everywhere that looks like a good site from a business viewpoint.

If that is the case it would be wise for municipalities in such a defenseless position to take steps to protect themselves.

Gas stations are necessary, but there are surely some areas in every municipality from which they should be barred.

From a safety viewpoint, their presence in some sections offers obvious objections, and despite their ornate appearance and glare of lights, there is valid reason to complain of their being located in neighborhoods where they do not fit in with the surroundings.

Not only in Peterborough, but generally throughout the Province the large oil companies are grabbing off sites on main business streets and as close to the business heart of municipalities as possible.

They cannot be blamed for that; it is good business for them.

But is it good business for municipalities to be in such a position that their hands are tied so far as preventing the inroads of the de luxe gas station system is concerned?

THE MUNICIPAL SITUATION.

Considering the fact that nomination day is little over a week away, the seeming lack of interest in municipal politics is surprising.

It is true that Peterborough has never run to long civic campaigns, but usually at this stage of the game, at least, some of the prospective candidates have publicly announced their intentions.

Up to the present this year, however, there have been no declarations.

Nothing has been heard from a solitary new candidate, a condition that may indicate satisfaction with the manner in which public business has been conducted, or a general lack of interest in municipal affairs, or merely a diffidence on the part of aspirants.

Whatever may be the cause, the civic ring is still bare of hats with the election less than three weeks ahead.

Mayor Denne seems to be assured of his return for a second term by acclamation, but in spite of the present lethargy, it is not likely that the personnel of the Council, Board of Education and Utilities Commission will be completed without a contest.

In any case there is no chance of avoiding the expense of an election, as acclamation or no acclamation the opinion of the ratepayers on the gas plant purchase and Johnson Outboard Motors bylaw will have to be ascertained.

THE TOWNSHIP BOARD PLAN.

Judging by recent developments, Premier Ferguson's hope that public opinion in the rural sections of Ontario would gradually swing round in favor of his Township School Board plan, seems to have been ill-founded.

There is nothing to indicate that the proposal is gaining ground; on the contrary, it would seem that hostility toward the Premier's plan is growing rather than lessening.

At the recent convention of the United Farmers of Ontario the Township Board plan was supported by only three or four delegates.

It fared even worse at Tuesday's meeting at the convention of the Northumberland and Durham Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association when but one champion spoke and voted in support of Mr. Ferguson's policy.

The rural opposition is in striking contrast to the opinion of educationists, who almost unanimously believe that the Township Board method would do much to improve rural education and iron out many of the inequalities and weaknesses of the present method.

The attitude of the rural opponents of the plan is weakened somewhat, too, by the failure to propose an adequate substitute for what the Premier suggests.

They are content to oppose the Township Board plan without themselves bringing forward a remedy for conditions that obviously ought to be cured.

It cannot be that they are satisfied that the present scheme of rural education cannot be improved upon, for surely it must be generally evident that it is an obsolete machine, creaking in many joints, and that because of its defects children in the country are being deprived of many advantages that the city child enjoys.

THE GAS PLANT PROPOSITION.

One of the most important matters to come before the ratepayers of Peterborough in a long period is the bylaw authorizing the purchase of the local gas plant from the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, which is to be voted on at the municipal election.

As R. R. Hall, K.C., pointed out in his article on the subject in last evening's Examiner, the City Council has succeeded in getting an offer that involves favorable terms and conditions of payment.

The commission has included in its price for the utility not only the gas plant and distribution system, but also stores, equipment and some real estate that is likely to prove of considerable value to the city.

Mr. Hall's communication, while stressing the fact that many people are opposed to public or municipal ownership, adds: "But a gas plant is one that does not lend itself to the many wasteful methods that may be adopted under municipal ownership."

That is the angle from which other citizens not in love with public ownership are approaching this question.

Their opposition to the general principle of public ownership does not blind them to the fact that the city has apparently been given a very fair offer and an opportunity to come into possession of a profitable utility under conditions that practically guarantee that the plant will be fully paid for in thirty years without adding a cent in the meantime to the tax bills of Peterborough citizens.

As Mr. Hall points out, too, "the very fact that under Hydro management it paid its way while the street railway ran under ground, shows that the gas plant has and still holds the vigor and strength of youth."

In short, the citizens of Peterborough are being offered a chance to take over a going concern that has always paid its way, and should continue to do so, at a price that is considered reasonable, while the alternative to accepting the offer is to allow the utility to pass to private control, taking with it a franchise that municipalities nowadays would not for a moment consider granting.

CANADIAN EXPORTS AND WORLD TRADE.

In few large countries in the world is there as great reason for interest in foreign business conditions as in Canada, where about 20 per cent. of the net income of the whole people is deprived from exports, says the monthly letter of the Royal Bank of Canada. According to the most recent estimate of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, for instance, the net income of Canadians during 1925 amounted to $4,800 millions, and the value of exports in that year was $1,000 million. Though it is recognized that exporters of wheat, flour, paper, lumber, fish, meats and metals must keep themselves familiar with conditions in the markets for these commodities in all countries, few realize the large proportion of the Canadian people whose income is directly or indirectly affected by changing conditions abroad.

The enquiries from the Maritimes as to the size of the catch in Scandinavian countries or as to the activity of demand for fish in the West Indies reflects interest in the return the fisherman will receive for his season's catch. The frequent question as to the extent to which newspaper circulation was affected by the recent election in the United States shows how closely the factors which concern demand for newsprint are being watched. The statement that the recent decline in United States imports of copper from Africa was due to increased European consumption rather than to an over-supply from other sources is of interest throughout the mining regions of Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia. The size of the Argentine wheat crop, the price of bacon in London and the amount of lumber which will be required for new construction in Australia and Japan are each factors of moment in the corresponding parts of Canada. For most Canadian producers, the year's profits are largely determined by the prices and conditions which prevail in world markets.

Although it is evident that business men are accustomed to giving careful consideration to all those influences which they regard as important in their effect upon the price of the commodity in which they are most interested, there is a tendency to forget that world buying power has a predominant weight in determining the total demand for Canadian products. Between 1922 and 1926 there was an increase of 78 per cent. in Canadian exports. Each of the intervening years witnessed a substantial increase in the value of Canadian goods sold abroad. In 1922, the value of Canadian exports amounted to $740,000,000 and in 1926 to $1,315,000,000. In the next two years the value of exports declined 6½ per cent. The total value of exports for the fiscal year ending March 1, 1927, amounted to only $1,252,000,000, and in 1928 to $1,228,000,000.

Quite aside from the steady rise in the value of total exports from 1922 through 1926 and the subsequent decline in 1927 and 1928, there has been a corresponding rise and fall in the value of a large number of individual Canadian exports. It cannot be considered entirely a coincidence that substantially more wheat, flour, meat, fish, manufactured and unmanufactured wood, vehicles, metals and metal products were exported in 1926 than in 1922. This is usually explained by the rapid expansion which took place in Canada during this interval. But in spite of the subsequent continued expansion in Canada, the value of the exports of each of these commodities declined in 1927 and there was a further decline in the fiscal year ending March 1, 1928. These commodities are representative of a wide variety of Canadian economic activities.

The rise in the value of these exports between 1922 and 1926, besides representing an expansion in Canadian productive capacity, was also indicative of a change in world buying power. In our opinion the subsequent decline for the value of these exports may be attributed to a temporary decline in that buying power rather than to decreased productive capacity in Canada. While it is obvious that world buying power could not have prevented a crop failure in Western Canada nor have increased greatly the size of the catch in the Maritimes, yet, through price, foreign buying capacity was a tremendous influence on the total value of the annual exports of the country.

Under these circumstances, an understanding of the influence which restricted world buying power during the past two years, and an estimate of the general trend of that buying power in the near future, may be elements of value in establishing quotas for production and export in the next few years.

A Thought

USE OF TIME.

There may be doubts, however, as to which was using his time best. The one could afford time to think, could have sympathies and do kind-and the other never could. The one nesses, and the other must needs be always selfish. He could not cultivate a friendship or do a charity, or admire a work of genius, or kindle at the sight of beauty or the sound of a sweet song—he had no time, and no eyes for anything but his law books. HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1928.

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Benefic aspects are strong today, according to astrology, making for an optimistic outlook on life.

This is read as a most auspicious rule under which to shop or to prepare pleasant surprises for friends.

It is a favorable sway for dealing with banks and for looking into financial matters.

Under this direction of the stars generosity rules and there should be an inclination to spend money.

All the signs seem o forecast a record-breaking holiday trade in which shops indulge in exhibitions of extraordinary splendor, tempting to the pocketbook and educational in demonstrating world progress in manufactures.

Advertising today should be especially productive of returns, for the stars favor publicity of every sort.

This is a fortunate planetary government for Washington, D.C., which is subject to influences making for tremendous advancement of American interests.

The evening is a lucky time for all who occupy public office and should be favorable for banquets and receptions.

The seers give insistent advice regarding the care of the health and predict an epidemic of colds that will affect business and professional life.

There is a sign of promise for the making of new friends. It is a favorable day for meeting future clients or business associates.

Wise men and women will devote time for rest and recreation under this rule, which is promising for week-end excursions and family reunions.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a prosperous year in business or professional work.

Children born on this day should be keen of mind and strong of body. The subjects of this sign usually succeed in life through their own efforts. They are most popular, but incline to marriage late in life.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

THE SIMPLICITY OF LIFE

No treasure like a kiss,
The day to glorify,
No gift as rich as this,
No matter how we try.
No tribute like a tear
Shed for another's grief,
No sentence as sincere,
As certain of belief.

No beauty like a smile,
That makes all faces fair;
Not all our painted guile
With laughter can compare.
No comfort like a hand
Given by friend to friend,
That minds can understand
And hearts can comprehend.

How wonderful to live!—
Nor difficult at all.
The poor a kiss can give,
The great a tear let fall.
A kiss, a tear, a song,
The clasp of friendly men—
Whatever may be wrong
These can make right again.

THE LUCKIEST LADY

—BY— RUBY M. AYRES

THE STORY THUS FAR:

BIDDY SAUNDERS—the Little Flapper—always called her young adopted mother, MARNA PAGET, the Luckiest Lady, for she thought Marna had everything her heart could wish—youth, beauty, wealth and the love of a devoted husband. But Marna was unhappy. She had married without loving GEORGE PAGET, and three months later had met HUGH HUBBARD and given him her heart. Neither of them had wanted to hurt George. Hubbard had gone to China. But after years of separation, they realize their love is stronger than ever. The Little Flapper, as she grows older, worries a little about Marna, and her friend, the Big Flapper, DOLLY BENSON, has suggested to her that Marna is not happy with George.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

VII.—ENDLESS PUNISHMENT

George Paget was such a fine man, such a sportsman, and he trusted them both so utterly.

"Why couldn't I have loved him as I love Hugh?" Marna asked herself hopelessly as she knelt by her bedroom fire on the night of the Little Flapper's eighteenth birthday and looked back, as she was always looking back, to the days of her short-lived happiness.

George Paget had done so much for her, had loved her so well and so faithfully, and yet it all counted as nothing when it was put into the scales against one look from Hubbard's steady eyes.

"And I have lived for five years without seeing him even once," she thought wonderingly. "And I have managed to get along somehow, and I haven't broken my heart or even got very thin or old-looking. It's only myself only my heart and mind, that really knows what these five years have been."

The Little Flapper had helped. Without her love, Marna often believed she would have died.

But the Little Flapper never failed her.

She was never too tired or too occupied with her own affairs to respond at once to Marna's slightest wish.

"I wonder where I should have been if it hadn't been for you?" she said once dreamily; and Marna answered promptly:

"Oh, there are lots of kind people in the world who would have taken pity on a Little Flapper like you."

Biddy Saunders shook her head.

"There could never have been anyone so wonderful as you," she declared fondly; then she was silent for a moment before she said again:

"It's like a bad dream—all that part of my life before you came. The theatre and the awful men and women——"

"Don't think of it," Marna said quickly. "It doesn't do to look back into the past."

The Little Flapper turned round—she was sitting hunched up on a stool at Marna's feet—and looked up at her with interested eyes.

"It's funny you should say that," she said with a little laugh. "Dolly Benson says that sometimes there is an expression in your eyes as if you are looking back into the past—a long, long way back."

Marna colored faintly.

"Dolly Benson is too imaginative," she said; but she knew it was the truth, for often and often in the midst of some gaiety, or when she was with her husband, listening to his good-humored, disconnected talk, her thoughts would suddenly slip back, as if someone had pushed them down from the top of the hill to which she had so painfully dragged them. And in an aching imagination she was again with Hugh Hubbard, listening to his voice—remembering every word he had ever said to her, re-living for a moment that wonderful sense of completeness and contentment.

"It was too wonderful to last—too wonderful," she told herself passionately as she knelt by the fire, holding her hands to its warmth, and she wondered if Hugh felt that, too. Hubbard was a strong man and a patient man. He had been able to bring quiet philosophy to bear upon his trouble, and to deaden his pain by work. Marna knew that, and was glad to know it, even while sometimes it hurt her to think perhaps he was less unhappy than she was.

"He's got his work and his freedom, and I'm tied, and I've got nothing—nothing," Marna often told herself hopelessly. "I'm just useless. All I can do is to think and remember—and love Biddy."

For she always came back to that thought with a sense of gratitude.

Presently she roused herself with a sigh and rose to her feet, crossing again to the long mirror and regarding her slender reflection with serious eyes.

It was eternally in Marna's thoughts that she must always look her best, in case one day Hugh Hubbard unexpectedly came home. Although it was so long since she had seen him, in imagination she lived her life for him and as closely to him as possible. When the sun shone, she wondered, if he, too, was in the sunshine; when she looked up at the moon, she told herself that somewhere the same moon also looked down upon him. If she chose a new frock she found herself wondering if it was what he would like, and she had hesitated for a long time about cutting off her hair, in case it would not meet with his approval when he came home. When he came home—a hope now so long deferred that sometimes she did not believe she would ever see him again, and then at other times she was so conscious of his nearness it would not have surprised her to know he was already in London.

Would he think she had changed very much?

Her eyes asked a wistful question of the mirror.

"Perhaps not very much," she told herself hopefully. "But you don't look twenty any more, or anything near it."

She sighed, and then turned with a guilty little start as the door opened and George Paget came in.

He was immaculately dressed, and he wore his monocle on the wide black silk ribbon which still always so intrigued the Little Flapper.

"You look like a duke," she invariably told him on such occasions, a statement which made George Paget square his already square shoulders and throw out his chest with pride.

"If you think you look like a duke's daughter, you're mistaken, don'tcherknow!" was his invariable answer.

There was a great affection between the Little Flapper and George Paget, because they also met upon the mutual plane of their love for Marna, even as the implacable Harnigan and the Little Flapper met.

"'Pon my word, Marna," Paget said now, regarding his wife with delighted eyes, "you get more abominably conceited every day. Why need you stand and admire yourself, when I can do all the admiring that's good for you?"

Marna laughed and sighed together.

"I wasn't admiring myself. I was thinking how middle-aged I'm getting."

"Middle-aged!" Paget was indignant. "Middle-aged! Rot! What about me, then?" he demanded loudly. He came close up behind her, so that they were both reflected in the long mirror.

"Make a good-lookin' pair, don't we?" he submitted modestly. "I've put on flesh a bit during the past five years, I admit, but I don't know that it's exactly unbecoming. What d'ye think?"

"I think you're the handsomest man I have ever known," Marna said; but she spoke absently, and when he would have put an arm round her she avoided him and moved swiftly away. "We ought to go down. People will soon be arriving."

"Suppose we ought," Paget agreed, but he lingered for another moment to settle his already immaculate tie before he followed his wife from the room. He was not a vain man, but for Marna's sake he was always most particular and fastidious about his appearance.

"Wonder if Hubbard's put on as much weight as I have?" he said irrelevantly as they descended the stairs.

Marna stood still, a step below her husband, her hand gripping the baluster rail very tightly, her lips suddenly pale.

"Why, what ever made you think of him?" she asked breathlessly.

George Paget laughed rather guiltily.

"Oh, nothing! Remembered him here at another dance we gave, that's all. How many years ago, Marna?"

"Nearly six."

"Suppose it is." Paget cast another glance at himself in a mirror in the hall below. "Time flies when you're as happy as we are, doesn't it, Marna?"

Marna did not answer. She looked rather pale still, and there was something pathetic of the big drawing-room, which had been turned out and transformed into a bower of flowers with cunningly hidden lights.

It had given her such pleasure to see that in its own way everything should be as perfect as possible for the Little Flapper, and now just the mention of Hugh Hubbard's name had altered everything and brought back the unlifting shadow which for a little while she had managed to expel. Passionate bitterness and resentment rose in her heart because he was not here with her. What had they done, that they should be punished so endlessly? Why was she never to be allowed the happiness for which she craved?

The Little Flapper danced up to her, all eagerness and excitement, but her smiles faded when she saw the shadow on Marna's face.

"What's the matter, darling," she asked anxiously.

Marna smiled rather constrainedly. "Nothing. Why should there be? Biddy, don't you think the room looks wonderful?"

"Wonderful! "But Biddy spoke half-heartedly, and she kept glancing at Marna with puzzled eyes. Her beloved could change so quickly, from radiant happiness to sadness—so quickly that Biddy's simple mind could neither follow nor understand its rapid transformation.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S QUEER CANE

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

"Where's my red, white and blue striped rheumatism crutch? Has anybody seen my crutch?"

Uncle Wiggily, who was hopping around in the front hall of his hollow stump bungalow, called this aloud so Nurse Jane and his wife could hear him away out in the kitchen where they were.

"Your rheumatism crutch, my dear?" asked Mrs. Longears. "Isn't it right there where the children hang up their hats?"

"It doesn't seem to be, but I'll look again," the rabbit gentleman answered. It took him some little time to search along the hatrack, for there were so many little rabbit boys and girls in his family—at least forty sixteen twenty-three at the least count—that a very large hatrack was needed.

The rabbit hopped home.

But the red, white and blue striped rheumatism crutch wasn't there—at least Uncle Wiggily said it wasn't.

"Oh, my dear!" laughed his wife as she came hopping out of the kitchen, wiping her paws on her apron, for she had been making a turnip long cake, "you never can find anything! Let me look!"

But Mrs. Longears had no better luck than did her husband. The rheumatism crutch was gone and when Nurse Jane came in to help look, the muskrat lady housekeeper said:

"Oh, I remember now! I let Mrs. Twistytail, the lady pig, take your crutch, Uncle Wiggily, to use for a clothes pole. You didn't seem to carry it with you these last few days and I thought your rheumatism was all better."

"It was until today," said the bunny uncle, "and now when I need my crutch to go hopping out for adventures it isn't here."

"Oh, I'm so sorry I let Mrs. Twistytail take it," squeaked Nurse Jane. "But her clothes line was sagging down and there was nothing else I could give her in a hurry to hold up her washing."

"Oh, it's all right," said Mr. Longears. "I'll take this cane with me and on my way home I'll stop at the pig pen and get my crutch from Mrs. Twistytail if she is through with it."

"Her clothes ought to be dry by then," said Nurse Jane.

So Uncle Wiggily took a large brown cane, with a crooked handle, from the corner of the hall and went out with the stick dangling on his paw. He limped only a little with his rheumatism, and he only wanted a cane or crutch so that if he became lame, while out adventuring, he would have something to help him get home.

"The cane will do very well," he said. "I may not need it at all."

Now as Uncle Wiggily hopped along swinging his cane, he happened to think that he ought to go in the kennel house and call on Mr. Bow Wow, the dog gentleman, who was ill with a cold. So pretty soon the rabbit gentleman was in front of the place and in he went to see Mr. Bow Wow.

Jackie and Peetie, who were just home from school, saw Uncle Wiggily go in their house with his cane and Jackie said:

"I know a funny trick we can play on Uncle Wiggily."

"What?" asked Peetie.

"See that cane he has," went on Jackie. "Well, while he's in our house talking to Pa and Ma we'll take his cane away. We can easy sneak in and take it out of the hall, where he stands it."

"That won't be any fun," barked Peetee. "Ma will lend him a broom stick to walk home on if he limps with rheumatism."

"Wait! You haven't heard it all yet," chuckled Jackie. "In place of Uncle Wiggily's wooden cane we'll put a big, long icicle. And when he takes the queer icicle cane home and stands it in his warm bungalow, it will melt and he'll be as surprised as anything."

"Oh, that's a good joke!" laughed Peetie. So while Uncle Wiggily was talking to their father and mother in the kennel house Jackie and Peetie took away his wooden cane. They found a long, thick icicle with a crooked handle just like the bunny's cane. And they only put the icicle in place of the real cane just a few minutes before Uncle Wiggily came out, so it had no chance to melt.

Knowing nothing of the queer cane he was carrying, or his rheumatism did not hurt enough to make him lean on the stick, the rabbit hopped home. He took the cane into the kitchen with him while he got a piece of carrot pie from Nurse Jane. As he ate the pie Uncle Wiggily leaned his icicle cane near the stove.

All of a sudden there was a hissing, spluttering sound and the icicle cane melted into a puddle of water.

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" laughed the bunny when he saw what had happened. And Jackie and Peetie who had followed him home to look in the window, also laughed. Then they gave Mr. Longears his real cane. And if the knife and fork will stop pretending they are teaspoons and keep out of the sugar bowl, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Sammie's sandwich.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY A BLOW ON THE HEAD MAKES YOU SEE STARS

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

It is possible to see stars on the darkest night or in bright daylight. But the stars you see under these conditions are not the celestial bodies in the sky.

A blow on the head makes you see a special type of star. The same thing happens when a boxer gets a good blow on the chin that sends his head back with a snap. Any kind of fall in which the head is struck or violently shaken causes you to see stars.

On a clear, moonless night the heavenly bodies we call stars are seen first with the eyes and then with the brain. That is to say, the brain is made aware of these stars through the mechanism of the eye and all its appendages, including the optic nerve, which carries the impression to the back of the brain where reside the visual centers. In the last analysis you see with the brain and not with the eye. But without the eye the brain would have no contact with external objects.

But in the case of seeing stars as the result of a blow on the back of the hea or a severe jolt to the whole brain the mechanism of the eye is not involved. You perceive the stars directly with the brain. Hence presumably a blind man whose visual centers are intact may also see stars as the result of a blow on the head although he is unable to see the heavenly bodies because of defective eyes.

The visual centers of the brain can respond to stimulus only by seeing something, whether the lights come through the eye, or the brain itself is directly stimulated by a blow or a severe jolt.

The blow-stimulated visual center sees stars because it is capable of responding only to light, and the streaking light waves appear as a myriad of stars. When the optic nerve is jarred the stimulus impresses the brain as being a light stimulus and you think you see a flashing light or whole swarms of lights like moving stars.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, and send stamped envelope for reply.

PATRONS GIVEN OYSTER SUPPER

Interesting Information is Given by Speakers as to Grading of Cheese.

LARGE ATTENDANCE

(Examiner Correspondence)

NORWOOD, Dec. 13.—Mr. and Mrs. George Wheatly, assisted by their patrons of the Daisy D. cheese factory, were hosts at an oyster supper held in the town hall, Norwood, on Friday evening. The tables which were very tastefully decorated for the occasion, were laden with all kinds of delectable foods. The first tables were filled at 7.15 and supper was served and continued to be served until 9 o'clock, owing to the large crowd in attendance.

After supper a program consisting of speeches and music was given with George Elliott of South Dummer, acting as chairman. Mr. Elliott, an entertainer from Hastings, provided the amusement of the evening with his jokes and humorous songs. The speakers were men who could give the patrons some interesting information with regard to the grading of cheese, the cleanliness of milk, etc. They were Joseph Burgess, of Montreal, chief dairy produce grader for the Dominion; James Irwin, local grader from Belleville; William Drury, of Warkworth, and George Hagerman, of Belleville. Short addresses were also given by Rev. Mr. Moyer, Rev. Mr. Philpot and G. A. Brethen.

At the conclusion of the program the young folk lost no time in clearing the floor space where they danced until the early hours of the morning. The music was provided by an orchestra composed of Mr. and Mrs. Brooks, Joe McNeely of Trent River and Harry Fife and son Harold, of Norwood.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. and Mrs. Wheatly for their kindness in bringing about such a happy event.

Wet Weather In Argentina Strengthens Wheat Values

CHICAGO, December 13 (Canadian Press). — Wheat prices here averaged higher early to-day owing largely to Liverpool quotations being firmer than expected and to rains in North Argentina delaying the movement of wheat. Wet weather over the corn belt had a strengthening effect on the corn market. Opening at a shade to ¼ advance, Chicago wheat reacted somewhat and then hardened again. Corn started unchanged to ⅜, and subsequently rose all around. Oats displayed independent strength.

Opening prices were: Wheat, December 115⅝, March 118¾. Corn, December 83⅞, March 87⅛. Oats, December 48½, March 48⅜.

Toronto Trading Dull With Prices Irregular

International Nickel New continued to lead the market and gained a quarter to 37.

Dairy Issues were active. City Dairy opened strong at 73½ for a gain of 1½, but by noon had dropped to yesterday's close. Farmer's Dairy gained 2½ points to 25. Massey Harris lost 1½ to 83½. Page Hersey dropped one to 116 and Hayes Wheel rose 1½ to 46½ and Canadan Dredge one to 65. Brazilian went down one to 69 and Canada Cement a half to 93½. Dominion Power lost two to 74 and Northern Bakeries a half to 46. Goodyear dropped one to 237. Canadian Vickers Merger With Airways Is Denied

OTTAWA, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—The Morning Citizen carries the following in its news columns yesterday.

"Prompt denial was given last night by Victor M. Drury, director of the Canadian Vickers Company, to a report that his firm had entered into a merger with the new Interprovincial Airways and Western Canada Airways. The rumor still persists, however, that some gigantic move has been concluded whereby practically all of the larger aircraft concerns of the Dominion have formed a protective alliance against possible swamping by American concerns, some of which are becoming very powerful.

"The rumor of the merger calls for a mutual protection merger of Western Canada Airways with what was until a few weeks ago International Airways of Canada.

"This firm changed its name after absorbing as subsidiary companies, London Air Transport, London, Ont.; Canadian Air Express, Toronto, and Canadian Airways of Montreal, becoming Interprovincial Airways.

"Should the rumor of a further amalgamation prove true, it is conceded here that the combined company would have almost complete control of aircraft operations throughout the Dominion."

OTTAWA, Ont., December 13. — (Canadian Press.) — Production from the boilers, tanks and engines industry in Canada during 1927 was valued at $5,945,694. The total represents an increase of 11 per cent. over the value of $5,343,208 reported for 1926, according to records compiled by the mining, metallurgical and chemical branch of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics at Ottawa.

Thirty-three concerns reported in this group in 1927. Eighteen were in operation in Ontario, seven in British Columbia, fo ruin Quebec, and four in repreesnted a capital amounting to Nova Scotia. Thees establishments $9,329,528, and gave work to an average age of 1654 employees throughout the year. Payments for salaries and wages totalled $2,260,284; expenditures for fuel and electricity amounted to $141,066, and materials used in manufacturing cost $2,853,951. The value added by the manufacturing processes was $3,091,743.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

American interests are reported to be interested in some interesting prospects in the Patricia field. One or two local syndicates stand to benefit. Among these are the Trout Bay Syndicate, which owns considerable territory in this camp. The major discovery is described as a large mineralized zone, or dyke, from 250 to 300 feet and thousands of feet in length, containing many veins of blue quartz with gold content and visible gold in some places. The New York deal also includes a major interest in the Galena Island Syndicate property. Trout Bay Syndicate shareholders will participate also in the Galena Island Syndicate. One result of the completion of the transaction will be the complete financing for the development of both properties.

The New Goudreau Gold Mines, Limited, was incorporated recently with an authorized capitalization of 1,000,000 shares of no par value. It is understood that upon completion of all financing some 150,000 shares will remain unissued. The property of the company consists of some 530 acres five miles from Goudreau station, in the district of Algoma. The property was developed to a depth of 450 feet by the Goudreau Gold Mines, whose operations were terminated by lack of funds. The company has a mill erected and complete equipment installed. Work will now proceed under the direction of the new management. Officials tell the Financial News Bureau that sufficient ore has been indicated already to justify the operation of the mill and plant. It is expected that the production stage will be reached without further encroaching on the company's unissued stock. The shares of the old company are quoted at 4 to 5 cents on the unlisted market and, as the shares are exchangeable for stock of the new company on a ten for one basis, this should put a price of 40 to 50 cents on the new stock.

Considerable interest centres on operations to be carried out on the South Lorrain property of the Mining Corporation of Canada. As announced in the last progress report, the company was to spend an effort in developing a hitherto unexplored section of the property. This section was regarded as promising as conglomerates were numerous. In the Cobalt camp all silver and Cobalt values were associated with these conglomerates and it is hoped that such will prove the case on the South Lorrain property. No official word of progress made has been made but it is expected that news will be forthcoming shortly.

Present work at the Kipper-Tashota property, in the Tashota-Kowash gold area of Ontario, is being concentrated on the No. 1 vein where a standard shaft—7 by 11 feet—is being put down. Present depth is approximately 12 feet. The No .1 vein at this point is said by the mine manager to be about 75 feet wide. The shaft is crossways on this vein, going down from the hanging wall side. The shaft is going straight down and as there is very little dip to the vein—and what dip there is being to the east—it is expected that the vein will remain in the shaft for some considerable distance.

Pandora

We wish to correct our bulletin of Novemper 30th stating that Pandora had closed down. We are informed by the secretary that they have a property that gives every indication of becoming a real mine. No work will be spared to prove it up. Lateral work from the 100 foot level has been temporarily suspnded as this was being done by hand steel and the cost was excessive. When a plant is installed further work will be proceeded with. In the meantime ,surface exploration work is in progress. During this work a vein to the north was uncovered for a length of 300 feet with widths up to nine feet, giving a general assay of approximately $9 a ton.. A meeting of the directors has been called for December 17th when future development plans will be decided on.

Abana

According to Street gossip Tuesday Charles Spearman has resigned as consulting engineer of Abana Mines. No official confirmation of this is available yet, but it is quite possible an announcement will be made today. It is understood that one of the conditions required by Mr. Connell before he accepted a place on the board was that a change be made in engineering control.

Okalta

According to Calgary advices the Okalta No. 1 well is now producing 600 barrels of high grade naphtha on three separators. Two special separators are now on the road to this well and it is anticipated they will further increase production by perhaps 200 barrels.

Vulcan

The Vulcan No. 1 well has been cleaned out somewhat and is now giving production of approximately 110 barrels daily, the most it has produced in two years. Immediately new drill rods are received it is expected they will be able to drill past the lost tools and deepen the well to some extent.

McLeod

The McLeod No. 3 well is reported to be 96 feet in the lime and has a small showing of oil.

Arno

We understand the installation of a mining plant is practically completed at the Coxheath property of Arno Mines. From previous work done at this property it is anticipated that around 150,000 tons of good grade copper-gold ore will be made immediately available.

Crown Reserve

It is difficult to find a cause for the recent sharp decline in the shares of Crown Reserve. It is well known that Crown have at least $1,000,000 worth of blocked out ore on the upper levels with much more indicated. Work is proceeding rapidly on the lower horizons proving the extensions of the upper ore zones, and it is known a great deal of success is being had. The property is well equipped and financed. It is our firm belief a mine of importance will be provd by this Larder Lake company within the course of the next few months.

Comment On the Market

A Special Service to The Examiner.

Durant Motors Cash Assets Approximate $2,000,000.

Durant Motors of Canada, Ltd., will close the year 1928 with cash assets of approximately $2,000,000, The Financial News Bureau is advised authoritatively. In addition to this the company has inventories, which, it is understood, will bring total current assets to a figure comparable with the par value of the stock outstanding, which now stands at $2,847,220, shares being of $10 par.

The company is just completing the best operating year in its history. The number of cars produced will approximate 15,000, as compared with 9,000 produced in 1927.

The company looks forward to another good year in 1929, due in part to the increased buying-power of the people of Canada, but largely also to the increased scope of the company's business afforded by the granting of larger export markets to Durant of Canada, notably in South American counties. If sales in these new markets work out well, the company expect a very substantial increase in earning power from now forward.

Contest for Copper Supremacy Looms Ahead of Four Provinces

While Ontario leads British Columbia in the value of production of minerals by a very large margin, the respective totals in 1927 being $90,000,000 against $60,750,000, the Coast province occupies the supreme place in the Dominion with respect to various metals, including lead, copper and zinc, and has wrested the palm from Ontario in silver output. Ontario leads in combined production, because of its enormaus output of gold and nickel. It is estimated officially that British Columbia will produce in 1928 approximately $62,000,000 in minerals, or some $1,250,000 better than last year, while Ontario promises to contribute $100,000,000.

Comparing the output of British Columbia and other provinces, it looks as if it will be a considerable time before its supremacy in lead and zinc will be seriously challenged, although Sudbury Basin properties in Ontario and the copper-zinc properties of Quebec will bring these two provinces more favorably into the limelight.

With respect to copper, British Columbia position will not be seriously disputed by both Ontario and Quebec within the next two or three years. The Coast province in 1927 produced 91,685,842 pounds of copper compared with 45,334,303 for Ontario and 3,121,677 pounds for Quebec. Noranda is now producing copper at the rate of 36,000,000 pounds per annum and at the beginning of next year the second united of the smelter will be in operation, which in good time should bring production up to 72,000,000 pounds per annum. Noranda mine is now developing its enormous, high-grade physical assets at dept. At the same time several other important copper properties in the area are approaching a production stage. Pressure for increased tonnage for Noranda smelter looms on the horizon.

A large copper smelter is under way at Sudbury, Ont., for International plans will be enlarged, with the probable result that a capacity of 125,000,000 to 150,000,000 pounds of copper annually will be effected by 1930.

Manitoba is another province that is going to loom in a large way as a copper production appears assured from the Hudson Bay and Sherritt-Gordon companies.

In the meantime British Columbia appears assured of another copper smelter of large size, so that it can be counted on to increase output.

There is in prospect within the next four years of a total production for Canada of approximately 500,000,000 pounds of copper annually, of which Ontario could easily dispute with British Columbia the lion's share.

Speculation In Stocks Settles At New York

NEW YORK, December 13. Canadian Press. — Speculation in stocks quieted down considerably in to-day's market, which was featured by the strength of non-dividend paying railroad stocks. Wide fluctuations continued in some of the high priced industrials and specialties but the general undertone was firm.

There was no change in the credit situation. Call money again renewed at eight per cent with funds so plentiful that the rate was lowered to seven and a half. Additional shipments of gold from Canada brought the total on the current movement to $15,000,000.

A revival of speculative activity in rails was influenced to some extent by reports of the increasing freight car traffic and the prospect of dividend resumptions on a few issues.

Chicago Great Western issues advance dto a new 1928 high level and Chicago and Alton issues, Erie common, Western Maryland common and second preferred and Pennsylvania, were among the many issues to sell two to four and a half points higher.

Radio broke nineteen points in early trading but recovered all its loss by early afternoon. Packard Motors converted an early loss of nearly six points into a gain of four.

Burroughs adding machine which soared 16 points yesterday moved up eight more to-day to a new high record at 230.

Standard Stocks Soar After Light Opening

TORONTO, Dec. 13. — (Canadian Press.)—Following an easy opening on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day, prices took an upward movement and stock issues which were almost obscure during recent weeks came to the front and registered gains. Bidgood became an early favorite and sold heavily for a gain of six and a half points to 35. Noranda, however, was weaker and dropped 50 cents to 55.00. McDoughall went up four to 45, while Malartic sold off to 88 for a los sof seven. Murphy continued its recent upward movement and gained another two and a half points to 68½, going as high as 71. Sisco was another prominent issue, recovering from yesterday's losses to register a two and a half gain at 70½. Wright-Hargreaves went up three to 1.58. Sudbury Basin ten to 6.75 and Hollinger ten to 8.25.

Mining Corporation lost five to 3.55, Nipissing ten to 3.80, Sherritt-Gordon five to 6.35, Silvanite ten to 2.00 and Teck Hughes five to 7.95. Abana dropped seven to 2.86, Pend Oreille twenty to 9.55, while Big Missouri gained one to 70, Central Manitoba one to 63, Jackson Manion two to 19 and Hudson Bay and Mandy Mines were unchanged.

GRAIN SHIPMENTS

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., December 13 (Canadian Press). — Five grain boats are on the list of vessels clearing from the post of Fort William, Port Arthur Harbor yesterday with 1,467,000 bushels, all for Buffalo.

It is understood that underwriters have definitely declined to extend insurance on any vessels after midnight even on the run between Fort William and Duluth. Thus the boats clearing yesterday will be the last to leave.

A full list of boats wintering here with grain on board will be issued shortly.

Following is yesterday's report on vessel movements:

Cleared—Wm. F. Finch, David P. Thompson, Buffalo, wheat, barley; Henry P. Werner, F. B. Squire, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, Buffalo, wheat.

In port—Weyburn, discharging freight; Empire City, arrived for grain.

En route, due here this morning—James Watt.

The British Parliament held that country to be in a state of war with Germany until August 31, 1921.

BELLEVILLE OPENS SCHOOL

Collegiate Institute and Vocational Training School Cost $550,000.

SPECIAL CEREMONIES.

BELLEVILLE, December 13.—With many of the most prominent citizens of Canada present, Belleville yesterday formally opened its $550,000 collegiate institute and vocational training school. Hon. John S. Martin, who laid the corner-stone, was called upon to declare the imposing edifice open for use. He also was the first to enter his name in the book kept for recording visits by distinguished men.

In the afternoon the session was given over to the student body which heard addresses by H. R. H. Kenner, Principal of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute;; Dr. Charles Bishop of Albert College; P. C. McLaurin, Principal of the Belleville Collegiate Institute; A. T. Delury, Dean of the Faculty of Arts of the University of Toronto, and Hon. John S. Martin.

At the evening session representatives of the Provincial Department of Education were the guests of honor. A unique feature of the evening ceremonies was the introduction of Wellington Jeffers Diamond, who has been Secretary of the Board of Education since 1881. Mr. Diamond has passed his ninetieth birthday, is hale and hearty, and attends to his office duties each day.

Following the evening session students acted as guides and showed the gathering the many unique features incorporated in the new edifice.

peared to be thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. A classroom habit of dropping the voice at important septences, designed, probably, to keep the attention of pupils always on the qui vive, but a little disconcerting to an adult audience, prevented the whole of the professor's discourse from being intelligible to his hearers.

Mrs. J. F. Allan, in the chair, presented a hearty vote of thanks to the speaker and to Mr. Henry also and spoke of the forthcoming visit of Dr. Charles G. D. Roberts, who will speak under the auspices of the Women's Canadian Club.

QUIET

The Easy is not like the old-time washer-woman who talked from morning till night, when she wasn't singing.

It works so quietly you wouldn't know it was in the house—if it were not for the wonderful results the Easy gives you in cleaner clothes, shorter washdays and freedom from drudgery and wash-board backache.

The Easy is well built from fine materials. It does not vibrate, rattle or make any unnecessary noise. There's a wholesome, satisfying sound to the "swashing" of the efficient Vacuum Cups as they move up and down flushing air, soap and water through and through the clothes.

KIWANIS CLUB IS PREPARING FOR BIG YEAR

Committee Drafted By President-elect John J. Turner and Executive.

Only Three Members Named On Each Committee Instead of Usual Five.

At a preliminary organization meeting in Hooper's parlors last night, the 1929 Board of Directors of Kiwanis Club drew up its draft of committees, President-elect John J. Turner presided.

COMPANY HAS BEST YEAR IN ITS HISTORY

S. J. Joss Speaks At Annual Banquet of Campbellford District Dairymen.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 13.—S. L. Joss, secretary-treasurer of the dairyman's co-operative society pointed out at the cheese-makers' banquet here last night that the volume of business for the past year had exceeded three and one-half million dollars, and was the best year in the history of the society. He thought that the patrons and officials should be commended for their excellent showing in 1928.

Robert Innes, president of the Seymour West Factory, also spoke. It was pointed out that this factory had enjoyed a one-hundred per cent. product but had been cut in their standard by a "carry-over" from 1927. This was unfortunate, but nevertheless, the legal procedure, it was stated. John Hall, another prize winner, was anxious to win further laurels, and expressed the opinion that co-operation meant everything to the dairy industry. Before proceeding further with the program, the chairman expressed the thanks of the association to all those who had assisted in making the banquet such an outstanding success.

John L. Doherty was the last speaker. His remarks were brief. He said he was "only a little fellow on a back concession," but his chief ambition was to produce high grade milk for the purpose of making high grade cheese.

The final number of the program was the presentation of the prizes. As each of the winners went forward to receive his award, he was warmly applauded. There were fifteen in all, including the cup which M. E. Maybee M.P., had already presented to Roy Brown. He also won the silver cup presented by the Royal Bank of Canada, and a set of silver knives and forks presented by John Murray. The J. O. Hagerman prize was awarded to David Wallace. Owing to illness in his family, Wallace was unable to be present. Robert Johnston was presented with the Fred Smith (Belleville) prize. John Murray presented Leslie Shillinglaw with the David Wallace prize. R. G. Maybee won the prize donated and presented by Alfred Merrills. James Shillinglaw won the Bank of Montreal prize; in the absence of George Nichol, local manager, it was presented to John Murray. The Bank of Commerce award went to F. M. Little of Menie. The A. E. Burgess prize went to Fred Remington of Hoards. The prize donated by Mefkiejohn of Warkworth was won by Mr. Colby. Mr. Rydman won the John Murray prize, and Tourney of Brickley won the award for the most attractive grounds around his factory. Runnels of Crow Bay factory also won a prize for the same efforts. The A. J. Meyers prize was won by W. B. Drury.

When the prizes had all been presented, the diners rose, joined hands and the evening came to an end with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

TRINITY WOMEN HOLD MEETING

Interesting Reports Are Heard On Year's Work of Association.

OVER $1,000 RAISED.

The December meeting of Trinity Women's Association was held in Reid Street Hall on Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 11th. Mrs. Robt. Neill presided. After the opening exercises the ladies remained standing whilst "God Save the King" was sung.

Mrs. Porter then read a very pleasing article which portrayed in most glowing terms the many sterling qualities which make our most gracious King beloved by all.

Interesting reports on the year's activities of the society were read by Mrs A. Barton, in the absence of Mrs. C. Cooke, and by Miss A. Fife, treasurer, who reported that the society had raisd over one thousand dollars.

A very pleasing Christmas solo was rendered by Mrs. O. Nicholls, accompanied by Mrs. Hohner, and Miss Wilson delighted the audience by her splendid rendition of Bart Harte's Christmas story, "How Santa Claus came to Simpson's Bar."

Rev. Mr. Wren closed the meeting with prayer.

SAVED BY A TAIL.

Tuckahoe, N. Y., Dec. 13.—Patsy Salvatre's dog was scheduled for execution. Authorities had caught him without muzzle and license. But Patsy couldn't see it that way. He reached into the death chamber and yanked his pet out by the tail. Then he was permitted to keep the pup on his mother's promise to secure a muzzle and license.

YOUNG MEN SENT TO JAIL

Four Cases of Chicken-Thieving Are Dealt With By Magistrate.

ONE FINED $100.

Eugene McGrohan, of Oshawa, came to Peterborough for the purpose of conducting his orchestra on the stage of a local theatre, and at a dance in a local hall last night. But he didn't stop at that. In fact, as the Chief of Police put it, "he wanted to break up the city police force" with considerable unseemly merriment on Brock street.

However, things didn't go just right, for he appeared before the magistrate this morning, charged with being in an intoxicated condition in a public place and was fined $20.00 and costs or 20 days in jail.

But that wasn't the main reason why every available space was taken up in the "gallery" for there were rumors of fowl play that were substantiated when Stanley Harron, of New Chamberlain street, William Henry and Percy Henry of R. R. 6, Peterborough, appeared on the docket, having pleaded guilty to charges of chicken stealing. Eloquent appeals for a merciful consideration on the part of their defense counsel could not withstand the strength of previous records, despite touching references to "Christmas in the homes without the lads" who had undertaken the proverbial occupation of the darkened southerner. All three were sentenced to a month at hard labor in the common jail.

There was one case which all agreed was exceptional. A young farmer of South Monaghan of previous untarnished reputation for honesty, and a good war record, who had suddenly veered from the straight and narrow and as a result, faced three charges of chicken stealing. Character evidence was submitted by his counsel who called several witnesses, including the reeve of South Monaghan. He had pleaded guilty and hence the ultimate decision of His Worship to impose a fine of $100 and costs, restitution having been made for the stolen feathered folk. In addition, he was bound over to future good behaviour by a bond of several restricting conditions.

In discussing the frequent instances of chicken stealing in the district, officers of the law as well as the Magistrate, were most emphatic in condemning those who may commit such offenses, and in their intentions to bring them to task.

COBOURG HOTEL CHANGES HANDS

Perry Alexander Purchases Arlington House and Makes Alterations.

100 BEDROOMS.

(Special to The Examiner.)

COBOURG, December 13. — Perry Alexander, proprietor of the summer resort, Oak Orchard, north of Peterboorugh, and also of a winter resort in Florida, has turned his attention to the old Arlington Hotel here, which by next June, will be renovated and altered beyond recognition by former guests.

The Arlington is now an Alexander caravansary, and if it be true that nothing succeeds like success, it may be safely predicted that the local house is about to recover from its more or less suspended animation once the Alexander magic begins to take effect. The advertising of the new Arlington began a few weeks ago with the first attack by carpenters and plumbers. It announces one hundred rooms with one hundred baths, written in box car letters on a big sign on the Provincial highway face of the house. Only the most reckless motorists will get by that expansive placard without seeing it.

Peterborough Man in Charge.

Meanwhile the rejuvenators are busy all over the interior. Albert Turcotte, of Peterborough, is in charge of the work. When Mr. Alexander started south last Saturday, with a stop-over in Hamilton until Monday of this week, he let it be understood that the alterations must be completed by June 1st, or even May 24th. The position of the dining room will not be changed, but a coffee room will be set off on the west side of it, where refreshments will be served when the dining room is closed. The annex on the east side will be converted into a breakfast room. A beauty parlor is down on the plans. The verandahs on the south side, facing the park and lake, will be amplified. Several stores will be built in on the ground floor toward the west end, and other radical changes will be made. A sample bath is being installed at present in one of the upstairs rooms, and also a bath between two communicating rooms on the second floor. A broader parking area will be provided, and it is expected that some guests will arrive by hydroplane, alighting on the lake in front of the hotel.

How well you look!

"I am writing you again to express my sincere gratitude for the continued success I have maintained through my daily dose of Kruschen. Only last week a man met me (who saw me a few months ago when I was crippled with rheumatism). His first remark was how well I looked. I replied, 'Yes, I have only Kruschen Salts to thank.' He said he was 'falling off colour' and would start the Kruschen habit next day. I always recommend Kruschen Salts." JAS. F. WOOLNER.

Original letter on file for inspection.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at drug and department stores in Canada at 75c. a bottle. A bottle contains enough to last for 4 or 5 months—good health for half-a-cent a day.

Peasant Government Claims Big Victory

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press).—National Peasants Party to-day claimed to have won a sweeping victory in the elections for the Lower House of Parliament. Early returns indicated that the Peasant Government headed by Julius Maniu would be confirmed in office.

FIRE CHIEF ASKS FOR CO-OPERATION

Firemen Will Be Sent To Organization Requesting Protection at Christmas Concerts.

What would one fire in a crowded public building, or even a private residence, mean if it happened on or about Christmas Day? The serious loss of property and the more serious loss of even one life would marr the entire Christmas for many, and that is why Fire Chief George Gimblett, in conversation with The Examiner, has requested the people of Peterborough to take two main precautions. He desires their co-operation rather than to have to lay down numerous regulations regarding the two.

First, he requests that during the shopping weeks before Christmas, that women with baby carriages take particular care to not block the aisles of the large department stores downtown with those carriages, as a fire would have disastrous results.

In this phase of fire prevention, the management of the stores should take a hand. It would be much safer to leave the carriages outside the doors.

The other request of Chief Gimblett was that all societies or other organizations holding Christmas concerts or like gatherings, get in touch with the fire department, so that a fireman may be stationed at the building for that night, to take charge in case of an emergency. This protection is a part of the co-operation which the chief is offering in return for thoughtfulness on the part of citizens, and he urges that since the menace of a fire is a very real thing, citizens give special thought to his suggestions.

GORDON BARRIE RETURNS HOME

Believed Western Man Had Been Visiting Relatives in District.

ABSENT THREE WEEKS.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 13 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Any anxiety which may have arisen from the sudden disappearance of Gordon Francis Barrie from his home in Weston, was relieved yesterday when word was received through official channels that he had returned to his home.

Gordon Barrie left his home on Thursday, November 22. Since that time, police have been on the alert for any information which might assist them in locating him. On advice from the chief of police in Weston, the local officials have been following all clues that were revealed although there was nothing for them to do in case they located the missing, other than to notify the authorities in Weston. Yesterday, the local chief received word that Barrie had returned to his home, but would not say where he had spent the three weeks time he had been absent. The belief that he had been visiting relatives in this district was entertained with some favor by the Weston officials.

SIXTH PETERBOROUGH TROOP

The Sixth Peterborough Troop held their weekly meeting on Monday evening. Flag break was held promptly at seven o'clock. This was followed by general inspection. The scouts then broke to their corners for instructions under their patrol leaders. The Chickadees held a knot contest in which Harry Gainey was proclaimed champ. In the other patrols the principal work taken included signalling, first aid, and several new knots.

During the evening an election was held for a sports leader. Lawrence McAuliffe was elected with Felix Scollard as his assistant. These scouts are now taking steps to form a hockey team and it is their desire that other troops in the city will do likewise so that a first class scout league may be held this year, which will equal last season, in which it will be remembered that the 5th were the winners. "Let's go Peterborough Scouts."

The last part of the evening was given over to the games as is the the custom. Scoutmaster F. Taylor of the 3rd showed the scouts a new game which provided a great deal of fun. A council fire was held during which a great amount of matter was taken up in reference to the troop. A sleigh ride appears to be in view for the troop during the Christmas season.

Several of the scouts are going to clean up the Christmas Toy Shop, which is situated next to the Grand Opera House. This shop will be inhabited by the scouts in the very near future for the making of toys for the poor children of the city.

The meeting closed with the singing of God Save the King very softly and slowly together with scout silence for the recovery of the Sovereign, at the suggestion of Scoutmaster Wolfe.

Patrol Leaders' Conference.

CAMPBELLFORD, December 13. — A conference of the patrol leaders and seconds, also the Rangers, was held at Miss Elsie Smith's, on Saturday last, at four o'clock. There were about 20 present, including Miss Smith, Miss Payne and Mrs. Massey. McGregor occupied the chair and the following program was given:

Duet by Dorothy Henson and Nellie Haig; address given by Muriel Kingston, entitled "What a Patrol expects of its leader; address by Elsie Connor on "The Spreading of the Guide Movement."

A discussion followed as to the sports. It was moved by Muriel Kingston, seconded by Gladys Stephens, that a girl be appointed to be the head of the sports for each company. The following were appointed:

Presbyterial Company, Margaret Cock; Miss Smith's Company, Elsie Connor; Miss Payne's Company, Gladys Stephens; Rangers, Mary McGregor.

This was followed by community singing, after which a discussion as to the attendance and punctuality of the guides.

Gladys Stephens then gave an address on "The New Recruit," and Margaret Cock also gave an address on "How a Patrol Leader can help her Captain."

Iona McPherson gave a reading on the Guide Promise, which was followed by games, the Guide song, and then God Save the King was sung.

Lunch was then served. Hyacinth Collinson gave a reading entitled "Why I like to be a Patrol Leader," Miss Payne gave a reading entitled "Atmosphere."

A vote of thanks was extended to Miss Smith by Muriel Kingston, seconded by Elsie Connor.

Taps and the Guide squeeze followed. A delightful afternoon was spent by all.

ANNUAL MEETING OF FENELLA W.M.S.

Mrs. William Jibb Elected President of Society—Musical Program.

(Examiner Correspondence)

FENELLA, Dec. 13.—The December meeting of the Fenella W.M.S. was held at the home of the president, Mrs. Fred Talling, on Wednesday afternoon, when Mrs. William Jibb was elected president for the coming year.

The Old and New Testament readings were given from Isaiah IX:6 and Luke II:10, 11. The devotional program was under the leadership of Mrs. C. McNaught. The devotional leaflet, "Life as a Stewardship" was given by Mrs. Knox and a solo, "He Wipes the Tear From Every Eye", was given by Mrs. A. Nill. The subject for study was, "Bubbling Springs in Bie", taken from chapter IV of the study book, "Drums in the Darkness", taken by Mrs. McNaught.

The president thanked the officers and members for their support during her term of office and asked that the same hearty support be given the new president. The treasurer reported $51 as the amount raised during the year, with only $1 expenses. Besides this amount, the members have made and donated six quilts, valued at $40. Encouraging reports were given by the other officers. A letter was read thanking the branch for quilt donations to a fire sufferer.

Officers Elected.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. William Jibb; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. F. Talling; strangers' secretary, Mrs. S. Leach; mite box superintendent, Mrs. M. Adams; baby band superintendent, Mrs. J. McNaught; organist, Miss Florence Macklin.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Talling, the retiring president, for her faithfulness during the past two years and in responding she said she wished to leave with them this thought of W. E. Barton's, "I spoke a kind word, almost thoughtlessly and a long time afterwards one thanked me for it, with tears in his eye. Then I thought since kindness costs so little and helps so much, why am I not always kind"?

At the conclusion of the meeting, a dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Talling.

Personals.

YOUNG PEOPLE HOLD MEETING

Press Representative Appointed for Millbrook United Church Society.

DEBATE MAIN FEATURE

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Dec. 13—The Young People's Society of the United Church held its regular meeting in the Sunday School auditorium on Monday evening, with a large attendance, and the missionary vice-president, Mrs. Cecil Hubbeard, in the chair.

Mrs. Hubbeard read the Scripture lesson from Matthew 16, and also an explanatory essay that added to the helpfulness of this feature of the devotional period, a number of the young people leading in prayer.

The president, B. B. Dawson, took charge of the business period, mentioning the appointment of a reporter for the local paper, Kenneth Skitch taking this duty. The matter of paying the fee of twenty-five cents and having the names enrolled on the membership list, was also referred to, Arnold Fallis looking after this matter, with the secretary, Edward Nattress.

The pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, suggested the use of envelopes for missionary giving, W. Byam being the forward movement secretary; as there are many practices now under way, particularly for the drama, "Esther" which is being prepared for New Year's night, and in which over forty of the young people are taking part, the president explained that the regular Monday night meetings of the Y.P.S. will of necessity be postponed until January 1929.

Miss Marian Earle gave a Christmas reading, and the orchestra recently formed in connection with the Y.P.S. gave one or two selections, the members being: Kenneth Skitch, W. Byam, Piercey Pitt, William Skitch, and Miss Francis Jones, pianist.

Debate Main Feature.

The main feature of the evening, a debate on the subject: "Resolved that missions and missionaries have done more good for mankind than science and scientists", was next called for, the supporters of the affirmative being Dorothy McDowell and Mary Burnham, while Jack Stinson and Henry Raper took sides for the negative. These were young debaters from Principal Dawson's room in the public school, where debates are regularly held each week, and they certainly surprised the listeners with their ease on the platform, and the lucid manner in which they presented their arguments.

The judges were Miss Margaret Luxon, R. Larmer and G. Wynne, and the decision was given as two to one in favor of the negative, though the rider was added, "by a very small margin."

Mr. Dawson announced that the winners in the series of debates being held at the school will be presented with their award at the concert, under public school auspices, to be held in the town hall on December 20.

A missionary contest, the answer to each question ending in 'age', gave employment to everyone and was full of interest, the Mizpah benediction bringing a profitable and interesting gathering to a close.

WOMEN HOLD ANNUAL BAZAAR

Christ's Church Guild Has Very Successful Social Function.

MANY CUSTOMERS

(Examiner Correspondence).

OMEMEE, Dec. 13.—The annual bazaar and supper of Christ's Church Women's Guild was held in the Sunday School-room on Thursday afternoon and was a very successful and sociable function. The gloominess of the weather out-of-doors seemed to make the arrangements the more cosy and attractive inside, and the saleladies had no trouble in disposing of their goods to the many customers. Promptly at four o'clock the Rev. A. T. Weir pronounced the benediction and declared the bazaar open.

Miss Irene Clemett, the president of the Guild, was the general convenor, while Mrs. A. Hill and Mrs. Robert Bannon received the numerous guests.

Booths were arranged around the room and the ladies evidently spared no time and care in making ready for the affair.

Mrs. V. Jones and Mrs. F. Bent were in charge of the first booth, which contained the woollen articles, linens and many useful gifts to the value of one dollar. In the same stall was the linens, presided over by Miss Annie Stephenson and Mrs. E. Jamieson, and contained all kinds of fine needlework for bedrooms dining-room and personal use.

Mrs. G. Newman and Miss E. Robinson sold aprons of various styles, which were very attractive, in a booth nearby.

A gentlemen's booth, termed thus because all donations came from that sex, was a new idea and added much to the funds. Here, anything from a bag of potatoes, apples and other vegetables and bulbs to a bag of flour, could be purchased from the saleladies, Mrs. R. James and Miss Lila Fee.

The home-cooking and candy booth was presided over by Mrs. George McQuade and Misses Essie Woods and Mamie Lang, who did a land office business from the well-laden tables of dainties offered for sale.

The fish pond was a rival to the candy booth for the junior visitors, and for five and ten cents value was given. Mrs. D. Deyell and Miss Marion Dickson were the ladies in charge.

Very Attractive.

The tea-room with its small tables was very attractive, with its lighted candles and bouquets of late fall flowers, and was well patronized and well managed by a competent committee of ladies: Mrs. W. G. Stephenson, Mrs. G. D. Gowans, Mrs. H. McQuade, Mrs. T. C. Stephenson, and Misses Hilda and Susie Clarke, assisted by Misses Daisy Adams, Maggie McQuade, Gertrude Fee, Phyllis Morton, Elsie Chatten, Helen Johnson, and Audrey Weir. Other ladies who were in charge of the kitchen were: Mrs. George Fee, Mrs. H. Middleton, Mrs. R. J. Cornwall, Mrs. Wilbert Fee, Mrs. F. Clemett, Mrs. T. Woods, and Mrs. R. J. Adams.

The ladies are justly proud of their success, the proceeds of the affair being $280.

To Give Entertainment.

At a special meeting of the Ladies' Aid of Trinity United Church, on Thursday afternoon, it was decided to give the Sunday School the annual treat from off the Christmas tree on Friday evening, December 21. Each teacher will be responsible for one or more numbers from their class to make up the program.

A THREE DAYS COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

"Dear Sir, 96, Vaughan Road, Camberwell, S.E.5

I have been taking Virol-and-Milk ever since I have been boxing as a Professional, and I owe my wonderful stamina to your preparation. When I first saw the light of day 20 years ago I weighed just 3 lbs. 2 ozs. and as I only gained 2 ozs. in two weeks my mother naturally got very anxious. As a last resource I was fed on Virol, and as I gradually improved in weight and strength it has always been the chief thing in my diet, and now I can go through a 20 Rounds Championship Contest without the least exertion. Believe me, faithfully yours,"

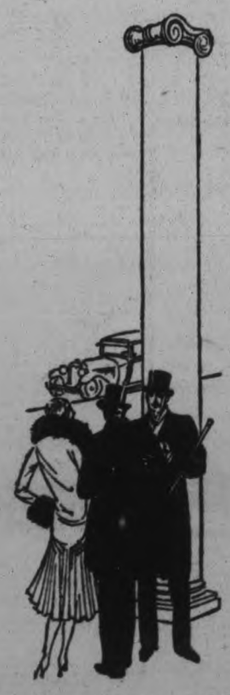
JUDGE THE EXCELLENCE OF THE NEW FORD BY DRIVING IT

When talk turns to motors—in theatre lobbies, in smoking cars, hotels, clubs—you hear the New Ford compared with all makes. Stories are told of the swiftness and ease with which the New Ford covers difficult highways; of distance-consuming travel hour after hour; of the breathless rush in high gear up the steepest of hills.

Only by driving the New Ford, say owners, can you appreciate the effortless joy of perfect car control. Gears shift with silent precision. The steering wheel responds to the lightest touch. Transverse springs and shock absorbers smooth rough roads. A gallon of gasoline takes you 25 to 30 miles. Oil consumption is unusually low. And, when the occasion arises, the fully enclosed six-brake system grips the flying wheels with silent power.

Low lines, colour harmony, sparkling nickel, sturdy steel spoked wheels and full balloon tires give the New Ford grace and beauty. Owners of the most expensive cars marvel at its thrilling performance. Many, in fact, are buying New Fords to supplement their larger cars.



Every item of equipment that adds to comfort, convenience and safety is included in the New Ford as it is delivered to you, from spare wheel and theft-proof ignition lock to the windshield of shatterproof glass that gives protection and clear vision.

Ford dealers everywhere await the opportunity to give you a demonstration ride. Put the New Ford through its paces. You will then appreciate that car values have changed. A truly fine automobile has come into the light car world.

If you prefer to buy out of income, you will find the time payment plan offered by all Ford dealers most attractive.

Your Ford dealer will prove the performance of the New Ford by demonstration months. Retiring in disposition, she found her first day at school very trying, recalling, however, her teacher's remark: "Now you will surely get along nicely, for you seem such a bright little girl," and her kindness in many other ways, though the lady herself had the sight of only one eye.

PIONEER DAYS ARE RECALLED

One Store at Cavanville

To the one store at Cavanville little Ann Jane Crozier would sometimes go, by blazed trail through the deep woods, to bring home groceries and particularly the tea, "because mother loved a good cup of tea"; but mother was always so anxious for the safety of her young daughter she would be sure to come quite a way to meet her on the return journey, saying, "My, I was fretting about you all the time you were gone."

Sometimes, with mother, the trip would be to Millbrook, on foot, of course, and through the woods, each carrying a big cake of maple sugar to exchange for household commodities. A big sugar bush meant a great deal of very hard work, for even the children mus t help by bringing wood and keeping the pots of sap, suspended on a felled tree, boiling. But there was always plenty both of syrup and big cakes of sugar, to supply the family larder until another sugar season came round.

It is surprising how correctly Mrs. Porteous can repeat from memory numerous hymns from the Methodist hymn-book in use in her younger years, and passages of scripture learned in days gone by. She can read even fine print without the use of glasses, thread a needle, mend her clothes, and do other sewing. A lifelong Methodist, she tells many incidents of "protracted meetings," which were commonly held in her childhood and frequently lasted for weeks, and can repeat verbatim the wording of the prayers made by some of the older men, each having expressions peculiar to himself and his religious experiences. Overcome by excitement, incidental to these gatherings, one or two of the women would jerk the bonnets from their heads and trample them underfoot, to such a high would religious emotion carry them.

Grain Cut With Scythe

Naturally Mrs. Porteous remembers when grain was cut with a scythe, the children being given a small "hook" and set to work to reap round the many stumps, while father cut a wider swath in the open parts of the field. A flail did the threshing until one man started going about with an early edition of the modern threshing machine; a team of horses on a treadmill supplying the power; and though it was slow at least it proved an advance on hand methods, and the man was generally employed. The gradual method of clearing the ground may be gathered from the fact that Mr. Crozier would contract to cut ten acres of wood during the winter, an ax being the only tool employed, and no experience in previous years in Ireland assisting with either skill or knowledge for the task.

When still but a little girl, and because she was the eldest of the family, Ann Jane must rise long before daybreak on a cold, winter's morning, and go out to the log barn giving such assistance as she could, while her father cleaned the grain, and tied it up in bags, afterward loading the sleigh for the long drive to Port Hope where it would be sold, and needed groceries brought home; even then, the start for "town" was made while it was still scarcely more than daylight. This was after James Crozier had made a trip to Montreal, that took five or six days, and had brought back his first team of horses.

It was a gala day when the railway went through, and Mrs. Porteous remembers seeing the first train, gaily decorated with flags, bunting and evergreen, a free ride being given to the terminal point at Midland; the wonder was that the engine could draw the crowd that filled to overflowing the coaches on that important occasion.

It is more than thirty-three years since Mrs. Porteous' husband died, their hame for the last eight years of his life being in Bethany, where for several years afterward his widow continued to reside. It is two years or more since she came to Millbrook, boarding with Mrs. W. Leith, where she has such care and attention as are necessary. She is, however, quite capable of walking out every day, and looking after her business affairs, her mind being clear and active; she retains an interest in current events, reading the newspapers daily, and enjoys sitting in the sunshine on a south verandah, even at this season of the year.

The opening of the Fallis' church, in Manvers, and now located at Manvers Station, is very clear in Mrs. Porteous' memory; the hymns sung, and even the minister's text, being recited readily. The former Methodist church at Bethany was where Mr. and Mrs. Porteous had their membership, and to which they gave financial support.

Mrs. Harold Cathcart, of Springville, and Mrs. A. Mahood, of Peterborough, are nieces of Mrs. Porteous', and there are four nephews, S. Armstrong, of Bethany; Stanley Armstrong, and John and Wallace Martin.

DAIRYMEN ARE HONORED

been formed sooner and wished it all future success.

Work Agreeable.

W. H. Bailey, dairy instructor for the district of Madoc, expressed his pleasure at being present at such an enjoyable function. He was not a stranger in town, having on several occasions been asked to score cheese exhibited at the fair. He was reminded, he said, of a visit made to this town several years ago. On that occasion he had asked a man interested in the local cheese industry about the people of the district. He had replied that they were all good citizens but that they would all steal waxy. This remark brought applause, as former days with their whey shortages were recalled, it being a case of first come, first served then. He thought the work of the instructors was much more agreeable now than it had been two years ago. Then the instructor was looked upon as somewhat of an enemy. Now he was regarded on much more friendly terms. In closing, he congratulated the factories of this district on their outstanding success of the past season.

M. E. Maybee, M.P., expressed his appreciation for the invitation he had received and the opportunity it had afforded him. On behalf of Mrs. Maybee as well, he expressed his appreciation to the ladies for the excellent manner in which the meal had been served. The cheesemakers of the province were to be commended for their work during the past season, and particularly those of the counties which comprised the Central Ontario district. Such organizations as was represented at the banquet had much to do with the success of the industry, and such social functions as the present banquet had much to do with the success of the organization. As for the product itself, the cheesemaker must have good milk if he were to make a specially good product. He had read in a press despatch where the County of Carleton had lost $60,000 in poor cheese this season. A deputation had approached the County Council for a grant for the purpose of offering prizes to the makers in an attempt to raise the standard of the product.

Central Ontario had exhibited some excellent fruit at the C.N.E. in 1928. It was an inspiration to view the attractive display. The United Counties of Northumberland and Durham were an old and historic part of the district. Since the time when Champlain passed down the Trent waterway on one of his voyages into the interior, history had been in the making here. To-day the cheesemakers were making history in the dairy industry. The newly formed Central Ontario Dairymen's Association was another step in history. Quoting the words of one of Britain's leading statesmen of a few years ago Mr. Maybee said that while individuals formed communities it took institutions to make a nation. He hoped that the time would not be far distant when the counties of the district would be included in the bovine tuberculosis restricted area. At the present time the demand for dairy supplies across the border was so great that the government was directing its attention to the counties bordering on the St. Lawrence River. He thought Central Ontario would soon be given some further consideration. In concluding his remarks Mr. Maybee presented the silver cup which is the county trophy, to Roy Brown of Stanwood. Brown, he said, had established a wonderful record, with all 100 per cent. cheese, and several lots of extras.

James Irwin, government inspector for this district, rose to speak but the diners called a halt while they sang "For he's a jolly good fellow." When the singing subsided and he could be heard, Irwin said that of the many affairs of this nature which he had attended recently the present one was the most successful. One feature of the evening was the fact that the three prize winners of the district were present Robert MacLaughlin of Hastings, Roy Brown of Stanwood and John Hull of Prince Edward County. Although the local organization was but one year old, the standard of cheese had been raised from 93 to 98 per cent. The extra profits from this high grade product would be sufficient to reimburse the makers and patrons for the care they had taken. The value of the association would also be indicated by them. With such results his work had been a pleasure. Ontario cheese, he said, compared well with that of the rest of the world. The premium price of from one to two cents per pound which it commanded would be of benefit to the patrons. The rapid progress made during the past season had he believed impressed the public with the fact that cheese makers were not ordinary day laborers but men skilled in their profession.

Three Prize Winners

J. P. Griffth, Toronto, editor of The Milk Producer, said that it had always been a pleasure to come to Campbellford, and on this occasion the banquet had been an added attraction. The fact that he had been eating restaurant fare for some time, tended to materially increase his appreciation of the excellent fare which the ladies had provided. An unique feature of the evening was the presence of the three prize winners, he thought, and prophesied greater competition than ever during the 1929 season. He thought, however, that any further advancement in the grade of cheese would be largely in the hands of the milk producers. He was of the opinion that the cheesemakers were doing all that they possibly could to maintain a high standard product. He wishes the district every possible success in the future.

Robert MacLaughlin, Hastings, champion cheese maker of the province of Ontario, carried his laurels modestly. He was loudly applauded as he rose to speak. His success, he claimed, was not entirely due to his personal efforts. He was not a superman, he believed. His factory was well equipped and the conditions under which he worked were as nearly ideal as possible. The system of grading employed was an asset to the industry and greatly superior to the district where he was born and where he learned his trade. The high standard, he thought, had been much easier arrived at than it would be to maintain. He intended to make every effort to hold the championship in 1929 which he had won in 1928.

W. E. Brennan president of the Central Ontario association and also of the Madoc association, said that he had always had the most profound respect for the Campbellford district. Its standard of cheese had been ninety-nine per cent for the past year while that of the province had been only ninety-eight. He wondered what would be the result when the turnips were entirely eliminated from the Campbellford district, the fruit from the Prince Edward district, and the huckleberries from Madoc. This remark provoked the mirth of listeners, since it touched on a subject much debated in the dairy circles. Brennan concluded his interesting and humorous remarks by expressing his appreciation of the banquet and the excellent program which had been presented.

LINDSAY DENTIST HAS 90TH BIRTHDAY

Dr. J. Neeland Has Been Practicing in Canada Since 1861.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

DUNSFORD, December 13. — Dr. J. Neelands, of Lindsay, who on Saturday celebrated his 90th birthday, has been practising dentistry in Canada since 1861, and was the first dentist in Canada to use gas when extracting teeth. On Friday evening he was tendered a banquet in the Board Room of the First United Church by the Official Board of the church, of which he has been a member for the past fifty years.

Dr. Neelands was born in Brampton and went to school there. Previous to 1861 he attended clinic in New York, where he took out his license. He lived two or three years in Port Hope, and came to Lindsay in 1866. In 1868 he passed a Board of Examiners, and in 1899 received a degree for a postgraduate course in the Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario. He also took a special course in bridge, crown, and porcelain work and orthodontia at this college.

Dr. Neelands' powers of mind and body seem still unaffected by the lapse of time.

Among the guests present at the banquet were Rev. Dr. T. E. Holling, pastor of First United Church, Drs. J. L. Sutton, J. A. White, C. Laidley, J. A. Ross, Messrs. C. E. Weeks, William Flavelle, James Boxall, Alexander Horn, and Thomas H. Stinson, K.C., M.P.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY ELECTS OFFICERS FOR YEAR

Regular Meeting Held of George Street United Church Society.

REPORTS READ

Members Voice Their Regret at Departure of Rev. J. E. Todd and Family.

The regular December meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of George Street United Church was held in the Board Room of the Sunday School hall on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock with a good attendance of members. The president, Mrs. E. W. Coon presided and opened the meeting with prayer. Group "I" under the leadership of Mrs. J. E. Middleton had charge of the devotional exercises. The Bible reading of the Christmas story was read by Mrs. C. E. Smith. Mrs. J. Long led in a prayer of thanks for the "Unspeakable Gift" after which Mrs. H. Foot gave a reading entitled, "The Message of Christmas" by Ralph Connor.

Reports were given by the secretary and treasurer and by the supply secretary, Mrs. Mathias, Sick and Visiting, Mrs. Hales, Baby Band, Mrs. H. Strong and Twilight Mission Circle, Mrs. W. H. Morton.

Reports Read

Wonderful reports for the year were given by the group leaders under the convenorship of Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Knox, Miss Might, Mrs. McMillan, Mrs. Rowe, Mrs. Spence. Band, Mrs. H. Strong and Twilight Mather, and Mrs. J. E. Middleton and when the treasurer had received their collctions for the month it was found that they had greatly exceeded their allocation of $1000 which at the beginning of the year was felt to be an almost impossible attainment. This report was received with great applause.

Rev. J. E. Todd asked the W. M.S. to take charge of the mid-weekly prayer meeting on Feb. 6 and it was resolved to take this work. Mrs. S. Armstrong was appointed to audit the book for year 1928. Mrs Coon before leaving the chair for the election of officers thanked all the members for their co-operation and especially the executive and group leaders.

Rev. J. E. Todd took the chair for the election of officers for the year 1929 all of which were elected by acclamation. Mrs. Walker on behalf of the nominating committee composed of Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. Rowe, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Stinson, and herself, gave the report voicing their regret at the contemplated departure of Rev. Mrs. A. Mowat spoke a few words in behalf of the Women's Council urging them to take a greater interest in this organization. A resolution was passed making group leaders automatically vice presidents of the organization. The society also expressed their thanks to the Co-workers Bible Class for their donation of $10.00. ARRIVAL OF PRINCE AIDED IN DECISION

Premier Baldwin Is Said To Have Explained Urgent Need of Operation.

LONDON, December 13. — The illness of the King continues to overshadow all proceedings in the British Parliament, and from Westminster late last night came the first authoritative word of the important part the Prince of Wales played in yesterday's dramatic events.

It was stated that one of the reasons for the journey of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin to Folkestone to meet the Prince, even after he had given out word that he wanted no official or family welcome home was to explain to him the imminent need of an operation.

It was also stated in this connection that having waited late Tuesday night at the Palace to see the Prince upon his arrival, the physicians took the steps preliminary to an early operation yesterday.

The timely arrival of the Royal heir in London has considerably eased the responsibilities resting on the doctors in connection with the renewed infection and the fresh action which became necessary in consequence.

To this extent, it is remarked in political circles, the British navy, and the Italian, Swiss, French and British authorities, who did so much to speed the return of the Prince, have contributed to the efforts of the physicians, upon which the thoughts of the whole empire are centred.

In this connection what would be a more appropriate Christmas gift than a subscription to the Daily Examiner to former residents of the city so that they could keep in touch with events leading up to Old Home Week.

Place an order for a subscription to some out of town friend of yours and it will be forwarded regularly, the first copy with a nice Christmas card explaining the gift.

"Man in the Moon" Myths Told in Reading Selection

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

Enclosed is a two cent stamp for which I would like you to send me the sketches I have marked on the coupon. I sure do enjoy reading your page and look forward to the papers every week. My husband likes to read them also. I think your page is a wonderful addition to the paper and hope to enjoy it for a long time yet.

Wishing you every success, I remain,
Yours truly,
Mrs. W. H."

Quebec.

* * *

I compliment you on having a so discerning husband, "Mrs. W. H." It won't do any husband any harm to read what other men's wives write about life.

Write and tell the neighbors something of life in Quebec.

"Dear Marion:

I am a new comer to your fair city and enjoy your page in The Examiner very much and look forward every evening to the helps and recipes as I cut them all out and paste them in a book I keep for that purpose, and I am looking forward to trying them soon and perhaps will send in something new I have later on.

I am sending the coupon for the Christmas ideas with the others marked, hoping I am not asking too much.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. T. W."

* * *

The neighbors welcome you to Peterborough, "Mrs. T. W." and hope you may enjoy life here. If we can help in any way, just let's know.

I think a scrap book containing recipes is a wonderful help—one is almost sure, after a few months, to find in it something for any emergency.

"Dear Marion:

Would you please send me the four page folder for home-made Christmas gifts? I read your page every day and think it's wonderful. I always keep all the recipes and useful hints.

Here is one which I will pass along. When blackening the stove if you do not wear gloves make a good lather of toilet soap and let it dry on the hands. After you are done wash the hands thoroughly and the blackening will come right off.

Do any of the readers find it difficult to get the stains off the sink, wash bowl, or bath tub? I find a little baking soda on a damp cloth real good to take out the stains.

Wishing your page the best of success, I remain, Nonsense."

I can assure you, "Mrs. C. J. H." that the neighbors appreciate your Christmas Cake recipe. Isn't it nice to be able to pass on helps like this?

"Dear Marion:

I have been a silent admirer of your page for some time. To collect recipes and try each has been my hobby for some time and now I have a daily source of information.

Good luck to you and although it is advanced, I wish you a Merry Christmas in case I don't write again.

I believe I can use your contributions, "Marie Christine," and thanks you very much. I'll be looking for the other suggestions.

"Dear Marion,

Now in the first place I don't believe "Thinker" really thinks of these things except that they are here and are very useful. I really believe he just wrote that letter to start something.

I don't deny that man has invented many things and ways to make our work easier but they used their knowledge to make things easier for themselves first. Then they gave us some attention and I don't believe their only object was to enlighten us particularly. Along in the same thought was fame and fortune for themselves.

Years ago it was the women folk who made the first flour and from that, bread. They were the first to weave cloth from yarns they made from wool.

"Did "Thinker" ever hear this story of the poor widow who was ashamed of the clothing her only son wore and so in despair she clipped a sheep, from the wool she made yarn and from the yarn she wove cloth enough to make a suit of clothes. On the next Sabbath, the suit finished, her boy was able to go dressed as warmly and as decently as the others.

Electricity is a very very useful and wonderful invention, but I don't believe any more credit should go to the man who invented it than to the woman who made the suit of clothes.

Myself I haven't invented anything and I would like to know what "Thinker" has added to the list of man's accomplishments. Perhaps he is just basking in the glory of his ancestors.

Yours truly,
Councellor."

* * *

A very much to-the-point letter, "Councellor," and a real answer to "Thinker."

"Dear Marion:

What a delightful surprise I got on my return home from a shopping expedition. I was met at the door with "Mother, there's a parcel for you; hurry and let us see what is inside." When the outside wrapping was removed there was the most beautiful box, which brought forth, "Oh, Santa Claus must have been here," and then on opening the box, what perfectly lovely correspondence cards. They made me think of orange blossoms, and wedding cards. I suppose it was the pretty touch of silver on them. Many, many thanks for them, Marion. I can assure you right now I am going to do a lot of writing. Who could resist it with such cards?

Your reply to "Thinker" was just fine. You certainly did not spare him. Such a man should have lived three or four centuries ago. He asks what building has any woman built, what painting has she painted, etc., etc. Let him just read the autobiographies of some famous men who have enriched this world of ours and he will find that almost without exception they give their MOTHERS credit for what they are. They are the living structures that women have built.

When I read so-called "Thinkers" harangue, I found myself once more agreeing with the good Old Book, which says "All men are fools." Let me whisper something to you, Marion. I believe that is why we love them so. What on earth would they do without us, the dear things.

Once again a thousand thanks for the cards.
Sheila."

* * *

I'm glad you liked the cards, "Sheila," and appreciate your splendid answer to "Thinker."

"Dear Marion:

This is the first I have written and I must say I enjoy reading your wonderful page.

I would like to know from you or some kind neighbor if there is any way to remove cherry stains from a white or colored garment. I am also sending in a help clip.

I think you sure gave "Thinker" what he deserved. I generally read the Whatnot first and then when I've finished your page I clip out the recipes to keep. Any I try I always find them delicious.

Well, I must close as my letter is getting too long. Wishing you every success, I remain,
Brown Eyes."

Lakefield.

* * *

I'm asking the neighbors to answer your SOS, "Brown Eyes." I'm glad you like the recipes—our neighbors surely do know their cooking!

"Dear Marion:

If busy to-day, lay this away in your drawer until a more convenient time to read it. I certainly thank you very sincerely for your invite to write again. It made me feel like Jobe, surely fitted in with a very old rhyme by mother used to sing:

"Old Jobe he was a patient man
A rich man of the east.
But he soon was brought to poverty
His sorrows they did increase:
But he bore it with great patience,
And never did repine
He always trusted in the Lord
And he soon got rich again."

I did feel rich last evening. You see when Mariana suggested a new column, my heart I think did miss a beat or two lest our much-loved and respected lyric would be crowded out, but now I see it will occur. I was much amused at, "Husband, husband, cease your strife," and I have truly found that the second wife does put all to flight, but let me just whisper this to you, sometimes they are awfully glad to come back for we all make mistakes. But God is fully able to extricate us from all the webs we tangle ourselves in if we trust Him fully.

Yours thankfully,
Just Thankful."

* * *

I'm pleased that you like the new column, "Just Thankful," and I can assure you that the Lyric will continue. Thanks, too, for the page you enclose. I'll certainly use the poem sometime. If I had your address I could return the paper, as I'm sure you would like to have it. I've typed out the poem.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHORS CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

To-day's selection is an answer to a neighbor's request for the real fable of the man in the moon. This extract is taken from "Curious Myths," by S. Baring-Gould. It is the longest we have yet had in our column, but the subject is so interesting that the reading will be well repaid.

DECEMBER 13, 1928

THE MAN IN THE MOON

Every one knows that the moon is inhabited by a man with a bundle of sticks on his back, who has been exiled thither for many centuries, and who is so far off that he is beyond the reach of death.

He has once visited this earth, if the nursery rhyme is to be credited, when it asserts that—

"Th Man in the Moon
Came down too soon,
And asked his way to Norwich;"

but wh ther he ever reached that city, the same authority does not state.

The story as told by nurses is, that this man was found by Moses gathering sticks on a Sabbath, and that, for this crime, he was doomed to reside in the moon till the end of all things; and they refer to Numbers xv. 32-26:—

"And while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they found a man that gathered sticks upon the Sabbath day. And they that found him gathering sticks brought him unto Moses and Aaron, and unto all the congregation. And they put him in ward, because it was not declared what should be done to him. And the Lord said unto Moses, The Man shall be surely put to death; all the congregation brought him without the camp, and stoned him with stones till he died."

Of course, in the sacred writings there is no allusion to the moon.

The German tale is as follows:—Ages ago there went one Sunday morning an old man into the wood to hew sticks. He cut a fagot and slung it on a stout staff, cast it over his shoulder, and began to trudge home with his burden. On his way he met a handsome man in Sunday suit, walking towards the church; this man stopped and asked the fagot-bearer, "Do you know that this is Sunday on earth, when all must rest from their labors?"

"Sunday on earth, or Monday in heaven, it is all one to me!" laughed the wood-cutter.

"Then bear your bundle forever," answered the stranger; "and as you value no Sunday on earth, yours shall be a perpetual Moon-day in heaven; and you shall stand for eternity in the moon, a warning to all Sabbath-breakers." Thereupon the stranger vanished, and the man was caught up with his stock and his fagot into the moon, where he stands yet.

The superstition seem to be old in Germany, for the full moon is spoken of as wadel, or wedel, a fagot. Tobler relates the story thus: "An arma maket alawel am sonnti holz ufglesa. Do hedem der liebe Gott dwahl gloh,ob er lieber wott ider sonn verbrenna oder im mo verfrura, do willer lieber inn mo ihi. Dromm siedma no jetz an ma im mo inna, wenns wedel ist. Er hed a puschelt uffem rogga." That is to say, he was given the choice of burning in the sun, or of freezing in the moon; he chose the latter, and now at full moon he is to be seen seated with his bundle of fagots on his back.

In Schaumburg-Lippe, the story goes, that a man and a woman stand in the moon, the man because he strewed brambles and thorns on the church path, so as to hinder people from attending Mass on Sunday morning; the woman because she made butter on that day. The man carries his bundle of thorns, the woman her butter-tub. A similar tale is told in Swabia and in Marken. Fischart says, that there "is to be seen in the moon a manikin who stole wood;" and Praetorius, in his description of the world, that "superstitious people assert that the black flecks in the moon are a man who gathered wood on a Sabbath, and is therefore turned into stone."

The Dutch household myth is, that the unhappy man was caught stealing vegetables. Dante calls him Cain:—

"... Now doth Cain with fork of thorns confine,
On either hemisphere ouchiay the wave
Beneath the towers of Seville. Yesternight
The moon was round."—Hell, cant. XX.

And again,—

"... Tell, I pray thee, whence the gloomy spots
Upon this body, which below on earth
Give rise to talk of Cain in fabling quaint?"

Paradise, Cant. II.

Chauser, in the "Testament of Cresside," adverts to the man in the moon, and attributes to him the same idea of theft. Of Lady Cynthia, or the moon, he says,—

"Her gite was gray and full of spottis blake,
And on her brest a chorle painted full even,
Bering a bush of thornis on his backe,
Whiche for his theft might clime so ner the heaven."

Ritson, among his "Ancient Songs," gives one extracted from a manuscript of the time of Edward II., on the Man in the Moon, but in very obscure language. The first verse, altered into more modern orthography, runs as follows:—

"Man in the Moon stand and stit,
On his bot-fork his burden he beareth,
It is much wonder that he do na doun slit,
For doubt lest he fall he shudd'reth and shivereth.

"When the frost freezes must chill he bide,
The thorns be keen his attire so teareth,
Nis no wight in the world there wot when he syt,
Ne bote it by the hedge what weeds he weareth."

Alexander Necham, or Nequam, a writer of the twelfth century, in commenting on the dispersed shadows in the moon, thus alludes to the vulgar belief: "Do you know what they call the rustic in the moon, who carries the fagot of sticks? So that one vulgarly speaking says,—

"See the rustic in the Moon,
How his bundle weighs him down;
Thus his sticks the truth reveal,
It never profits man to steal."

Shakespeare refers to the same individual in his "Midsummer Night's Dream." Quince the carpenter, giving directions for the performance of the play of "Pyramus and Thisbe," orders: "One must come in with a bush of thorns and a lantern, and say he comes in to disfigure, or to present, the person of Moonshine." And the enacter of this part says, "All I have to say is, to tell you that the lantern is the moon; I the man in the moon; this thorn-bush my thorn-bush; and this dog my dog."

Also "Tempest," Act. 11, Scene 2:—

"Cal. Hadst thou not dropt from heaven?

"Steph. Out o' th' moon, I do assure thee. I was the man in th' moon when time was.

"Cal. I have seen thee in her: and I do adore thee. My mistress showed me thee, and thy dog, and thy bush."

The dog I have myself had pointed out to me by an old Devonshire crone. If popular superstition places a dog in the moon, it puts a lamb in the sun; for in the same county it is said that those who see the sun rise on Easter-day, may behold in the orb the lamb and flag.

I believe this idea of locating animals in the two great luminaries of heaven to be very ancient, and to be a relic of a primeval superstition of the Aryan race.

There is an ancient pictorial representation of our friend the Sabbath-breaker in Gyffin Church, near Conway. The roof of the chancel is divided into compartments, in four of which are the Evangelistic symbols, rudely, yet effectively painted. Besides these symbols is delineated in each compartment an orb of heaven. The sun, the moon, and two stars, are placed at the feet of the Angel, the Bull, the Lion, and the Eagle. In the representation of the moon, in the disk is the conventional man with his bundle of sticks, but without the dog. There is also a curious seal appended to a deed preserved in the Record Office, dated the 9th year of Edward the Third (1335), bearing the man in the moon as its device. The deed is one of conveyance of a messuage, barn, and four acres of ground, in the parish of Kingston-on-Thames, from Walter de Grendesse, clerk, to Margaret, his mother. On the seal we see the man carrying his sticks, and the moon surrounds him. There are also a couple of stars added, perhaps to show that he is in the sky. The legend on the seal reads:—"Te Waltere docebo cur spinas phebo gero," which may be translated. "I will teach thee, Walter, why I carry thorns in the moon."

The general superstition with regard to the spots in the moon may briefly be summed up thus: A man is located in the moon, he is a thief or Sabbath-breaker; he has a pole over his shoulder, from which is suspended a bundle of sticks or thorns. In some places a woman is believed to accompany him, and she has a butter-tub with her; in other localities she is replaced by a dog.

The belief in the Moon-man seems to exist among the natives of British Columbia; for I read in one of Mr. Duncan's letters to the Church Missionary Society, "One very dark night I was told that there was a moon to see on the beach. On going to see, there was an illuminated disk, with the figure of a man upon it. The water was then very low, and one of the conjuring parties had lit up this disk at the water's edge. They had made it of wax, with great exactness, and presently it was at full. It was an imposing sight. Nothing could be seen around it; but the Indians suppose that the medicine party are then holding converse with the man in the moon—After a short time the moon waned away, and the conjuring party returned whooping to their house."

Now, let us turn to Scandinavian mythology, and see what we learn from that source.

Many, the moon, stole two children from their parents, and carried them up to heaven. Their names were Hjuki and Bil. They had been drawing water from the well Byrgir, in the bucket Soegr, suspended from the pole Simul, which they bore upon their shoulders. These children, pole, and bucket were placed in heaven, "where they could be seen from earth." This refers undoubtedly to the spots in the moon; and so the Swedish peasantry explain these spots to this day as representing a boy and a girl bearing a pail of water between them. Are we not reminded at once of our nursery rhyme—

"Jack and Jill went up a hill
To fetch a pail of water;
Jack fell down, and broke his crown,
And Jill came tumblin after"?

This verse, which to us seems at first sight nonsense, I have no hesitation in saying has a high antiquity, and refers to the Eddaic Hjuki and Bil. The names indicate as much. Hjuki, in Norse, pronounced Juki, which would readily become Jack; and Bil for the sake of euphony, and in order to give a female name to one, of the children, would become Jill.

The fall of Jack, and the subsequent fall of Jill, simply represent the vanishing of one moon-spot after another, as the moon wanes.

But the old Norse myth had a deeper signification than merely an explanation of the moon-spots.

Hjuki is derived from the verb jakka, to heap or pile together, to assemble and increase; and Bil from bila, to break up or dissolve. Hjuki and Bil, therefore, signify nothing more than the waxing and waning of the moon, and the water they are represented as bearing signifies the fact that the rainfall depends on the phases of the moon. Waxing and waning were individualized, and the meteorological fact of the connection of the rain with the moon was represented by the children as water-bearers.

But though Jack and Jill became by degrees dissevered in the popular mind from the moon, the original myth went through a fresh phase, and exists still under a new form. The Norse superstition attributed theft to the moon, and the vulgar soon began to believe that the figure they saw in the moon was the thief. The lunar specks certainly may be made to resemble one figure, and only a lively imagination can discern two. The girl soon dropped out of popular mythology, the boy oldened into a venerable man, he retained his pole, and the bucket was transformed into the thing he had stolen—sticks or vegetables. The theft was in some places exchanged for Sabbath-breaking, especially among those who were acquainted with the Bible story of the stick-gatherer.

The Indian superstition is worth examining, because of the connection existing between Indian and European mythology, on account of our belonging to the same Aryan stock.

According to a Buddhist legend, Sakyamunni himself, in one of his earlier stages of existence, was a hare, and lived in friendship with a fox and an ape. In order to test the virtue of the Bodhisattwa, Indra came to the friends, in the form of an old man, asking for food. Hare, ape, and fox went forth in quest of victuals for their guest. The two latter returned from their foraging expedition successful, but the hare had found nothing. Then, rather than that he should treat the old man with inhospitality, the hare had a fire kindled, and cast himself into the flames, that he might himself become food for his guest. In reward for this act of self-sacrifice, Indra carried the hare to heaven, and placed him in the moon.

Here we have an old man and a hare in connection with the lunar planet, just as in Shakespeare we have a fagot-bearer and a dog.

The fable rests upon the name of the moon in Sanskrit, cacin, or "that marked with the hare;" but whether the belief in the spots taking the shape of a hare gave the name cacine to the moon, or the lunar name cacin originated the belief, it is impossible for us to say.

It is estimated that one American worker produces today about as much as four British workers.

"Dear Marion,

I enjoy very much reading the Women's Page in The Examiner. Here is my problem:

Marion, is it right to let a boy friend kiss you the first time you go out with him? Or is it better to refuse him?

Please, Marion, answer me right away, for I have nobody to tell me, or advise me in anything.

Yours truly,
'Puzzled Gilda'."

ANSWER BY QUO VADIS

Well Gilda, it all depends on what you think about kissing. Some boys seem to think a girl expects to be kissed. In most cases it doesn't mean a thing. Generally, if a boy is out to have a good time, and to give one, he takes a kiss, if he wants it. But if he asks for one that is different, and I would tell him, without being too serious, that I'd rather wait until we knew each other better. Kissing in itself is not harmful, but if it leads to familiarities, then the trouble begins. Never let yourself pay too big a price to hold anyone Gilda, as no one is worth that. On the other hand, do not take kissing too seriously while you are so young.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

The new pull-on gaiter is shown at the upper left-hand corner. It is of tan wool jersey with a figured border coming just below the knee. The flesh-colored stocking indicated at the right is of thin wool and quite invisible when worn under thin silk stockings. Tweed gaiters with patent fasteners are shown in the center, and below is a short sports sock of beige wool with a bright red cuff.

If you really like to go around in cold weather with cold feet and shivering legs and ankles—go ahead and do it—but don't imagine that you are doing it in the name of fashion.

The Victorian idea seems to have been that one couldn't possibly be entirely or even nearly comfortable and still conform to the mode. A certain amount of suffering was associated with the idea of keeping up appearances and some women took a morbid sort of satisfaction in feeling that their corsets mildly tortured them and that their skirts hampered free motions in walking or running.

So firmly fixed was that association of discomfort and fashion in women's minds that even now some women seem to cling to the idea. And as clothes today are entirely comfortable in every other respect the only thing they can do is to wear very, very thin stockings in cold weather. But that is not really necessary if you find them uncomfortable, because there are flesh-colored understockings of very fine wool which may be worn under the very thin silk stockings without detection.

For sports and country wear the short sports socks are so well liked by the younger women that there is much more chance of their suffering from feet that are too warm this winter than from feet that are too cold.

There are new soft woolen gaiters that can very easily be pulled on over the stockings. The shoe is removed while they are pulled on, and then put on again, and the flap of the gaiters is turned down over the shoe. These reach above or just below the knee and are admirable for the woman who feels the cold.

Awful Pimples On Face and Neck For Four Years

The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion

(Copyright)

NO DOUBT you have read "Bobbie's" letter in yesterday's paper. It is gratifying to have so many of the neighbors speak so nicely of the Armistice number. We all did our share in making it a good paper.

• • •

I wonder "Bobbie" if "Thinker" could tell us of instances where men take the place of women in the home as well as women take what was only a short time ago positions held by men only.

• • •

There are cases of this being done I know but do they equal the cases of women in business life and are they filled with the dexterity of women?

• • •

I am sure there are plenty of the neighbors who are interested with you in child training. Maybe some of those who have had experience with a larger family than you have can tell you if it is easier after the first dozen or so.

• • •

I remember a woman saying to me that it was no harder to raise five than one. She had five, all small, and seemed as happy as a lark. The children were nice and well behaved as well.

• • •

Perhaps the fact that they had only a small supply of this world's goods may have had something to do with their contentment. I sometimes think that those who have to struggle along seem to be much happier than those who have more.

• • •

Children differ so in disposition in a family I believe, that it would be difficult to lay down rules for the mass. Individuals need different treatment, but the results must be satisfactory if we are to have good citizens.

• • •

You ask me what my opinion of the habits of the small child of to-day is. I would like to tell you of an experience I had on a transcontinental train some time ago. A woman travelling with three small children was sitting with me chatting. A girl, who, I had rightly decided, was English, stopped by our seat and said, "You are English, aren't you?" to my companion. She answered that she was not, but Canadian (in spite of the fact that there is no such thing!)

• • •

"Oh! I thought you were, your children are so well-behaved," the English girl said, and that is a very good expression of my opinion. I had had the idea in a hazy form from the time I was a child, but had never put it into expression.

• • •

I can't tell you how the behavior of English children and that of Canadian children compares now, but some years ago I saw for myself that the children of Old Country people were so well-trained, and the majority of children in this country were the reverse.

• • •

The English mother of a family raised in Ontario told me that she never put things out of the reach of her children, but taught them to leave forbidden things alone.

• • •

Perhaps that is extreme in the case of injurious articles, as it would not be wise to take a chance on the child getting something that would harm him, but I think her idea was good.

• • •

"Bobbie's boy has a great deal of determination evidently, but my idea would be to keep at it until he realizes that in the long run it is he who must give up.

• • •

Some of the neighbors who have had actual experience with cases of this kind might let us know how they dealt with the small folks.

As for food, can't we remember the times when we saw the pie waiting to be served and our appetites suddenly disappeared, that is, they did as far as potato and gravy were concerned.

• • •

If we were told that there was no pie for us until the potato was gone we usually managed to find enough 'room' for it and then managed the pie quite easily.

I agree with you in the matter of bedtime and the manner of putting a child to bed. Perhaps there are some of you mothers who think it hard on the little fellows. How about it? Are the children who have been used to going to bed without a light easier to get settled than those who want a light left on?

• • •

We had better leave the amusement of the baby to those experienced in the matter, but I believe that if something that attracts the baby's attention is used, for instance when he is determined to have something which he has been forbidden, it will help in the problem of teaching him to let things alone.

• • •

There is a lot of talk lately as to the wisdom of using the rod. Some advocate reasoning with the child and showing him the results of wrongdoing. Don't you think that a judicious mixture of the two methods might be the desired effect? If the child doesn't obey after having been given some form of reasoning it would then be the time to use the 'rod.'

• • •

I think that in that case it would not be necessary to resort to punishment very often if the very important point of always keeping one's word when it is given is practised.

• • •

There are other children who could never be trained by the use of corporal punishment however. I remember one small girl whose mother resorted to the use of a story adapted to her requirements to help the child overcome a terrible temper. She told the tot that it was the 'bad man' who was causing her to be so cross. Then she suggested that they chase him away. The little girl proceeded to stamp him down the register and then to shut it on him so that he could not get back and I have since heard that the girl who is now a young lady has a very equable temper.

Half the fun of Christmas is getting ready for it. One reason why people in moderate circumstances usually get so much joy out of Christmas is because they have to make so many of the Christmas things themselves.

To help those of you who haven't too much money to spend, we have prepared a little circular for this week giving directions for making a number of new Christmas favors and Christmas tree decorations—at very small cost.

"The duck-billed platypus so meek
Goes through this life with good intentions.
It ambles on from week to week
And arely gets to see conventions.
But not a duck-billed platypus
Has ever yet been known to fuss."

When the writer first saw this little verse, it was considered as merely a take-off on the tedium of conventions. What was her surprise to observe in The Examiner of Monday an item picturing this very same duck-billed platypus as an extremely strange animal with a flat bill, no teeth, fur, webbed feet and poison fangs on its hind legs!

One of the very interesting items of entertainment planned for the celebration in Peterborough of Old Home Week is a dramatic performance which would depict, in a series of short scenes, the life of some of the early settlers of this place and several of the outstanding episodes in the life of the city.

Mrs. W. McKee Bingham has arranged a number of these scenes and past experience with her presentations of dramatic affairs gives an excellent idea of the pleasing manner in which they would be staged. Mrs. Bingham has taken as a basis the historical incidents which are recorded in books and has woven about them dialogue and action which would depict in the very clearest manner these bits of life from a bygone age.

The landing of Champlain in this district, as is recorded in history, would be indicated and one of the outstanding bits would be the famous dinner party given by the Governor, when the name of "Peterborough" was chosen, on suggestion of Mrs. Stewart, wife of the Hon. Thomas A. Stewart, a member of the executive council of that time.

The well-known barbecue in 1850, when an ox was roasted whole on the market-place, would also be presented and later scenes would depict the city in the time of the Great War, when so many of her boys went overseas to fight for their country.

A Fashion Show demonstrating styles from 1825 to 1925 would be an item in the performance, which would be illustrated between acts by means of moving picture slides.

Mrs. Bingham has written a little song dedicated to Peterborough, the "Electric City" and entitled "Lady of Light," with music also of her own composition, which would form the finale of the performance.

Consideration of this presentation, which would be an indoor production in one of the large halls of the city, is in the hands of the committee empowered to act in such ways.

If they decide to have it presented, it will be a very appropriate entertainment for Peterborough's Old Home Week, put on by Peterborough people, the production of a Peterborough woman and with assistance from Peterborough's artists, photographers and composers of music.

Mrs. Henry of Toronto, wife of Colonel R. Henry of the Salvation Army Corps and speaker to women in the Salvation Army Temple on Monday evening, on the subject "The Triumph of Love," illustrated her discourse by means of several little stories which were simple but very effective.

One of these had to do with the story of the old woman, who, at the time, many years back, when the fear of a Russian invasion was very prevalent in a certain country, came out of her house shouldering a broomstick. She was asked in derision what she could do with such a weak weapon and answered, proudly; "I could show what side I am on."

The second little bit of wisdom culled from the life book of age was the touching answer of the old Scotch woman who came daily out of her little village house to go down the street in her neat little dress, with her shawl and her white apron.

She was noticed and followed on one occasion by a policeman who demanded what she had picked up from the street, to hide in her apron as she made her way back home. Opening the apron at his command, she showed him some bits of broken glass and in answer to his dumbfounded query as to her reason, she said:

"I come down every day and pick up all the bits of broken glass that I find on the street, just to save the bairnies' feet."

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

BURNS

One of the commonest accidents about the house is a burn, and the proper treatment thereof may be a matter of life or death.

As you know, treatment has always aimed at keeping the air away from the burned surface, and so carron oil—equal parts of lime water and linseed oil—has been the standard remedy for years.

In severe burns the home treatment has been immersing the patient in a bath in which a few handfuls of baking soda or other alkali has been thrown.

However the best available treatment is tannic acid, and now that it is being so generally used, reports on its effectiveness are interesting. I have spoken before about the results obtained in United States and Canadian hospitals, and now comes a report from Dr. W. C. Wilson from Great Britain. He had fifty cases treated with tannic acid and is most enthusiastic about it.

The tannic acid relieves the pain almost instantly; there is an absence of pain and discomfort while the dressing remains on the burned surface, and there is no necessity for the frequent "dressings" of other forms of treatment.

The poisoning which is such a serious factor is lessened and this greatly increases the chances of saving the patient's life, even in extensive burns. There is less "scarring" also from the use of tannic acid than by other methods.

I have spoken before about a Chinese physician who suggested the use of well-brewed tea where there was no tannic acid at hand.

Dr. Wilson suggests that in households, factories, offices, tannic acid should be kept at hand in powder form, about two level teaspoonsful of tannic acid in a packet.

This packet dissolved in a half a pint of water gives the solution that is now generally used.

This can be "painted" on, or allowed to flow over the burned surface. This is certainly a convenient method of having the tannic acid on hand.

Draw Announced for First Round in Scottish Cup

FIRST ROUND DRAW IN SCOTTISH CUP FAVORS ALL LEADING TEAMS

Rangers Scheduled To Meet Edinburgh City in What is Regarded As Practice Match.

GAMES ON JANUARY 19TH.

Aberdeen Drawn Against Solway Star—Celtic Matched With Arthurlies.

GLASGOW, Scotland, December 13. — By the draw for the first round of the Scottish Football Association Cup made public yesterday, it would appear that nearly all the leading soccer teams in the First and Second Divisions have an easy path to the next round. Rangers, the cup holders and First Division champions, will be at home to Edinburgh City and this game will be a gentle practice for the great Glasgow team.

Hearts, the Edinburgh club, have drawn another First Division club as their opponent, Airdrieonians, but they are going badly this year. Motherwell will have a picnic with Leith Athletic, while St. Mirren play Nithsdale Wanderers, a club of little consequence.

Aberdeen are drawn against Solway Star, who bob up regularly in the early stages of the competition. Celtic are matched with Arthurlie, a Second Division team, while Kilmarnock, fancied by some critics to win the cup, should have an easy time with Glasgow University.

Dundee United, leading the Second Division just now, are not so lucky, as the draw brings them together with Morton, another Second Division team which is near the top of the averages. Arbroath meet Inverness Thistle, Albian Rovers Galston, and East Stirlingshire Alloa, and should advance without much difficulty to the next round.

MANY FAVORITES WITH BULLDOGS

Windsor Opposes Millionaires Here To-night in Canpro Fixture.

TORONTO, Dec. 13. —Cliff McBride's appearance here with the Windsor Bulldogs last night is creating considerable interest. Manager Herbie Mitchell has promised to give the Leaf prospect plenty of opportunity to display his wares, as members of the Maple Leaf directorate will be in attendance. Outside of the mentioned player the visitors have quite a formidable line-up. Stan Brown, Mike Neville, Happy Emms, and Mickey Roach, as well as Frank Carson, all help to comprise a strong crew. They are at present tied for second place in the league and are hard to defeat.

Manager Harry Holmes of the locals feels confident that the Millionaires will do better. They have not had the best of the breaks this season as far as players go, but expect to creep up near full strength to-night. While Ken Doraty's sore leg is still bothersome, he may be ready for the fray. Holmes has been busy these days at the practices trying to work up a real front line. Sickness, plus the well-known auto accident, has kept him back considerably. There is little doubt that the material is there and with all the players out, Teddy Oke's club will be hard to beat.

Bowling Alley Gossip

Drafting Room League.

The tenth night of bowling for the drawing makers of the C.G.E. Drafting Room League brought to a close the first half of the schedule. Strange to say not one team was dabbed with the whitewash, three 6 to 2 scores being the result of the battle.

Lou Smith and his battling sextette are just beginning to show a real brand of pin toppling, but not soon enough to climb out of the cellar, which they are occupying, having obtained but 22 points. Monday night's two game win over the Watts netted man A. Rooke with 590 pins was forced to take second place to W. A. Jackson's total of 649; the latter also carried off high single honors with 258.

The High-Pots sent Hugh Morton and his Cycles home talking to themselves after handing them the small end of a 6 to 2 score. Piling up 1028 pins to the losers 706 in the initial game, the Hi-Pots were all set to spring a shut out but slumped badly in the final racket, to lose by over 300 pins. McCabe was the feature player for the winners with a trio amounting to 594 while close at his heels came the opposing captain, Morton, who made 586; McCabe's high score of 247 took high single.

The only extra heavy hitting of the night was staged by the Ohms who took six points from Dave Grant and his followers. F. Bowness, Jack Lesurf and F. Allen, the three "Knights of the Polished Aisles," lived up to their names by topping the 600 mark, collecting 682, 673 and 653 respectively. Patterson was the only top notcher for the Volts, bouncing the spheres for 261, 227 and 176, resulting in a high trio 664. Total pinnage for the winners, 3039, was high for the night. H. Foster walked away with high single, chalking up 299.

The following is the standing of the six teams in the league:

Team. Captain.	Points
Ohms, A. McLeish	50
Cycles, H. Morton	50
Watts, J. Cuff	44
Volts, D. Grant	42
Hi-Pots, R. MacMorran	32
Short Circuits, L. Smith	22

High single, H. Foster	299
High three, F. Bowness	682

Prizes for December

Lewis R. Parks, a local photographer, is offering one half dozen cabinet size photos to the lady who makes the highest total score in three consecutive games during the month of December, which will probably result in some member of the fair sex plunking the foul line man with a ball when he blows the whistle.

Two other prizes have been donated so we'll probably see some old time slugging in the Village Alleys.

The Home Furnishing Company, 208 Charlotte street, will present a smoking set to the gentleman who can cop the highest trio in three consecutive games this month, while some other hardwood smasher will come in for a bridge lamp donated by the Metropolitan Stores, George street.

The finish of the first half of the schedule in the C. G. E. Shop League finds most of the bowlers rarin' to go at the second half, so if none of the Fitters throw out their arms or slide on their ears during the turkey roll-off next week, we can expect some classy performing in the league fixtures.

HIGH SCORES FOR NOVEMBER.

Five dollars, donated by Maher and Wesley for high three consecutive games bowled during month of November was won by Alex Miller with a score of 860. Bud Weese was a close second with 852, and Steve Elliott was third with 760.

The pair of satin mules donated by A. V. Lillow, 330 George street, for the lady's highest single game during the month of November was won by Miss Virginia Legros with 288, who was closely followed by Miss Violet Langton with 277. Miss Olive Rightmeyer was third with 264. Miss Geraldine O'Connel was fourth with 247 and Miss Dot Mortimer, fifth, with 241.

The box of chocolates donated by Mr. Louis Yeotes, proprietor of the Elite Sweets Cafe, George street, for the lady's highest three consecutive games was also won by Miss Virginia Legros with 654, who was followed by Miss Langton, second, with 626, and Miss O'Connell, third, with 624.

The box of cigars donated by Mr. Malane, of Welsh's Beauty Parlor and Men5s Barber Shop, 144 Hunter street, to the player making the highest three consecutive games in the Peterborough Lock Company Inter-shop League, was won by Thomas Bagnall, with 654.

FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F. D. C.

After the Peterborough intermediate team of 1902 had captured the provincial championship they proceeded to prove themselves the greatest team of the year in any series in Ontario by a brilliant record of victories.

Perhaps the most notable of these was their win over the Marlboros of Toronto, who had won the senior championship in 1904 and 1905 and who gathered the members of their great team together for the purpose of cutting the combs of the cocky Peterborough outfit. Accordingly they brought from Smith's Falls, Harold Armstrong, former Peterborough defence star, who played that season with the Federal League champions and in 1905 with the champion Marlboros, dug up Rolly Young in the corridors of McMaster University and imported Gee, the Barrie cover point, touted as the best defence player of the year. With this all star galaxy they expected to easily take the intermediate champs into camp.

The game was arranged for Mutual street rink in Toronto and was played on Saturday, March 17 before the biggest crowd of the season, the Petes winning 6 to 3.

Early in the Battle the Petes showed Toronto fans that the fame they had won was deserved, for as the Globe admitted afterward: "Peterborough played all round their opponents and at no stage of the game was there any doubt of the outcome." The Marlboros attempted to make the going rough but rough or smooth suited the Petes equally well and they showed a big edge at all stages. McGee, the much-heralded Barrie wonder, made one flashy rush but the next time he came down he ran into a terrific body check from Bill Crowley and was through for the night so far as the offensive went. The shifty Armstrong was bottled up by the Petes' close checking while the blue and white forwards were too fast and played too well together for the Marlboro advance guard to stick with them. Whitcroft was hailed by Toronto papers as the best man on the ice, the Globe describing his rushes as irresistible.

The game, described as the fastest hockey of the season, found the Petes' combination working smoothly and had it not been for a great exhibition of goal-keeping by Tyler for the Marlboros, the visitors would have run up a big score. As it was they were 5 to 1 in front of the Marlboros at half time and in the second half they got a lot of fun out of protecting their lead and foiling the Dukes' desperate attempts to pull the game out of the fire. And they also obtained plenty of kick out of kidding the Toronto fans.

The line up:

Peterborough—Goal, Wasson; point, Glover; cover, Crowley; rover, Whitcroft; centre, Morgan; right wing, Graham; left wing, Cavanah.

Referee—F. C. Waghorne, Toronto.

To-morrow—The Varsity-Peterboro game of 1906.

ENGLISH CAPTAIN FACES HARD TASK

Selection of Team For Second Cricket Test Match Presents Problem.

SYDNEY, Australia, December 13 —With every player on the touring English cricket team reported in first-class shape and with one fine test match victory behind them, the visitors to-day were quietly and confidently awaiting the opening of the second test match here on Friday. No announcement has yet been made as to the personnel of the team which will be fielded by England.

The Australians' morale was badly shaken by the match at Brisbane, when what was considered as a strong eleven was defeated by 675 runs by superlatively good bowling by Larwood, Tate, and White and some bad luck. Tremendous advantage accrued to the English side when their captain, A. P. F. Chapman, won the toss and put his side in first. The Australians thus had all the worst of the wicket. They were also compelled to play for most of the match without two of their regulars, Kelleway and Gregory, who were unable to finish the match. The team, which will represent Australia here, will be substantially different from the Brisbane eleven.

The English captain is not banking too strongly on the Brisbane victory as a precedent. This was the first time a test match had ever been played there, and the result is not considered useful for comparative purposes. England have never been defeated at Brisbane in state matches. At Sydney it will be different. This New South Wales city as a stronghold of Australian cricket. Matches with England have been played here since 1879 when, in a game between New South Wales and Lord Harris' team, the crowd prevented play from continuing by overflowing the field following an unpopular decision of an umpire, himself an Australian. Australia have won many matches here on their merits and others have been won or lost on a change in the weather.

Brisbane Wicket Against Batters.

The normal wicket here is what is known as the "shirt front" variety. At Brisbane the pitch helped the English bowlers a great deal, and on the last day White was simply unplayable on it. It is likely to be different here. In England's match with New South Wales in November the bowlers of both sides were useless. England put together 734 for seven wickets and declared. After getting New South Wales out for 349 in their first innings Kinpax and Bradman, both almost sure members of the next Australian test match team, played in a wonderful partnership in the second innings and were undefeated with centuries to their credit. New South Wales' total stood at 364 for three wickets when time was reached. The Brisbane debacle bore out warnings that the pitch was unsuitable for lengthy test matches, and gave too great an advantage to the team which batted first.

Chapman, in choosing his team, is in a delicate position. He is faced in reviewing the performances on the tour so far, with the almost mediocre displays of such noted players as Sutcliffe and Hobbs and brilliant batting by men playing in Australia for the first time—Jardine, the Surrey amateur who has yet to fail in any match he has played in, Leland, Yorkshire, added to the team at the last moment, and Hammond, the Gloucester all-rounder. It will be hard for Chapman to drop the venerable Mead, whose batting was a feature of the second innings at Brisbane. E. Tyldesley, who made a century this week at Warwick, or Hendren, whose wonderful first innings in the first test came at a crucial time when Hobbs and Sutcliffe had failed.

Then all the English bowlers have recently been doing well, not only the great trundlers, Tate and Larwood, but White, the Somerset captain, Freeman of Kent, and Geary of Leicestershire. Even when it comes to the kicket-keepers Chapman will have to scratch his chin and ponder, because, while Ames of Kent is a batsman as well as a great man behind the stumps, Duckworth has been faultless and has stood up to all the fast deliveries of Tate and Larwood. Chapman will probably wait till the morning of the match as he did at Brisbane before making a decision.

KITCHENER WINS IN LONDON 6-0

Moore, in Winner's Goal, Makes 67 Saves and is Star of Game.

FAST FIXTURE.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 13.—The London Panthers had their claws clipped at home last night for the first time, the Kitchener Flying Dutchmen doing the job right by to 6 to 0 count before a capacity crowd that was forced to concede the visitors superiority in every department on the night's play. The game was fast and exciting, with the Panthers starting out in high gear, and having a decided edge in the first half of the opening period. Then a fluky goal started the Dutchmen on their way, and the Panthers could do nothing after that. The score by periods was 2 to 9, 3 to 0, and 6 to 0 final.

Displaying a sound and steady defensive game that was helped at all times by the speedy and persistent back-checking of the forwards, and was more than held up by the great goal-tending of Alfie Moore, who was the bright star of the game, the Kitchener sextette displayed the best all-round game that has been seen here this season. They got some breaks, but what they didn't find they went out and earned.

It was one of those game where the shots on goal din't mean a thing, as London outshot Kitchener by 51 to 25. It only resulted in somewhat of a triumph for Alf. Moore, the former London amateur net-minded turning everything aside from all angles and distances.

Kitchener's scores came from close-in attacks on sudden and defenite thrusts, although two of them were decidedly lucky ones. The score need not have been much over 3 to 0 on the difference between the teams, but the Panthers, trailing by 3 to 0 as they went into the final frame, had to open up, and sent the whole team up the ice in the hunt for a score or two. It only served to give the Dutchmen a chance to seep through for three more tallies, and make the score look bad.

London—Goal, Ironstone; defence, Voss and Redding; centre, Primeau; wings, Filmore and King; subs., Jackson, Foxworthy, Connacher, Lever, Moore and McIntyre.

Kitchener—Goal, Moore; defence, McFarlane and Berlett; centre, Miller; wings, Randle and Brown; subs., Palangio, Hiller, Skinner, Gross, Savage and Grant.

Senators Hard Hit By Flu Epidemic

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 13.—Six members of the Ottawa Senator hockey club have been stricken with influenza, according to a message Manager Dave Gill sent from Detroit last night, Dr. H. T. Whitely, the club physician, was advised that Len Grosvenor, the most seriously ill, is showing a high temperature, while Frank Nighbor, "King" Clancy, Goalie Alex Connell, Fred Elliott and Manager Gill himself, have also been taken down.

The long "casualty" list in the Senator camp puts a sombre hue on their chances of being able to muster a team for to-night's scheduled National League game against the Detroit Cougars.

Should none of the ailing members be fit to take the ice to-night, a make-shift defence and forward line could probably be formed from among the other members of the club.

But just where the Ottawas could secure a substitute for Alex. Connell cannot be determined here. The Senators do not carry any spare net man.

OATMAN SOLD TO N.Y. RANGERS

Maroon Wing Man Will Play in New Uniform To-night.

VETERAN OF WEST.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press.)— Russell Oatman, relief left wing player of the Montreal Maroons, has been sold to the New York Rangers and will be in a Ranger uniform when the world's champions play the Canadiens here to-night. The deal which sends the former westerner to the Patrick team was completed yesterday and Oatman remained in Montreal last night, while the Maroons took the train for New York where they play the Americans to-night.

Oatman came to the east four years ago, after the break-up of the Western Canada League. He was a member of the old Victoria team which was piloted by Lester Patrick, so that Oatman, in going to the Rangers, will be playing again under his old tutor.

It was when Victoria played Maroons for the Stanley Cup in the spring of 1926 that Manager Gerard saw possibilities in Oatman. The player went to Detroit in the Western League shake-up, Maroons buying him from the Cougars.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

The Peterborough Baseball Club meets to-night, at 8 o'clock, in the Chamber of Commerce Rooms.

The National League President, John A. Heydler, brought in a suggestion that has been mooted for some time, at the convention of the league yesterday. He moved that ten-men teams be established; the extra man's only duty to be to bat for the pitcher, and his name be included in the lineup at the beginning of the game, just as the names of the other players. This, it was thought, would have the effect of speeding up the game and preventing so many changes of pitchers in pinches what a hit was needed.

* * * * * *

This is an age of specialists, and under the new plan players who can hit and yet are dubs in the field would have an important place on the line-up. In American rugby they have players who do only one thing. A player will be put on the field, who can throw the old rugby ball like a baseball, and he will toss a forward pass and then be yanked off the field immediately. This is somewhat the idea of Heydler's motion and he desires to replace the generally weak hitting pitchers with real hefty sluggers.

* * * * * *

The American league at their meeting in Chicago yesterday smiled at the suggestion and would have nothing to do with it. However, there is not well-considered reason offered for the rejection of the proposed regulation. It is only a plan that was though would speed up and improve the game. But judging from the manned in which the American League treated the proposal, nothing will be done about it this year.

* * * * * *

Even at that, if the proposal had been accepted it would have taken away much of the thrill of the unexpected in the game. Take for instance in a game with a man on third and a hit absolutely needed, and the pitcher the next batter up, and he has been twirling nice ball. The manager has two choice—he may send in a pinch hitter in an effort to get the run over or he may send the pitcher in to bat taking the chance that he may come through with the hit, and above all desiring to keep him in the game. All these things happen in a moment, and the fans are on their toes wondering what will take place.

* * * * * *

In big league ball the pitcher is not expected to be a hitter or even a big effort to hit, but there have been some good hitters who were pitchers. Christy Mathewson was a pitcher extraordinary, and he was no mean hitter, and Babe Ruth started his career as a pitcher.

* * * * * *

Every baseball enthusiast and player should be at the meeting this evening to support the ball club and give their opinions on any important questions which are bound to come up.

The shop hockey league of the C.G.E. certainly looks strong this year, and nearly every department in the big factory is entering a team. The latest to date is the engineering department, and they should be able to ice a smart team.

ATHLETIC BOARD IGNORES PROMISE GIVEN BY GODFREY

Kingston, Not Windsor, Is Selected For Ontario Schools' Athletic Meet.

TROUBLE BREWING.

Queen City Picked In Order To Stimulate Development of New Association.

TORONTO, Dec. 13.— In spite of the assurance given J. Fred Reid, M. P.P., by Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, that the next finals of the Ontario Athletic Commission trials would be held in Windsor, the Commission has definitely selected Kingston as the location for this big school meet.

Speaking last night, T. S. Murphy, M.P.P., Chairman of the Commission, pointed out that the Commission, and it alone, had the power to select a location for the meet. "And," said he emphatically, "as we never at any time voted for Windsor, I guess there will be no argument over our selection."

It will be recalled that on a recent visit to Dr. Godfrey, whose Department of Health and Labor administers the Ontario Athletic Commission Act, Mr. Reid was promised the 1929 Commission play-offs—the idea being to hold them in connection with the opening of Windsor's imposing new collegiate institute. The Commission, however, has picked Kingston, in order, its members say, to stimulate the growth and development of the recently formed Eastern Ontario Secondary Schools Association.

At the present time Dr. Godfrey is holidaying in Bermuda. Sport followers look, it is said, for storm clouds to break on his return —particularly in the face of the reported attitude of certain Commission members that he, Dr. Godfrey, went out of his way to promise Mr. Reid something over which he had no direct jurisdiction whatever.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"OUR GANG" STAR AT THE CAPITOL TO-NIGHT IN PERSON. LITTLE BABY ELEANOR, ONE OF THE CLEVEREST CHILD ACTORS TO APPEAR IN THIS CITY. "CAPTAIN SWAGGER" WITH ROD LA ROCQUE AND SUE CAROL, AND "THE COLLEGIANS" ON THE SCREEN.

To-night the Capitol offers, one of the "Our Gang" comedies stars in person, little Baby Eleanor, who will be seen in a very clever singing, talking and dancing act, with character impersonations. Mr. O'Hara, Baby Eleanor's father appears with the little star on the stage. Baby Eleanor will appear at both the matinee and evening performances. The fifth of The Collegians, "The Paddling Co-Eds" and "Captain Swagger" Rod La Rocque's new picture will be the screen attractions. Sue Carol the famous dancer, is co-starred with La Rocque.

"Some years ago a popular song declared 'There's a little bit of bad in every good little girl, and a little bit of good in every bad little girl.' Reversing gender, that is the spirit which motivates writers, directors and players in presenting their up-to-date heroes and villains to the public, asserts La Rocque.

"My latest picture vehicle, 'Captain Swagger,' is an example of this interesting development. The hero is by no means a perfect specimen of manhood. He is a braggart, given to exaggerated gestures, yet likeable, loyal and courageous. On the other hand, there is a heavy that people will find it hard to hate. His code of right and wrong may seem deplorable, but he proves himself generous and gallant.

"Both men are warmly human and flesh-and-blood creatures who might be picked from the streets of your town or mine. Because of this I think audiences will like them better than heroes who stand remote on the heights, or heavies just as far removed in the depths."

As his leading lady in "Captain Swagger," La Rocque has charming Sue Carol, Wamps Baby star of 1928. Victor Potel, Ulrich Haupt and Richard Tucker also play important roles. Edward H Griffith directed.

AT THE REGENT.

Great Program offered for Week-End. Hear Del Lucas sing "Unforgetable," and "Lonesome for You; also "Chinatown Charlie" mingles Laughter and Thrills — Johnny's Funniest Film.

If you want to laugh so hard that you'll shake the buttons off your clothes and tremble with anxiety at the thrilling stunts Johnny Hines is now performing, hurry to the Regent Theatre this week, where the comedian is starring in his latest First National Picture, "Chinatown Charlie," produced under the personal supervision of C. C. Burr.

You might know that this new photoplay would be a hilarious thriller, as it is a film adaptation of the old melo-comic extravaganza by Owen Davis, given a hilarious comedy reincarnation by Johnny Hines. And Johnny is at his funniest in the title role of "Chinatown Charlie," the barker and guide of a New York sigh-seeing bus that takes the credulous to the mystic mazes of Chinatown and the Underworld.

The comedian's most hilarious and thrilling stunt to date is his sensational aerial feat in the picture. Trapped in a Chinese mandarin's house, he makes his escape by walking over a human bridge of five acrobats who swing across the Chinatown street from one second storey window to another. And Johnny manages to make the crossing with a basket on his head balancing himself with a parasol. The basket he thinks, contains—no, I mustn't tell you!

The action of this typical Hinesian mirthquake evolves about a girl who is one of the sightseers and who possesses a Chinese ring of mystic power. It seems everybody in Chinatown wants the ring—Johnny would rather have the girl. Smart boy, Johnny. And after a series of fast moving sequences in which laughter takes a crack at exciting melodrama, he wins her. Atta boy, Johnny Hines!

C. C. Burr has surrounded his comedian with an exceptional cast, with Louise Lorraine running off with first honors as the girl. Harry Gribbon as funny as Johnny's pal, and little "Scooter" Lowry wins laughs as a precocious kid. Others scoring heavily are Anna May Wong, Sojin, Geo. Kuwa, Fred Kohler, Jack Burdette and a score of others. Take this hard-boiled reviewer's advice—who laughed himself to death—and put Johnny Hines in "Chinatown Charlie" on your MUST list!

SLATED FOR BOUT.

Manufacturer's League

The C.G.E. entry in the Manufacturer's League seem to boast a gang of wood spillers of more than ordinary ability judging from their performance against Stock's Dough-mixers on Monday night at the Duffus Recreation Academy when they blanked them 3 to 0. Calladine, McGrath and Playford all were well over the 600 mark in high three scores making 694, 607, and 624 respectively. T. Sproats for the losers had a nice score for high trio 572.

The Peterborough Canoe Co. put up a rather stiff argument with the Canadian Packers but lost out 6 to 2. Greig for the Packers was the outstanding slugger with 303 single and 693 for high three, while Taylor for the Paddle makers turned in a nice game with 222 and 585.

Ackerman and Company administered a lusty whacking to the Canadian Woollens, cleaning up on everything for 8 points. J. W. LeBarr was hitting them hard and walked away with both high scores 307 and 719.

The ruckus between Merchant's Press and Fitzgerald and Company was of a more balanced nature, each quintette taking four points. R. Delahaye toppled the pins to the tune of 645 pins in three and 267 single while Hardill on the opposing side was stepping fast to make 621 and 244.

Automobile League

The Automobile League is enjoying one of its most successful seasons and competition is waxing keener with every succeeding game. This week the Pontiacs romped away from the Star and Durant team to a 6-2 win, although the teams were very evenly matched. For the winners J. Detcher and R. Brown came to the fore with 576 and 566 while Gubby and Metcalfe of Star and Durant were almost equally as good collecting 567 and 569.

Willy's-Knight Company of pin spillers handed the Chrysler crowd the tail end of a 6-2 score. M. J. Duffus was the feature performer for the victors, his efforts resulting in 252, 201, and 211 for a high total of 664. Saulter for the Gillespie Gang made 553 in three.

The Whippets had things their own way owing to the non-appearance of the Nash team. Tom Staves piled up the best totals in this game making 361 and 369.

DUNSFORD RINK IS BIG ATTRACTION

Building is 180 Feet by 60 Feet —Used for Skating and Curling.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

DUNSFORD, December 12.—There is perhaps no other place of the size in Ontario which can boast of having the recreational facilities which are to be found in this village, which comprises one general store, a post office, hardware store and garage combined, a blacksmith shop, four gas pumps, a seed and grain storehouse and elevator, chopping mill, cheese factory, and less than twenty-five private homes. In this enterprising little place, a spot of beauty throughout the summer months, there is a rink 180 feet long and 60 feet wide, which is used for both skating and curling, and which is a a live centre of amusement for six nights in the week from the time the cold weather begins until it disappears.

Previous to 1922 the sport lovers of the vicinity throughout the winter season resorted to Greenhurst Bay, two miles distant, and sought to gratify their lust for pleasure upon an improvised open-air rink which was a part of Sturgeon Lake. Six years ago about a dozen residents of the Dunsford community organized the Dunsford Co-operative Stock Company, which conceived the idea of a rink. They laid their plans and erected the present building at a cost of $5,000. The outside of the building is completely covered with corrugated iron giving it an enduring and business-like appearance. Inside to the front and right hand side is a spacious dressing-room for ladies; to the front and left is a dressing-room for men. Along the ice front and right is a roomy aisle for the accommodation of visitors and rooters.

The rink throughout is well lighted by a Delco electric lighting system, which cost $350.00. During each season several carnivals are held, and many interesting games of hockey are played, while every Saturday evening is reserved for all comers to have a pleasant skate.

Curling is the prevailing sport, and since the erection of the rink six years ago the Dunsford Curling Club, which has an annual membership of about thirty, has risen to a place of prominence through the good work done by its members in bonspiels held in Lindsay, Bobcaygeon, Peterborough, Orillia, Beaverton, and other towns and cities.

The rink is being flooded this week and if the weather continues cold, operations will soon be in full swing.

W.M.S. MEETING WELL ATTENDED

Excellent Reports Are Read at Regular Meeting of Missionary Society.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, December 13. — The December meeting of the W.M.S. of Trinity United Church was held in the Sunday school room on Thursday afternoon with the president, Mrs. L. Ashley, presiding.

The devotional exercises were led by Mrs. Rivers. The Old Testament Christmas lesson was read fromIsaiah 9. and a few verses of Chapter 11, "The promise of a son," followed by prayer by Mesdames Huffman, Bristol, Dingman and Rivers.

Mrs. Nickle acted as secretary, pro tem., and reports were received from the treasurer and committees. The Strangers' Secretary reported 48 calls during the year, 16 copies were taken of the Missionary Monthly and seven copies are to be ordered of the new study book, "Drums in the Darkness."

Mrs. G. W. Rivers was appointed a delegate to the Presbyterial at Trenton, with Mrs. George Huffman as alternate. Mrs. J. B. Hough and Mrs. Nickle were appointed as auditors for the year. Mrs. Ashley thanked the members for their support during the past year and congratulated them on reaching their allocation. Rev. G. W. Rivers was then asked to conduct the election of officers, which resulted in all the officers being returned to office for 1929.

It was decided that 3 or 5 members be made responsible for each meeting during the year and the list typewritten and distributed. It was also decided to use the envelope system during the coming year.

$100 MONTHLY SPENT IN CIGARS

Rich Indian Lets Wife Handle Rest of Large Income.

CHAINED TO BEDS.

RIVERSIDE, Cal., Dec. 13.—Jackson Barnett, rich Oklahoma Indian, told a United States senatorial investigating committee here that although he receives $2,500 a month from the government, only about $100 of it ever gets into his pockets. Barnett's wealth, accumulating from oil lands, is reckoned in the millions.

Responding to questions in monosyllables, Barnett said the remaining $2,400 of his monthly income is taken care of by his wife. He declared that he spends his $100 monthly on cigars and horses.

"I pay 25 cents apiece for my cigars," the rich Indian proudly informed Senators Lynn B. Frazier, of North Dakota, and W. B. Pine, of Oklahoma, who are investigating the conduct of the government's Indian institutions.

Mrs. Barnett accused department of justice officials of persecuting her husband, and of attempting to kidnap him from his Los Angeles home two years ago. She denied that two trust funds of a million dollars each, established for Barnett, had been founded by attorneys upon a contingency basis, and stated emphatically that the attorneys did not share a reputed $150,000 to clear the estate of a tangle allegedly precipitated by the department of justice.

The committee also heard several witnesses who testified to alleged inhuman conditions and cruel practices at the Towoac Indian School, Cortez, Colo; the Rice School in Arizona and the Yuma, Ariz. reservation. Witnesses have been subpoenaed from several states.

Patrick Kennedy, engineer of the Mojave City, Ariz., reservation, told the committee that Indian girls suspected of planning to run away were chained to their beds at night, and during the day wore chains around their necks. He described the alleged beating of an Indian girl with a club by the superintendent of the reservation.

Mrs. Charles W. Welfelt, for four years a cook at the Towoac Indian School testified that bad meat and wormy fruit had been fed to Indian students, and that a "black hole" in the basement of one Towoac building was used as a place of punishment for the slightest offenses.

NEW PLANT IS OPENED

R. S. McLaughlin Is Initiated Into Tribe of Cree Indians in Regina.

CAR FOR RED CROSS.

REGINA, Sask., Dec. 13—(Special) Former Lords of the Prairies took a hand in inaugurating the West's newest development when as part of the opening of Saskatchewan's first great automobile plant today. The File Hills tribe of the Cree Indians initiated President R. S. McLaughlin of General Motors of Canada as an Indian Chief, hundreds of Regina citizens who thronged the vast new industrial plant cheered and applauded as chief Red Dog decked out Mr. McLaughlin with the green blanket, moccasins and sweeping feathered head-dress which signified his acceptance into the tribe. Surrounded by his rugged featured and magnificently clad braves Chief Red Dog seemed an incongruous figure from the romantitc past as to the accompaniment of whirring machinery and clicking cameras he told through an interpreter of the tribes' pride in the newest development of their ancestral country. They had asked for the right, he said to take some part in what they knew was a momentous event. Mr. McLaughlin's new name is "Kitchie Kah-So-Kin-Esko" which when translated means strong arm.

While he addressed the other chieftains as "fellow members of the tribe" and presented them with a purse of gold the Indians intoned the chant reserved for the proclaiming of great men. Earlier in the afternoon Mr. McLaughlin had driven off the assembly line in the new General Motors manufacturing plant the first of the new Chevrolet six clyinder cars to be built in Canada which was also the first car built at Regina. It was, he stated, an epoch marking car for not only was it the first to be built in Saskatchewan but it was more completely Canadian made than any other, that had ever come from the company's plant. It was powered by the first Canadian-made motor built at Walkerville, Ontario.

Car For Red Cross.

The huge crowd which packed the plant was surprised to see on the doors of the shiny green sedan which was the first car off the line the emblem of the red cross. The mystery was solved when, on behalf of General Motors, Mr. McLaughlin presented the car to the Saskatchewan Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society, through its president, W. G. Ross.

Behind car number one came a grey coach model while still further back visitors could see cars taking shape in the form of frames and chassis containing the trim new six cylinder Obev motor.

When Mayor McAra of Regina presented during the afternoon ceremony a bronze tablet with an inscription extending the city's welcome and assurance of continued cordial relations it was no idle gesture for two days the citizens of Regina have taken to their hearts the party of two score automotive executives who came from Winnipeg and the east to open the new plant. After luncheon attended by more than five hundred, half the town turned out to-day to cheer the parade which took the visitors through streets decorated with flags and welcoming banners to the growing industrial section,

Led by a khaki clad brass band the hundreds of cars wound their way to the vast structure which has risen from the ground in the last five months. Masses of flowers and scores of congratulatory telegrams brought the greetings of other firms throughout the country. The culminating event of the day was a banquet in Regina's magnificent new Hotel Saskatchewan attended by Lieutenant Govenor, the Premier of the Dominion, Minister of Railways, the entire Legislative Assembly and practically everyone of the city's representative citizens. Hon. C. A. Dunning, Federal Minister of Railways caught the spirit of all when he said: "The placing of the seal of approval of a company of the standing of General Motors upon the West blasts for all time the fallacy that the West is agricultural and the East industrial. I feel we will look back upon today and be able to say we were present on the occasion which marked the opening of a new era.

ARMS PARLEY MAY HIT SNAG

Powers Likely To Seek Convocation of Disarmament Conference in February.

NOT ACCEPT RATIO.

LUGANO, Dec. 13.—The famous "5-5-3" ration, established by the Washington conference for capital ships of the United States, British and Japan, may cause difficulties during approaching disarmament negotiations. Indications last night were that strong efforts would be made to secure convocation of a preparatory disarmament commission early next year, probably in February.

The conviction was expressed, however, that the naval Powers must agree on the types of cruisers and submarines to be subject to limitation.

The impression exists in international circles here that Japan is not disposed to accept for cruisers and submarines the 5-5-3 ratio laid down at Washington for battleships. Presumably the Japanese would ask for a slightly higher ratio, such as 3-3 or 3-7.

France and Italy also would certainly not accept the Washington ratio as applying to cruisers and submarines.

Some European leaders suggest seeking an assurance that the United States never would help an aggressor nation and would not insist on her rights as a neutral in case of war between the League of Nations and an aggressor nation.

It was emphasized today that as the nations renounced aggressive war under the Kellogg Pact, the United States is inferentially committed to give no aid to an aggressor. This would mean no American interference with a British or other blockade undertaken at the behest of the League of Nations.

Foreign Minister Aristide Briand announced tonight he hoped to fix with Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany a date for the next meeting of the preparatory commission.

Another subject of prime interest in this meeting place of the council of the League of Nations is the nature of the step the United States may take in connection with its reported intention to re-open negotiations for joining the World Court.

In civilized man the sense of smell is most highly developed in the blind.

GAS PLANT BY-LAW

THE CITIZENS OF PETERBOROUGH ARE ASKED TO GIVE THOUGHTFUL CONSIDERATION TO THE PURCHASE OF THE

Peterboro Gas Plant

for which a by-law will be presented by the City Council for endorsation by the Citizens at the coming Municipal Elections.

The members of the City Council have unanimously endorsed the purchase of the plant by the City at the price of $335,000.00, which is a most reasonable figure for the assets that will be turned over.

The manufacture and sale of gas is a field that has wonderful possibilities and investment by the City in this utility, which on past records shows good earnings, should be a very profitable one.

The gas industry is experiencing a great development throughout Canada, and the following news item from British Columbia is an indication of Western development:

BIG GAS EXPANSION FOR B.C. ELECTRIC

Programme Involves Cost of $6,000,000 and Will Add 25,000,000 c.f. Daily.

Vancouver.—While engaged simultaneously in the construction of hugh waterpower projects at Bridge River and other places representing the expenditure of several millions, the B.C. Electric Railway is proceeding with a $6,000,000 gas programme.

The ultimate result of this programme will be the supplying of 25,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily. A new plant in Vancouver is now nearing completion that will add 3,500,000 to the capacity of the present plant, which is 5,000,000 cubic feet. In connection with this work a tar extractor, governor, exhauster and ammonia plant will be built, at a cost of $200,000. Half a million dollars will be spent on a new holder, which will be the tallest building in Vancouver 250 feet altogether.

PILES DISAPPEAR

No painful cutting or greasy salves now needed to banish piles in any form. Dr. Leonhardt's prescription HEM-ROID frees the blood circulation in the lower bowel and removes the cause. It's brought quick and lasting relief to thousands—it must do the same for you or money refunded by McDermid & Jury or Bond's Drug Stores, or any good druggist.

NEW STORE FRONT IS WELL PLANNED

Improvements Made to Mason's Store Are Attracting Considerable Attention.

A spacious, well-lighted new store front of rather original planning, has recently been completed at the E. F. Mason business, 419 George Street, and has attracted considerable attention. It is a single door entrance, with the usual large show windows, but a feature, not in the plans is the upper window above the entrance in which goods may be shown, and which gives the front a sort of "double-deck" appearance that is not common to the Peterborough stores.

MUSICAL PROGRAM.

(Examiner Correspondence)

THOMASBURG, Dec. 13.—The Women's Auxiliary of the Anglican Church held its annual bazaar in the Oddfellows' Hall on Wednesday evening. The tables were nicely decorated and fancy work, quilts, knitting and cooking were displayed. Fortune telling, a fish pond and a candy counter drew groups to their different corners.

Lunch was served throughout the evening and music by Miss Mildred Arbuckle, Warren Arbuckle and Clarence Mouch with piano, violin and guitar made the evening interesting to all.

An interesting feature of the bazaar was a bottle of beans carried by Harold Mires on which guesses were received as to how many beans were in the bottle. Ernest Coulter guessed the nearest number and received a quilt as his prize. The proceeds amounted to $110.

United Counties Honor Col. MacNachtan

Late Clerk Laid Away With Full Military Honors

Hundreds Of Citizens From Far and Near Line Streets Of Cobourg As Whole District Pays Tribute to Counties' Clerk and Friend

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH IS FILLED TO CAPACITY
GUN CARRIAGE CARRIES REMAINS TO RESTING PLACE

Men From Every Walk Of Life Follow Mourning Bier, With Union Jack and Atop It the Sword and Cap Of An Artillery Officer, to Grave

COBOURG, December 14 (Special to The Examiner). — A gun carriage of the Artillery service to which he had been so long and so ardently attached, bore the body of Colonel Neil MacNachtan along crowd-laned streets of Cobourg yesterday as the whole district paid his life and memory a last mournful tribute of farewell.

The afternoon was as mild and misty as late October, bringing friends from long distances, and merging them all into the Cobourg scene and its pervasive, palpable air of sadness. This community, drawing its numbers temporarily from near and far, was more than Cobourg. It was Col. MacNachtan's community of friends, an unforgettable and final reminder of the fineness of his personality, the last glow of a bright spirit before the enclosing dark snuffed it out for ever. In this constituency of his were little children when he used to greet so kindly and comradely in the street and who understood so little the significance of that moving bier, with its Union Jack, and atop it the sword and the blue and red cap of an artillery officer, the two teams of horses drawing that strange hearse, the company of soldiers with their rifles reversed and their slowly measured steps, the riderless horse with the officer's boots on either side of the saddle and the heels towards the horse's head.

Many Officers Attend.

There were, of course, officers in smart, bemedalled uniforms, many men from the municipalities of the district, and so many others, all friends, in the long file of automobiles. This common, splendid expression of respect was the true measure of Col. MacNachtan's life and work, a posthumous returning of all his kindly acts, of his sound and manly counsel, of the interests and companinships he shared with so many and in such different places.

And lastly there were the thousands of spectators, who had filled St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, his church, during the service, and crowded along the main business streets. It was all a spectacle to store away in the memory, with other recollections of "The Colonel," who had given of himself so cheerfully and generously, and in so many undertakings that he himself could never have known there was so much of sentiment and gratitude to return to him.

Honorary Pall-Bearers.

The honorary pall-bearers were Warden Charles H. Davidson of Camp belliford, Lt.-Col. A. E. Hopper, M.C., of Cobourg; Lt.-Col. J. F. Wolfram of Colborne, Lt.-Col. F. D. Boggs of Cobourg, Col. W. H. Floyd of Cobourg, Col. J. W. Odell of Cobourg, Col. E. E. Snider of Port Hope, Col. Lorne McLaughlin, D.S.O., C.M.G., of Bowmanville.

The pall-bearers were: Sergeants Alex. Bird, Robert Higginson, Richard Lee, John Davidson, Sergeant-Major George Cunningham, and Sergt.-Major Herbert Wicks.

Other officers from the Northumberland and the Durham Regiments and the three branches of the Cobourg Artillery were: Major McKinnon, Cobourg; Major Sauva, Brighton; Major D. Burn, Capt. Hurtock, Capt. M. Fritz, Brighton; Capt. Pilkey, Cobourg; Capt. R. E. Drope, Harwood; Capt. (Dr.) Lloyd,Cobourg; Lieut. Edgar Hare, Lieut. W. G. Loney, Lieut. P. Bradberry, Capt. (Dr.) King of the U.S. Army.

Major C. T. Peterson was in charge of the military details of the funeral. The firing party of thirteen men of the 22nd Medium Battery were under the command of Q.-M.-S. David Hill. The last post and revielle were sounded by Trumpeter Ed. Cowan.

Former Wardens.

Among those noticed at the funeral were former Wardens George Greer of Cobourg, A. J. Henderson of Cavan, Walter Fowlds of Hastings, Harry B. Phillips of Brighton, John McCubbin of Warkworth, M. E. Maybee, M.P., Fred W. Bowen, M.P., Milton Elliott of Bowmanville.

Peterborough County Council was represented by Reeve H. B. Rye, representing Warden M. E. Smithson.

C.P.R. TRAIN IS DERAILED

Trainman and Three Mail Clerks Sustain Slight Bruises

FIVE CARS IN DITCH

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—Canadian Pacific Railway train No. 34, which leaves Toronto for Ottawa daily at 11.25 p.m., had five cars derailed at 12.43 a.m. this morning about two miles east of Claremont, due to a rail breaking under the train, according to an official statement issued by the railway to-day.

A trainman, S. Brennan of Ottawa, and Mail Clerks W. Brooks, R. C. Savage, and R. J. Carlin, all of Toronto, sustained slight bruises necessitating medical attention, but all the passengers continued to their destinations, the statement said.

Six passengers were slightly bruised.

What is known as a transverse fissure, which could not be detected from outside inspection was the cause of the derailment, the statement concluded, and this is now under investigation.

Over Embankment

The cars fell over an embankment twenty feet in depth, but they were of steel construction and the couplings remained intact. Had the couplings broken the coaches might have turned over completely, which would have resulted in more casualties among the passengers. Fortunately there was no fire in the mail car.

A farmer living close by heard the crash and immediately came to the rescue. He broke the plate glass window in the mail car and rescued the clerks.

A rescue train and wrecking crew were soon on the scene and quickly had the line temporary repaired with new rails. It is thought that by tonight the line will be cleared, but it will be a matter of days before the derailed cars can be raised to the tracks for removal.

CONSTABLE IS FOUND GUILTY

Allowed Prisoner To Escape From Custody On Moving Train

JUMPED FROM WINDOW

STRATFORD, Ont., Dec. 14. — (Canadian Press).—John Hutchinson, constable of Perth County was lost night convicted by a jury in the general sessions on a charge that "through neglect of duty he did allow a prisoner to escape from custody." He was remanded for sentence.

Hutchinson was in charge of Maxwell Rozan, former head of Guggenheim Distilleries Limited, when the latter escaped from a moving train between Guelph and Kitchener on October 17. Rozan was being brought back from Toronto where he had unsuccessfully appealed a sentence of 18 months in the Ontario Reformatory which he had been given when convicted on a charge of false pretenses with an intent to defraud. It is alleged by the constable that Rozan had been permitted to go into the wash room and that he jumped from the window of the train.

DUKE OF YORK CELEBRATES HIS BIRTHDAY

Royal Prince Had A Naval Career Mapped Out For Him

33 YEARS OLD

Midshipman On H.M.S. Collingwood In Battle Of Jutland In 1916

(By Thomas T. Champion, London Manager of the Canadian Press.)

LONDON, December 14. — The Duke of York's birthday to-day—he is 33 years of age—was celebrated quietly because of the King's illness. The occasion was marked as quietly as possible within the circle of the Royal family. Nevertheless these very circumstances drew a wide measure of attention to the Duke's character and position within the realm.

Until the Prince of Wales reached home a few days ago from Africa the Duke was naturally as much in the Public eye as any personage except the King and Queen, and his movements were observed as closely as theirs. His career was originally intended to closely follow that at first mapped out for his father—a naval career. As the second son of the Sovereign with apparently but a remote chance of ever being called on to undertake the burden of the Crown, he was destined for the naval service.

In Battle of Jutland.

Rather curiously it never seems to be remembered nowadays that the Duke of York was actually present as a midshipman aboard H.M.S. Collingwood in the Battle of Jutland in 1916 and was mentioned in despatches. Illness compelled him to leave the navy and he joined the air force, attaining the rank of wing commander. Health, and quite possibly other considerations, eventually rendered another line of life more suitable than that afforded by the fighting services. The Duke took up a diligent study of a wide range of social subjects, and no member of the Royal Family has a more intimate knowledge of the position, past and present, between Capital and Labor.

But for the King's illness the Duke of York would have spent several days last week studying industrial conditions in the Birmingham area.

In looks and temperament the Duke of York distinctly resembles the Queen. In his early years, to his natural diffidence, was added a hesitancy in utterance. He has conquered the first and almost overcome the second. It is no extravagance to add that the happiest day's work he accomplished for himself, for the Royal Family and for Britain at large, was when he married Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, five years ago.

Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles arrived at Buckingham Palace shortly after noon to-day. They were followed almost immediately by the Duke and Duchess of York and the Prince of Wales for a quiet family luncheon in celebration of the Duke of York's birthday.

WAR FEVER IS COOLING DOWN

Indians Offer Services But Are Informed They Are Not Needed

PARTIES UNITE

LA PAZ, Bolivia, December 14. — Canadian Press. — Fifty Thousand Quichuas and Amaras Indians have offered their services for defence of Bolivia's frontiers. The general military staff thanked the Indian chieftains who brought the offer but told them that their services were not necessary yet.

President Siles formed a new cabinet of national concentration to replace the former ministry which resigned to leave the president free to act as he chose in the crisis.

The war fever to-day appeared to be subsiding generally. Bulletins were posted urging the citizens to return to work and have confidence in the ability of the government to deal with the situation.

Politics Abandoned.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, December 14. — Canadian Press. — Consolidation of all political factions under one head and the adoption of a unified policy in the face of the break of diplomatic relations with Bolivia has been decided upon. The decision was reached at a meeting of leaders of all parties, with President Guggiari and his cabinet, in which the situation was considered.

Parrot Ceases To Talk After Half Century Of Chatter

Bird Soon Surprises Her Owner By Laying An Egg

NORTH BAY, Dec. 14.—(Special to The Examiner).—Hill Tinkus, proprietor of the Mansion House, Little Current, is the proud owner of a parrot that suddenly ceased to talk, after half a century of almost incessant chatter, and laid an egg. This startling performance, so far as the oldest inhabitant can recall, has no precedent in Little Current. For the past three months, Polly has evidently been methodically preparing to realize her life's ambition. Possessing an extensive, colorful vocabulary, embracing not alone the grammatical niceties of drawing room phraseology but the vernacular of indignant sailors as well, Polly has been silent for the last three months. Alarmed, Mr. Tinkus had feared the bird would expire almost momentarily. Instead, Polly laid an egg, whereupon it is whispered, she regained her speech and weakly murmured: "That's that" descriptive, if not original. Polly was brought to Little Current from St. Paul, Minn., where she had established an enviable reputation as a conversationalist and linguist. Her mimicry powers are said to be almost unlimited.

PRINCE GEORGE REACHES NEW YORK ON HOME TRIP TO BEDSIDE OF KING GEORGE

Air Of Confidence Is Found To Exist Around Buckingham Palace

IMPROVEMENT SHOWN

Bulletin Says His Majesty Will Have Long and Difficult Struggle

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—Canadian Press).—Prince George of England, hurrying home to his father's bedside, reached New York today on the British cruiser Durban which had brought him from Bermuda.

The long grey warship docked at noon alongside the liner Berengaria on which the Prince will make the homeward voyage starting at midnight to-night.

Fog had held up the Durban for several hours off the Ambrose Channel lightship, far down the bay, but when she finally started the trip up the harmor she made good time for the quarantine regulations were waived.

Prince George, surrounded by officers, stood on the flying bridge, as the cruiser came even with the stern of the Berengaria the liner's Union Jack was dipped in salute and the Durban returned the courtesy by dipping the naval ensign that fluttered from her own stern.

Only a few persons were awaiting the arrival of the cruiser, on which the Prince has been serving as "Lieutenant Windsor"

The coast guard Cutter Calumet was standing by at her barge office pier waiting to go down the bay to escort the cruiser to her dock. Captain A. J. Henderson, Coast Guard Commander, said, however, that no members of the committee designated to greet the Prince would accompany the cutter because of the request of the British embassy that the Prince be given no formal welcome.

Because of this request formalities will be limited to greeting the Prince at the 14th street pier by British Ambassador Sir Esme Howard, Prentiss Gilbert, of the U. S. Department of State, British Consul General Sir Harry G. Armstrong, Rear Admiral L. R. De Stigeur, U. S. Naval Commandant in this district, and Capt. Henderson.

Anxiety Must Continue.

An air of slightly greater confidence prevailed among household officials at the Palace to-day. It was emphasized however, that considerable anxiety for the King must continue. The general infection in his system was understood to be the cause of this concern which it was felt would continue until it was definitely known whether the King's strength was sufficient to banish the microbes from his body.

All told, expressions at the Palace to-day appeared to make it clear that while His Majesty was getting on as well as could be reasonably expected there is a long and arduous struggle to be faced before he can be considered on the road to recovery.

The consultation among the physicians this morning lasted for an hour and a half and it was understood that they would return to the Palace this afternoon.

There naturally is wide public gratification over the less critical turn which the King's case appears to have take... The lessening of the tense anxiety of the past few days was reflected in the diminution to some extent of the crowds around the Palace and the altered attitude of those who came to read the bulletin board.

Recently spectators had come plainly fearful of bad news. Most of them to-day approached the board with an air of more confidence as though expecting tidings. There was a feeling, however, that overconfidence would be ill-advised and that King George is still in such a state as to cause the nation great concern.

33 YEARS OLD

His Royal Highness the Duke of York who is celebarting his 33rd Birthday quietly at Buckingham Palace to-day.

LONDON, Dec. 14. — (Canadian Press).—Two brief bulletins issued at Buckingham Palace yesterday told the loyal subjects of the King that their monarch had satisfactorily withstood the shock of his operations. Though naturally weak and exhausted, the King has not lost ground, and his physicians last night even record a slight improvement.

It was also said in the 8.15 p.m. official statement that the local condition remains satisfactory. The morning announcement stated that the pulse was steady.

In view of the extent to which the strength of the royal patient has been tried by three weeks of severe illness, these reports gave great gratification to the public. Should another day pass without any untoward development, the people will begin to breathe more freely, and to hope that the real crisis has been successfully passed.

Five of the King's physicians went to Buckingham Palace last evening but only three of them signed the official bulletin. The signatures were those of Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn, the King's regular physicians, and of Sir Hugh Rigby, the noted surgeon, who operated on His Majesty yesterday. Those three also signed the morning bulletin. The other medical men who were in attendance this evening were Sir. E. Farquhar Buzzard and Graham Hodgson, who on several occasions has made radiographs of the patient.

LONDON, Dec. 14. (Canadian Press).—Although King George has successfully passed through a very critical phase of his illness, the latest official word from Buckingham Palace to-day indicated that there was a long and difficult struggle ahead of him before the danger point was passed, and he reached a convalescent stage.

"The Queen is most grateful to you, Mr. President, for your kind message of which His Majesty will in due course be informed as soon as his strength permits. Though the recent operation, successfully treated one phase of the King's serious illness, the consequences of the general infection will entail weeks of slow and anxious progress before convalescence can be reached."

This message was more informative that the morning's official bulletin, which stated:

"The slight improvement in the King's condition noted last evening is maintained. Any progress must be slow and difficult."

NEW SERVICE TO EXAMINER IN OPERATION

Telegraph Printer Started Delivering News In Office This Morning

MODERN MARVEL

Operator in Toronto, Typing News, Prints Copy in Peterborough

The Examiner took another step forward this morning, in accord with its progressive policy, with the inauguration of a complete leased wire telegraph service by Creed printer. The installation was made in record time by R. Royan, of Creed and Company, Croydon, England, and T. B. Murray, of Canadian Press, Toronto.

The Creed printer consists of a double receiver and a sending apparatus. News "typed" on the sending keyboard in Toronto is printed, just as if by typewriter in The Examiner office, on long rolls of paper. In the same way, news from Peterborough will be typed here and will instantaneously print in Canadian Press office at Toronto.

Great Step Forward.

Provincial daily papers have been handicapped, hitherto, by the lapse of time between filing of the message in Toronto or other points and delivery The message had to be edited, perhaps re-written, then sent to a telegraph operator, where it awaited its turn, then transmitted by Morse, copied in the city of destination, and carried by messenger to the newspaper office.

To-day it was necessary only for an operator in Toronto to type his message on a standard typewriter keyboard, and the Creed mechanism transmitted it automatically and without a second's delay, printing it clearly and accurately. News which ordinarily would not reach The Examiner until 9.30 was laid on the editor's desk at 8 o'clock.

The tremendous advantage this will be to The Examiner, and the wonderful service it will give Examiner readers, can be imagined. More news and a quicker news service, results immediately and The Examiner editors will have a wider choice of news with which to satisfy the needs of all classes of the community.

There are now three newspapers on The Examiner's circuit—Kingston, Owen Sound and The Examiner. All are supplied with news, according to their needs, from Canadian Press, Toronto, a co-operative news-gathering agency in which all Canadian daily newspapers participate.

Within a few weeks, London and Oshawa will be added to the printerized leased wire circuits, and Mr. Royan will then travel westward, making further installations.

First Messages.

The first message transmitted to The Examiner by the new apparatus this morning was from the general manager of Canadian Press, as follows:

"Greetings and congratulations on the opening of complete leased wire news service into your office via this efficient Creed telegraph printer circuit. Regards."

Then followed a special service bulletin on the King's condition, as follows:

E. O. S. Bulletin—
London, December 14. (C.P.) — (King's Condition)—King George's physicians this morning issued this bulletin:
"The slight improvement in the King's condition noted last evening is maintained. Any progress must be slow and difficult."
7.41 a.m. W. G.

Further Congratulations.

There followed congratulations from Owen Sound and Kingston, The Examiner's partners on the circuit:

"Glad to know that you are with us on the Creed circuit this morning. Our machine has been working fine for two weeks and we are well pleased.—Owen Sound Sun-Times."

"Congratulations on opening of your new leased wire service with Creed printer. Am sure you will find it a wonderful help to your excellent paper.—Kingston Whig-Standard."

To all of these Mr. Glover replied, his messages being sent over the new circuit.

When certain necessary alterations have been made to the office, probably next week, The Examiner will issue an invitation to citizens to call and see this latest of telegraphic marvels at work.

It is noteworthy that the entire apparatus is British in conception and design and manufacture. A foreign manufactured instrument could have been obtained a year ago, but The Examiner delayed installation until the British product became available.

Situation Becoming Serious in Toronto; Schools Are Closed

Dr. W. J. Bell, Deputy Minister of Health Says Outbreak Is Not Malignant and Not Dangerous In Itself, But Patients Should Go To Bed

RESIDENCE DEANS OF TORONTO UNIVERSITY IN SESSION
SEVENTY-FIVE ADMITTED TO ST. MICHAEL'S INFIRMARY

City Health Authorities Refuse To Admit That There Is An Outbreak of "Flu"; Say Only Small Number Of Cases Reported

TORONTO, Ont., December 14 (Canadian Press). — Influenza has become general throughout Ontario, according to Dr. W. J. Bell, Provincial Deputy Minister of Health. Schools in various parts of the province have been closed, and it is likely numerous others will follow if the epidemic continues to advance.

In a statement issued last night, Dr. Bell stated that the present outbreak of influenza "is not malignant, and not dangerous in itself, but patients should go to bed and remain there until they are fully recovered. That is the only safe way. The weather, of course, is unfavorable."

Following the severe outbreak among colleges connected with the University of Toronto, a meeting of residence Deans of University College has been called for to-day to decide on the advisability of closing the women's residences.

During the week 75 men were admitted to the infirmary of St. Michael's College, while nine were forced to remain in bed at Burwash Hall, Victoria College's men's residence. None of the cases are thought to be grave, however.

Ten women have been admitted to the hospital in connection with the women's residences of Victoria College, while St. Hilda's College, a girls' residence school, was closed yesterday and will not re-open until the first of the year.

City health authorities, however, last night refused to admit there was an outbreak of he "flu" in the city. Only a small number of cases have been reported, they stated.

Thousands of Cases

London, Ontario, reported thousands of cases of a mild type; office and shop staffs badly depleted and school attendance cut. There are hardly enough men left in the fire halls to man the apparatus.

The High School at Kemptville has been closed and the public school attendance cut in half, while schools at Spencerville and Winchester are closed.

Though Assumption College at Windsor was closed when 200 students were taken down with the disease, Border authorities stated there was little danger of the disease becoming serious in the district.

Hamilton has a mild though not serious epidemic. The Sarnia Collegiate was closed to-day when 160 pupils and five teachers were absent because of influenza. The institution will re-open next Tuesday.

Teaching ranks in the Toronto public schools have become so depleted that no fewer than 170 substitutes had to be provided to fill the temporary vacancies. The supply of "occasionals" is also becoming depleted, and circulars were sent out yesterday to all principals asking them for a list of any available persons qualified to take a class.

SARNIA, Ont., December 14 (Canadian Press). — The Sarnia Collegiate Institute and Technical School was closed to-day, and will remain closed until next Tuesday on account of an outbreak of influenza among pupils and teachers. The closing order was issued by the Board of Education after consultation with Dr. J. A. Bell, Medical Officer of Health. One hundred and sixty pupils and five teachers are absent from the institution. The disease is quite prevalent in the city, but Public School pupils have so far escaped.

GRAND JURY MAKES REPORT

Several Recommendations Are Made After Inspecting Public Institutions

HOSPITAL ADDITION

The report of the Grand Jury presented to His Honor Judge Huycke after their tour of inspection of the institutions supported by public grants in the county is a very favourable one. It discloses that all these institutions are in good condition and are being well managed by those in charge. The Grand Jury brought in several recommendations for slight improvements. They asked that a shower bath replace the tub in the jail and that two baths be played in the Children's Shelter, one for the boys and another for the girls. The Grand Jury also expressed the hope that soon an addition will be built to the Nicholl's Hospital.

Pray for Recovery

"We the Grand Jury empanelled according to law, at the outset of our report deeply regret the serious illness of His Majesty, King George 5th, and pray that he may recover to rule the British Empire for years to come.

"We have given due consideration to one criminal case laid before the Jury and have brought in a true bill. The fact that there was only one criminal case speaks fairly well for the County of Peterborough as a law abiding community and for the efficiency of the County and City Police.

"We have carefully inspected the several public institutions and report as follows:

"The County Jail under the careful management of Colonel Johnston was found in good order, with seventeen prisoners, five under remand and twelve serving sentences for various offences. We suggest a shower bath replace the present bath tub and a new thirty gallon hot water tank.

"On visiting the County House of Refuge we noted the well-kept house, farm and stable. The inmates numbering twenty-two expressed themselves as happy under the kind supervision of Mr. and Mrs. Fry who are giving their best to the institution. We recommend the cistern pump be piped to the present laundry for convenience, and some necessary shingle repairs to the roof of the house. Mr. and Mrs. Fry are to be congratulated for the present condition of his home and for bringing the Home and farm up to the standard it is.

Thirty Nine Inmates

"The Protestant Home with its thirty-nine inmates under the able supervision of Miss Lancaster is a real home. Every one seemed happy and contented.

"The Nicholls Hospital has sixty-two patients in charge of Mrs. Leeson and staff. Everything is in excellent condition and we hope that this institution will be enlarged to meet the demands in the very near future.

"St. Vincent's Orphanage under the direction of Mother Perpetua and the Sisters of St. Joseph with twenty-three boys and nine girls is very carefully kept and supervised.

"The Children's Shelter with twelve children under the care of Mrs. Elliott is in good condition. We recommend an additional bathroom be installed so that the boys and girls may have separate accommodation.

"St. Joseph's Hospital with its modern building and splendid equipment is caring for eighty-three patients under the kind attention of Mother St. Bernard and staff of

SEEKS INCORPORATION

Nine Airplane Clubs Are Awaiting Formal Approval By Government

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—It was learned here yesterday that Parliament at its forthcoming session will be asked to vote sufficient funds to double the present number of machines at the disposal of light airplane clubs. In the estimates last year a sum was passed to provide for the purchase of 32 planes, all of which have been distributed to clubs established in various parts of the Dominion.

It is understood that an appropriation exceeding $200,000 will be sought to provide for expansion in 1929.

Nine new clubs are already awaiting formal approval of their organization plans, and a number of these already have instructors in training in anticipation of starting operations next spring.

Following are the cities that are in line for incorporation: Fort William, Peterborough, St. Catharines, Brantford, Kingston and Brockville, in Ontario; Quebec; St. John, N.B.; and Sydney, N.S.

JUNIOR FARMERS HOLD CONFERENCE

DISTRICT JUDGING CONTESTS RECOMMENDED FOR EXHIBITION

Junior Farmers and Farm Girls Of Eight Counties At Cobourg

GIRLS PROMINENT

Better Farming And Better Farm Life Sought By Conference

COBOURG, Dec. 14. — District judging competitions in livestock and household science to be held at the Peterborough Exhibition, similar to those at the Ottawa and London fairs, are the recommendation of the junior farmers and farm girls of eight Central Ontario counties, who met here Thursday. The group of counties comprises Ontario, Durham, Victoria, Northumberland, Peterborough, Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington.

The conferences were separate, and influence by recent conspicuous attentions paid by the Department of Agriculture to five hundred junior farmers of the province, the girls, that is the members of the junior institions as their organization is generally called, are now asking for a corresponding privilege. Their resolution by Helen Garbutt of Peterborough, seconded by Leah Webster of Victoria County, respectfully recommends to the department consideration of the idea of entertaining 500 girls in Toronto at the time of the Royal Winter Fair on a basis similar to the boys' party, and that copies of this resolution be sent to the Hon. John S. Martin, the Federal Board of Women's Institutes, and the local members of the provincial legislature.

About one hundred and thirty young representatives of rural Central Ontario attended the conferences, the girls registering the larger attendance. They met together at the noon luncheon in St. Peter's parish hall, and heard an address by Dr. J. B. Reynolds of Port Hope, formerly of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph.

Better farmers, better farming and better farm conditions, embraces the broad sweep of the addresses and discussions at the twin conferences. Percy Gardner of Peterborough was chairman of the junior farmers' sections, and Bessie Hunter of Ontario county conducted the junior institute sessions.

Prince Edward's Effort

Gerald Anderson of Prince Edward County related the progress made during the year in junior farm work. Their executive obtained a grant of $100 from their county council, purchased a trophy for a county debating competition and enlisted the co-operation of three of the seven townships in Prince Edward. This coming season it was hoped that all the townships would be represented by debating teams.

In an inter-county series of debates the Prince Edward boys defeated the Lennox and Addington speakers at Napanee, and next won from the Northumberland county team.

"I believe Prince Edward is still in the running and the final inter-county trophy match is still to be competed for with Durham as our opponents" Mr. Anderson said.

A field day of sports last July at Picton was a most encouraging event. The junior farmers were assisted by the Picton Kiwanis who took almost entire supervision of the sports and gave liberal prizes for the winners. The Prince Edward judging team won the White trophy at Ottawa.

A Hastings Experience

Maurice Mallory of Hastings county reviewed some of the difficulties his organization had encountered. Leadership was not continuous. Young farmers, who showed abilities as leaders carried on the work for a time, and then seemed to lose interest and drop out. Some of the young people were more interested in dances and social affairs

AUTOMOBILES ARE BURNED

Boy Was Removing Gasoline From Car When It Splashed On Lantern

PUT UP HEROIC FIGHT

KEENE, Dec. 14.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Two cars on the farm of Vincent McCarthy near Keene station were totally destroyed by fire last evening at about seven o'clock. One of the boys of he family was removing the gasoline from one of the cars by the light of a lantern. A splash of gasoline hit the lantern and an explosion took place setting the cars on fire.

The two young sons of Mr. McCarthy made a heroic fight of the flames keeping them from spreading to the shed in which the cars were housed. If the flames had reached the shed it is quite likely that the whole farm house and buildings would have been burned. The garage was attached to the woodshed and this in turn to the house and the barn with the straw stacks was not far from the driveshed and if the shed had caught fire it would likely have quickly spread to all the others.

Summoned by telephone large numbers of men gathered in a short time from all parts of the township and their aid would have been most necessary if the brave fight of the two boys had not been in vain.

Some insurance was carried on the two cars.

'Flu' Epidemic Thins Ranks of Teachers

TORONTO, Ont., December 14. —Canadian Press. — There seems to be a regular epidemic of "flu" among the teachers of the Toronto public schools. The teaching ranks have become so depleted that no fewer than 170 "occasionals"—substitute teachers—had to be provided to fill the temporary vacancies, according to figures given out by Chief Inspector Moshier yesterday.

Gordon Richards, the famous English jockey, is shown riding a donkey the donkey derby which was held in aid of St. Peter's hospital, Covent Garden, England.

GOVERNMENT WILL SURVEY ABITIBI BEDS

Extensive and Systematic Drilling Will Be Undertaken In Spring

COAL AREAS

Tests Will Also Be Made For Oil in Cochrane Territory

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—Extensive and systematic drilling will be undertaken by the Ontario Government in the Abitibi River area next year to determine the extent of lignite coal beds at Blacksmith Rapids and to prove the presence of oil in commercial quantities elsewhere in the rock formation of the district.

G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of the Province, stated that all equipment necessary to the undertaking would be taken in from "end of steel" on the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway during the winter months, and that actual drilling would be commenced with the first favorable spring weather and would be carried on continuously throughout the balance of the year.

This new venture of the Government is based directly on recent official tests made of Blacksmith Rapids lignite by the testing branch of the Ottawa Department of Mines. These tests had produced "very encouraging results," Premier Ferguson said, "and demonstrates, in fact, that the lignite in question can be put to any one of several valuable uses."

"By low temperature carbonization the lignite is converted into 'char' with a fixed carbon content of 80 per cent. and about 15 per cent. ash," the Prime Minister stated. "It has 11,500 to 12,000 B.T.U. It has been demonstrated that the 'char' can be made into briquette, having all the desirable characteristics of anthracite coal with quite as high heating efficiency. It may also be burned in its raw state, or it can be pulverized and used under boilers, smelters and in pulp mills."

The scene of the tentative operations is approximately 100 miles from Cochrane.

ATTACKS SAID TO BE INHUMAN

Attorney-General Says Editor Went Ouf Of Way To Revile Sovereign

BAIL SET AT $8,000

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 14. — Canadian Press.—"I think it is very subversive at this time when the King is ill, to make these attacks," said Hon. W. H. Price yesterday with reference to the articles published in Vapaus. "It is almost inhuman, outside of any other consideration. We ordinarily do not pay much attention to these Communist things, unless they are vital, because lots of these chaps are seeking publicity, and the more they get the better they like it. But this is a case where, evidently, the writer has gone out of the way for the purpose of reviling the Sovereign."

"Will the King die? It is all the same to us," the Vapaus said, according to the translation. "Capital is the one thing which really rules in modern society, kingship being only a lawful piece of decoration, while gluttonous financiers riot with the wealth secured through the workers' sweat and blood."

"Will the King die? If he does, we hope royalty will die with him, and a Republic take its place. The change of kings will not better our conditions, no matter who holds the sceptre. Only the rise to power of the workers themselves will save us from the curse of capitalism."

Bail Set at $8,000.

SUDBURY, Ont., December 14. — Canadian Press. — Charged with publishing seditious libel with reference to the King and the Prince of Wales, Arvo Vaaro, editor of Vapaus, a Finnish newspaper published here, was arrested last night by Chief of Police Louden and Inspector Pyle. Bail was set at $8000, and at midnight had not been furnished. Vaaro probably will appear in the police court today.

Vaaro made no statement when arrested outside his home. He is a native of Finland but a naturalized British subject.

Hon. W. H. Price, Attorney-General of Ontario, instructed Crown Attorney McKessock to investigate two recent articles in Vapaus. The articles referred to the illness of the King and were in opposition to the monarchy. The arrest followed the conclusion of the Crown Attorney's investigation.

Considerable feeling has been aroused locally by the articles. The Sudbury branch of the Canadian Legion met last night and passed a resolution urging action by the Provincial authorities against the paper. The resolution was forwarded to the Attorney-General.

DISPENSING SACRAMENTS IS DISCUSSED

Lindsay Presbytery of United Church Holds December Meeting.

PROTEST ENTERED

Resident Ministers of Haliburton County Request the Services of a Deaconess.

(Examiner Correspondence)

DUNSFORD, Dec. 14.—The Lindsay Presbytery of the United Church of Canada held its December session in the Queen Street United Church, Lindsay on Tuesday. The roll call was taken by use of an attendance card which had been previously prepared by Rev. J. J. David, the secretary of the Presbytery.

Mr. David reported that in response to a request which had come from lay supplies seeking the privilege of administering the sacraments he had talked with Dr. T. Albert Moore, secretary of the General Assembly who informed him that this matter had been thoroughly discussed and considered in conjunction with officials of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland and that there was no probability that the privilege of administering the sacraments would be given to laymen who might be engaged as circuit supplys as it had been agreed that this be the work only of ordained ministers of the church.

There was considerable discussion upon the matter of the new hymnal and several members voiced their displeasure at the delay in sending out proof copies to ministers and local congregations so they might have the opportunity of passing it and making suggestions. Some members of the court were in favor of passing this order of the General Council over and giving the hymn book committee authority to issue the new book without any consideration from the congregations. It was finally agreed that a communication in the form of a mild protest be sent direct to Dr. Gunn, Moderator of the United Church of Canada, setting forth the difficulties involved on account of the delay in sending out the proof copies and urging that these be sent forward in accordance with the ruling of the General Council as soon as possible.

Submits Report

Rev. R. N. Nicholson, of Cannington, reported for the joint committees of Evangelism and Social Service and Religious Education re the minister's retreat and suggested that the name which seemed offensive to some be changed to Spiritual Conference. Mr. Nicholson stated that two different efforts had been made to arrange for such a conference during the month of November but on account of illness the arrangements had to be cancelled.

It was finally decided upon further report of the joint committees to hold a Spiritual Conference in Lindsay the day following the next meeting of the Presbytery which is to be during the latter half of February. There will be a two day session of Presbytery the first to be devoted to general business and especially the matter of the new Hymn book, the evening of that day to be taken up with an open meeting addressed by Dr. D. N. McLachlan, of Toronto, general secretary of the Department of Evangelism and Social Service. The second day is to be for ministers only and will be devoted to a study of the minister's problems and work with several brief papers and talks on such subjects as, "The Minister's Dependence upon the Holy Spirit", "The Minister and Bible Study", "The Minister and Prayer", "The Minister and Public Woship", and "How to Conduct an Evangelistic Mission."

The resident ministers of Haliburton county sent in a request to have a deaconess appointed to work in that county. This was passed on to the Home Mission Committee.

Allotment Nearly Reached.

The report of the Missionary and Maintenance Fund given by Rev. C. C. Washington, of Fenelon Falls, showed that to date about 25 per cent of the whole year's allotment had been sent in. This was two per cent better than at the same date a year ago. The prospects were that only about eighty or eighty-five per cent of the allotment for the year would be realized as the prospective reports showed that there would be a deficit of five or six thousand dollars. Eight charges in the Presbytery had given nothing; ten were away down; fifteen may not give as much as in the last full year; five are not likely to give as much as in the previ-

DISTRICT NEWS

(Examiner Correspondence)

NORHAM, Dec. 14.—On Tuesday afternoon, as little Tom Lake was starting home from the White School he climbed on a load of gravel and in some way, his leg was caught between the wheel and the wagon box and was badly lacerated. Only the prompt action of the driver prevented more serious injury. Dr. Armstrong was called and the child taken to his office where twenty stitches were required to close the wound.

SCHOOL MEETINGS ON DECEMBER 26

Baptist Minister Was Delayed on Sunday by Automobile Trouble.

CARS IN DITCH.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, Dec. 13.—The annual meetings of the various schools in the district will be held on the Wednesday between Christmas and Nw Year's Day, December 26. The trustees of each section have some latitude for the hour. Every ratepayer, whether a parent or not, is expected to attend these meetings, and parents should do so in the interests of their children.

Minister Delayed.

The Baptist congregation waited expectantly for their pastor on Sunday morning, until nearly 11.30 o'clock, when a telephone message came that the car had become disabled and run into a ditch. One of the members took his car and went for the minister. The break was repaired later. This was not an accident of skidding off the road, but an unforeseen accident to the car.

Many places along the road show where someone had run off and nearly every day some car is seen upside down. People, so far, seem to have escaped much injury.

Messrs. Archie Crowe, Ivan Drain, and the Misses Valetta and Cora Drain, visited Mrs. Adamson, of Keene, on Sunday.

MILLBROOK WOMEN RE-ELECT PRESIDENT

Most Encouraging Reports Are Received at December Meeting of Missionary Society.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, December 14. — Mrs. (Rev.) W. W. Jones was hostess for the December meeting of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of the United Church, over 40 members being present at the parsonage on Wednesday afternoon, and a very fine gathering being held.

Reports were received from a number of the officers, and all proved most encouraging, showing that a good year's work had been accomplished, with a growing interest and enthusiasm manfested throughout the entire twelve months.

Mrs. (Dr.) Rae, a former Presbyterial officer, took charge of the election of officers, the list for 1929 being:

President: Mrs. W. W. Jones.
Vice-Pres.: Mrs. Rae.
2nd Vice-Pres.: Mrs. H. E. Smith.
Recording Sec.: Mrs. C. W. Richards.
Treas.: Miss M. E. Hetherington.
Cor. Sec.: Miss Pearl Burnham.
Christian Stewardship Sec.: Miss Estelle Hetherington.
Strangers' Sec.: Mrs. F. H. Smith.
Associate Helpers' Sec.: Mrs. A. J. Henderson.
Literature Sec.: Mrs. R. H. Edmunds

The superintendent of the Mission Band will be appointed in the immediate future, Mrs. M. McDowell and Mrs. V. C. Lambert doing the work since the former chief officer, Mrs. G. W. Sayles, moved to Toronto.

Treasurer's Reports.

The treasurer's report showed some money still to be raised before the full allocation of $575 will be reached but as the Circle and the Band have not yet held their annual meetings and what they raise is added to the total givings of the Auxiliary, it was felt that some delay will be necessary in making up the accounts for the year.

On motion of Miss Hetherington and Mrs. Rae, it was decided to make the deficit a matter of prayer,, asking that each member also consider whether she can add a further free-will offering before the final report is made out by January 7, 1929. Already the Auxiliary has raised $298, and the Circle and Band expect to contribute $100 each to the funds.

In accepting the office of president for another year, Mrs. Jones thanked the members for the confidence they had expressed by their ballots in her fitness for the position, but urged strongly the need of their prayers if the duties devolving upon her are to be fittingly discharged.

Rev. Mr. Jones also spoke briefly, encouraging the workers in their great task, and closed the meeting with the benediction.

Mrs.. Jones, assisted by Mrs. W. E. Ball, and her daughter, Miss Beatrice Jones, served delicious refreshments during the enjoyable social hour at the close of the business session.

The reports of the group leaders will be received at the January meeting, as these were not complete enough to be all given on Wednesday.

SOCIETY ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Springville Women Hold Regular Monthly Missionary Meeting.

SPRINGVILLE, Dec. 14 (Examiner Correspondence). — The Springville W. M. S. met on Wednesday for their regular monthly meeting and annual election of officers, with the vice-president, Mrs. J. Grandy in the chair.

Mrs. A. Hunter concluded the study of Dr. Margaret MacKellar by reading the last two chapters of the book dealing with her "Service in India" before and during the Great War.

One of the helpful ministries of Dr. MacKellar's life is her letter-writing. Often, at great expenditure of time and energy, she sits at her desk answering letters. Anyone in need of help who appeals to her can be sure of a sympathetic and prompt reply. Akin to the ministry of letter-writing is that of sending out tracts or booklets. Dr. MacKellar has posted thousands of these.

In her nearly twenty-seven years in India she has seen a goodly number of souls brought to Christ through her medical missionary work, and "saved to serve" Christ in India.

Mrs. William Whitfield read a lovely Christmas poem, "Bearing Gifts to Bethlehem," and an interesting article about an Indian mission on the British Columbian coast was read by Mrs. S. S. Staples.

The election of officers followed, resulting as follows:

President, Mrs. George Whitfield; vice president, Mrs. J. Grandy; secretary, Mrs. M. Johnston; treasurer, Mrs. A. Hunter; associate helpers' secretary, Mrs. E. Kelk; missionary monthly secretary, Mrs. S. S. Staples; strangers' secretary, Mrs. William Whitfield; supply secretary, Miss A. Brown; press secretary, Mrs. George Whitfield.

Mrs. A. Murray returned yesterday from Lindsay and reports a full house to hear the concert provided by Miss Payton and Mrs. Mars Westington.

AFTER-DINNER ORATORY.

Those two hyphenated but excellent newspapers, the Kingston Whig-Standard and the Stratford Beacon-Herald, have been conducting a friendly discussion on the subject of after-dinner speeches.

Our Eastern contemporary would do away with such efforts entirely; the Western Ontario journal, on the other hand, suggests an endeavor to make them better.

On the whole, our vote goes to the latter suggestion.

Nobody suffers more from having to listen to meaningless addresses than the newspaper reporter.

Year in and year out he has to cock an attentive ear in the direction of a thousand and one orators, some good, some bad and many indifferent, record what he hears, and turn it into passable English for the benefit of his paper's readers.

Often he wishes with the Whig-Standard that post prandial oratory could be eliminated completely, but, fortunately, every now and then he runs into a speech so eloquent, so clean-cut and so significant that he realizes the world would lose much if after-dinner speeches were to go into the discard completely.

That is why we agree with the Beacon-Herald that the right thing to do is to strive to make after-dinner addresses better—not do away with them.

MUNICIPAL GAS PLANTS.

Figures given in the twelfth bulletin issued by the Bureau of Municipal Affairs in regard to municipal statistics for 1927 throw some light upon the municipal operation of gas plants, a question in which Peterborough is particularly interested by reason of the vote to be taken here on New Year's Day.

There are ten municipally-owned gas plants in Ontario, and last year eight of them showed a net profit on the year's operations.

Brockville reported a profit of $13,333.18; Guelph, $16,309.09; Kingston, $13,700.75; Kitchener, $1,621.31; Owen Sound, $5,564.76; St. Thomas, $13,113.35; Waterloo, $395.39; and Leamington, with a natural gas service, $25,120.53.

It is notable that in all these places the rates charged were lower than those paid in Peterborough, while, as an interesting coincidence, the two cities showing a deficit on last year's operations, Belleville and Stratford, charged higher rates than the rest.

Belleville had a net loss of $2,519.18, and Stratford reported a deficit of $2,466.62, the rate in Belleville being $1.85 per 1,000 feet and in Stratford $2.00 and $1.85 per 1,000 feet.

The lowest rates charged in any municipal plant, with the exception of cost of Leamington's natural gas service, was $1.02 per 1,000 feet in Kitchener.

OFFSETTING ACCIDENTS.

"The advantages of wide streets more than offset any increase in accidents," is a rather startling statement made by the Toronto Star the other night in discussing the effect of widening streets and banning parking on busy thoroughfares.

The doctrine that the comfort and convenience of motorists is of more importance than human life is one to which most people would hesitate to subscribe.

No advantages along the lines of speeding up traffic and providing more comfortable driving conditions should be considered as offsetting any increase in accidents occasioned by such changes.

Surely it is much more important to save human beings from death or serious injury than it is to save a few minutes' time for motorists.

The main object to be sought in every new traffic regulation, in every street improvement, should be the general safety, and if wider streets and similar changes do not bring about that object it is nonsense to pretend that increases in accidents are offset, as the Star cynically puts it, by the advantages obtained.

In the final analysis life is the most precious possession, and its preservation should be considered as of paramount importance; there is no benefit that can "offset an increase in accidents."

THE OPENING OF THE NEW SCHOOL.

The assembly hall of the new Vocational School will undoubtedly be crowded to-night by citizens anxious to participate in the opening ceremonies and to listen to the address of Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Education.

The double attraction will ensure a capacity attendance worthy of the significance and importance of the occasion.

The formal opening of this splendid new wing, which offers facilities for education hitherto denied the young people of this district, is an event of outstanding interest.

The introduction of vocational training on a scale that up to the present has been impossible here opens wide the door of opportunity to the boys and girls of Peterborough, and it is well that the community's appreciation of what is involved in the building of this fine structure should be indicated.

The Premier's address will serve to emphasize the significance of the event.

Mr. Ferguson takes his duties as Minister of Education very seriously and is intensely interested in the various phases of educational development, particularly in the opportunity he has found of carrying the torch to children in districts not before reached by Ontario's educational system.

Such innovations as correspondence courses for children far removed from schools and travelling schools for youngsters in the North who live along the lines of the railways have given the Premier more pleasure possibly than any other feature of his political life, and it would not be surprising were he to discuss some of these things with his audience to-night.

ELECTIONS IN 1930.

That the King Government plans no appeal to the people in 1929—elections next year have been persistently rumored—is indicated in an address by the Hon. P. J. Veniot, at Ottawa. The Postmaster-General predicted that the present administration would further reduce national taxes and would continue in office to bring down two more budgets.

Well-informed opinion seems to agree with Mr. Veniot's forecast. The absence of any first-class campaign issue is pointed to. True, we have the tariff question, and the election of Mr. Hoover may give rise to some extra interest in tariff on this side of the line. But it is difficult for even the most astute campaigner to stir up a great deal of election enthusiasm over the tariff. It is, as everyone knows, a subject that has been talked threadbare.

In the background at present, but perhaps more to the fore a few months hence, is the St. Lawrence waterways question. It is hedged around with many difficulties, political and otherwise, but there is a possibility that it—or some phase of it—may yet be made an election issue of front rank importance. Friends of the St. Lawrence scheme do not view this prospect with pleasure. They would not like to see the proposed undertaking made into a political football. Yet it is not at all inconceivable that something of this kind may happen, especially with reference to the Quebec end of the scheme where there is a great diversity of opinion on the principle of public vs. private ownership of public utilities and natural resources.

An appeal to the electorate in 1930 looks like the program at present. The next budget should have something in the nature of tax reductions, but the 1930 statement of the Minister of Finance will be the real "Christmas present" if the administration expects to go to the country that year. We have Mr. Robb's word for it, however, that the income tax is not to be abolished. Speaking in Victoria, B. C., recently, the Minister stated most emphatically that the income tax would remain with us for some years to come. The Government needs the money, Mr. Robb intimated, and the income tax is a convenient way of getting it.—Border Cities Star.

STEPS TOWARDS PEACE.

Supporters of the movement towards the replacement of the arbitrament of the sword by the reign of international law should not be too readily discouraged by its slow and tortuous progress, and by the patent reluctance of Governments to place any large amount of faith in the good intentions of each other. Individuals may be able at short order to undergo a change of heart and outlook that means a sharp right about face in character and course, but with nations it is otherwise. The mass spirit easily roused along the lines with which it is familiar, finds vast difficulty in assimilating the unfamiliar and even more in passing through the period of readjustment. What usually requires generations to accomplish cannot be appreciably approached in a decade.

Notwithstanding the slogan of a war to end war, the world is still living under the shadow of the sword. So long as war remains within the contemplation of the nations as the court of last resort in disputes between nation and nation—a condition that certainly exists today—the sudden abandonment of defense preparations, readily changeable to war preparations, cannot be expected. With nations still laboring under the fear complex, such phenomena as disputes over relative naval and army strength and constructive armament programs, like those now disturbing the English-speaking peoples, are bound to occur.

Transition from the old war system to a new system of reason and arbitration is not to be made easily. Habits of thought which root back in the soil of past conflicts cannot change over night. Many even of those who have begun to hope that a better era approaches are disinclined to be hasty in abandoning old reliances. We are presented, therefore, with the seeming insincerity of attempting to hold to the defensive methods of the past while seeking a new method in which they will be no longer necessary. It is not, in fact, insincerity, but that caution which humanity has developed out of many vicissitudes and disappointments.

For this reason the more intrepid spirits in the adventure which seeks the goal of peace should exerise patience. To drive too hard means to arouse that latent caution, to stir the fear complex, and to invite a reaction which may set back seriously the whole program for advance. Great forward movements have always been subject to the handicap of the slower mass of men. And to try to force the unconvinced, or the half-convinced, is seldom a policy of wisdom.

One lesson, indeed, can be learned from the war system—the lesson of the limited objective. The Great War taught it tragically. Many a brave line was crumpled because it went beyond the point where effective support was possible from the slow-moving artillery. Moreover, an objective had to be gained piece-meal. The salient represented the farthest advance. To gain it and to hold it until the rest of the front could be brought abreast, and it ceased to be a salient by merging into a consolidated system, was frequently the program which had to be followed.

It is thus with the peace movement. The wise strategy now seems to be to concentrate upon securing the ratification of the multilatral war outlawry treaty in its simple, straightforward form. This is the limited objective which might well command the unified effort of all friends of peace. To seek other aims for the moment, either constructively or by attack, is to dissipate strength and to arouse needlessly the apprehension of the timid and the cautious.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

He shall——save them because they trust in Him.—Ps. 37:40.

* * *

Our Father, as Thy children we, in this new day, hope for Thy presence, and listen for Thy voice. That we may be sensitive to Thy touch and alert to Thy word, make us eager to know Thy will and resolute to do it. To know Thee in close intimacy is our need and our prayer.

In Thee is food for all our hungers; light for all our gloom, tasks for all our energies; love—warm, throbbing, sacrificing, to purge away our selfishness. This is our faith—make it our living experience.

Look in pity upon all the sons of men. Bring strife to an end. Establish righteousness in the affairs of nations. Help all rulers to decree justice. Let reason prevail, and love bind together the hearts of men.

Be our sufficiency all day. Be our defense if we are threatened by evil forces; keep us rigid when we are tempted; give us fresh inspiration when our purposes flag; keep us unselfishly, deliberately, eagerly kind all day, when night falls may we have the consciousness of Thy favor, and the peace which passeth all understanding, through Jesus Christ Our Lord. Amen.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1928.

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Benefic aspects are strong today, according to astrology, which reads in the stars promise of a gay holiday season.

While caution in travel is enjoined the best influences seem to attend those who make visits and who seek reunions with friends and relatives.

General business matters are well directed under this sway, which is helpful to those who seek to balance the year's accounts.

Again the stars favor shoppers, making for quick decisions and wise selections.

This is a lucky day for housekeepers and should stimulate preparations for Christmas.

Those who cook as well as those who buy should find the rule of the stars cheering and stimulating.

Under this sway old grievances should be easy to forget and new hopes should be prevalent.

Music and all the arts, including those included in the theatres are well aspected. There should be profit in plays as well as in musical programs.

Late in the afternoon there is a slight adverse aspect that may tend toward trifling annoyances and delays, but they will have little effect upon the spirit of joy that should prevail early this year.

Women should benefit today which is lucky for entertaining bringing to parties of every sort lightness of mood.

Weddings today are well directed. They seem to promise long partnership without danger of divorce.

It is a lucky day for marriage engagements and seems to predicate an especially beautiful ring with which to pledge the troth.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of many pleasures. Lovers of the finer things of life will find much to satisfy them.

Children born on this day have the promise of supreme attainments. Many geniuses are born under this sign which encourages the development of artistic talents. Painters and designers belong to this day.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

EVENING

When the day is over,
When the night is near,
Homeward comes the rover,
Dear ones to the dear.
Though the world is clever,
Though the day was bright,
There's no joy whatever
Like the peace of night.

Some may think the daytime
Is the best of life,
With its worktime, playtime,
And the thrill of strife,
But the eyes are blinder
In the blazing sun
Than a heart grown kinder
When the day is done.

And perhaps that other
Evening shall be fair,
Coming home to Mother
Waiting over there.
When the day is over,
When the night is near,
Homeward comes the rover,
Dear ones to the dear.

COLLEGIATE NOTES

Fire drill occurred at 10.30 a.m. on Wednesday, and under the direction of L. J. Pettit, was conducted successfully.

It was the first fire drill the students of P.C.I. had witnessed this season, and only a few minutes elapsed till all the students were out of the school.

H. R. H. Kenner, Principal of P.C.I., attended on Wednesday the opening of the Belleville Collegiate Institute.

Mr. Kenner mentioned that the Belleville citizens had spend $200,000 more for the construction of their new school, than the citizens of Peterborough had for the P.C.I., but although Belleville Collegiate is a very fine building, Mr. Kenner said that he would sooner have P.C.I.

THE LUCKIEST LADY

BY RUBY M. AYRES

THE STORY THUS FAR:

BIDDY SAUNDERS — The Little Flapper—always called her young adopted mother, MARNA PAGET, the Luckiest Lady, for she thought Marna had everything her heart could wish—youth, beauty, wealth and the love of a devoted husband. But Marna was unhappy. She had married without loving GEORGE PAGET, and three months later had met HUGH HUBBARD and given him her heart. Neither of them had wanted to hurt George. Hubbard had gone to China. But after years of separation, they realize their love is stronger than ever. The Little Flapper, as she grows older, worries a little about Marna, and her friend, the Big Flapper, DOLLY BENSON, has suggested to her that Marna is not happy with George.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

VIII—GEORGE'S SURPRISE

George Paget joined them as they stood together.

"Well, you two children," he said fondly, as he put an arm round each of them, "are you looking forward to your party?" He grinned down through his monocle, first at Marna and then at the Little Flapper.

"Splendid thought of ours, adopting Biddy, don'tcherknow," he said happily, as usual quite forgetting that it had been entirely Marna's idea; and then, as she did not answer, he let his monocle fall with a little agitated click against a waistcoat button and asked: "What are you thinking about? Give you a penny for your thoughts, Marna."

"They're not worth so much," Marna answered. She gently disengaged herself and moved away.

George Paget looked hurt.

"Anything the matter, Biddy?" he asked anxiously.

Biddy shook her head.

"I don't think so. Perhaps she's worried about the party. I know she's dreadfully anxious for it to be a success."

"Everything Marna does is always a success," George answered proudly.

"I know," Biddy agreed. "But she worries,all the same."

Marna's husband smiled suddenly, and pressed the Little Flapper's arm.

"I've got a surprise for her," he said mysteriously.

Biddy looked up.

Paget chuckled.

"No, not diamonds at all this time." He kept his secret like a mischievous schoolboy for yet another moment, then he bent down to the Little Flapper and told her: "Hugh Hubbard's in London, and he's coming to the dance tonight." And then, seeing the blank look in her eyes, he added: "You remember Hugh Hubbard, don't you?"

"Hugh Hubbard!" Sudden remembrance illuminated Biddy's face, and she caught her breath. "Why, of course I do! He went to China, didn't he? Why, of course I remember him! The night I looked over the balusters, just after I came to you——"

So much had happened since that night when, trembling with excitement, she had watched the crowd in the hall below. The years since then had been so happy that many of the incidents which had puzzled and so inexplicably hurt her had been pushed into the background and almost forgotten until now, when George Paget's unexpected mention of Hubbard's name had opened the closed door of memory in the Little Flapper's brain and showed her once again the picture of Marna in her blue frock with its frilly skirt; of Marna's graceful, downbent head, close to Hubbard's broad shoulder, as if she were either very tired or very sad, and of Hubbard's steady eyes, hard with resentful pain, carefully avoiding looking at her. Then out of the past she heard again the sound of Marna's voice:

"You are not very polite. You might at least pretend to be sorry to leave—us—all."

"There is no need for me to pretend." And then Marna again:

"So it's all over, Hugh—all over! Oh, I can't bear it—I can't bear it!"

"Marna, for God's sake! Don't you think I am suffering, too?"

It was as if someone had drawn back a shutter from the past, bidding the Little Flapper look into it once again and see things in a clearer, more understanding light thanshe had seen them five years ago.

Marna and Hugh Hubbard had loved one another; always she had vaguely known and tried to ignore it, but now the truth forced itself back upon her with almost stunning force.

Marna loved a man who was not dear George Paget! Marna loved a man who had gone away and left her alone for five long years. The Little Flapper felt as if someone had turned the sane, solid earth over beneath her feet, leaving her breathlessly and helplessly trying to steady and readjust it.

Hardly knowing what she was doing, the Little Flapper turned and walked away. Her thoughts were in a whirl, and her heart was beating with nameless apprehension.

Was this what Marna had meant when she said that there were things in life which no amount of money could buy? Things which not all the wealth in the world could give to one for one's own, even for a moment? Hugh Hubbard had not been home for five long years! Did people love one another faithfully for so long without once meeting?

Five years seemed an eternity to the Little Flapper. She told herself passionately that even if Marna had cared for Hubbard, then she could care no longer. Surely time changed and cured everything?

George Paget had followed her down the long room, and spoke again anxiously.

"Don't tell Marna about Hubbard. It's to be a surprise for her. She always liked him; they always got on well together. I want to give her a surprise, don'tcherknow!"

The Little Flapper turned. She was quite pale, and her eyes held something of their old, scared look.

"Is he really coming?" she asked painfully.

Paget let his monocle fall. He always did when he was agitated.

"'Course he is!" he protested indignantly. "D'you think I'm jokin', Biddy? Here'"—he seemed suddenly to become aware of her agitation—"what the deuce does it matter to you?" he demanded blankly. "You look quite upset, and the fellow's old enough to be your father!"

"I know," Biddy tried to laugh. "I know he is. But I shall be pleased to see him again. I liked him very much," she declared with an effort.

Paget roared with laughter.

"Liked him very much! Pooh. You were a baby when he was home. I don't believe you can remember what he looks like."

The color rushed to the Little Flapper's cheeks.

"I do—of course I do!" she protested. "He's tall and he's got dark hair, and ever such a nice smile! How could I forget him, when his photograph has always been on the mantelshelf in Marna's sitting-room?"

Marna's husband laughed and pinched her soft cheek.

"Well, don't lose your heart to him," he said playfully. "Hugh Hubbard's a confirmed bachelor, besides being twenty years too old for you. Yes, he's coming all right, but mind you don't tell Marna. I want to surprise her, don'tcherknow!"

He left her hurriedly as the first guests arrived, and the Little Flapper stood looking after him with a pale face and trembling heart.

"Marna ought to be told. She ought to be told," she whispered to herself passionately; but she knew that she had not the courage to tell her.

Hugh Hubbard arrived late. The dancing had been in full swing for nearly two hours before he came The Little Flapper had been up to her room to powder her nose, and was dancing down the big staircase when the front door was opened to admit him.

A manservant was taking his suitcase and hat and coat.

"He's going to stay!" was Biddy's first panic-stricken thought, and her heart gave a sudd n leap of fear.

If Marna still felt as instinct told the Little Flapper she must have felt all those years ago, how could she bear to have him staying in the house?

Hubbard was in evening dress, and Biddy heard him tell the servant that he had changed at his hotel.

"Very good, sir. I will find Mr. Paget."

"Don't trouble. We shall meet directly."

Biddy came down the remaining stairs and walked towards him. She supposed he could not be expected to remember her, but as soon as their eyes met she knew he had done so.

"Why, it's the Little Flapper," he said, for from the very beginning everyone had adopted George Paget's nickname for Biddy.

"Yes." She flushed as she laid her hand in his. "And you haven't altered a bit," she said, with a warm sense of gladness.

"Nor you!" he laughed. "And yet it's five years since I went away.

"It seems ages," the Little Flapper said.

The noisy band had stopped, and people were streaming out into the hall as they had done that memorable night five years ago.

The Little Flapper looked hurriedly round. She wanted to warn Marna that Hugh Hubbard had arrived; she could not bear the thought of her coming unexpectedly face to face with him, or the thought that perhaps prying eyes might witness her sudden shock—perhaps her supreme happiness. She wanted to run to her and tell her, too, that Hubbard had not altered at all, not on tiny little bit—that he had just the same smile and the same steadfast look in his eyes.

"I'll go and find Marna," she began, then broke off with a little stifled exclamation as she heard Marna's laugh and then her voice. The Little Flapper took a frightened step towards Hubbard, laying her hand on his arm.

"Oh, she doesn't know you're coming," she whispered tremulously. "Oh, if you could just wait a moment while I tell her——"

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND SAMMIE'S SANDWICH

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Sammie Littletail was a boy rabbit and he had a sister named Susie. Now this story is mostly about Sammie, though Susie has a part in it, and so has Uncle Wiggily.

To begin at the beginning, Sammie Littletail never could seem to learn his spelling lesson. No matter how hard he studied with his books at home, when he got to the Hollow Stump School next day and the Lady Mouse Teacher would squeak:

"Sammie, spell me the word caster oil!" Why, Sammie would stutter and stammer and maybe he would say:

Sammie would stutter and stammer.

"Cow!" Of course that doesn't spell castor oil as you all know. But it was just the same with other things. Take the word candy, now. That ought to be easy to spell, for it is nicer to think about than castor oil is, and I don't care what you say! But when Sammie was asked to spell candy most likely he would get up and say:

"Mouse!"

Of course, there may be a candy mouse, but that wasn't what teacher meant and it began to look as if Sammie would never learn to spell.

But there was his sister Susie, as bright and smart a little rabbit girl as you would meet if you rode all day in an airship and part of the night. Susie could spell almost any word that was her size. Of course there were some big, hard words in the back of the speller that were too proud and grown up to be spelled by Susie. But she would come to them when she got a little older. Susie was so smart at spelling that the Lady Mouse Teacher used to say:

"I think Susie must have swallowed a spelling book. It would be a good thing if Sammie had a few leaves to chew on."

This was after Miss Mouse had asked Sammie to spell house and he had spelled it store. So this made his sister Susie think how too bad it was that Sammie couldn't spell and at last Susie said to herself:

"I'm going to fix it so Sammie can swallow a few leaves of the spelling book. Once they are inside him, the words will have to come out and maybe he'll get to the head of the class."

But how to make Sammie swallow some pages of the spelling book Susie didn't know until one morning she saw her mother putting up a little lunch of lettuce sandwiches for the children to take to school, as they sometimes did when the weather was too stormy to come home.

"Oh, now I know what I can do!" said Susie with eager, shining eyes. "I'll put some leaves from the book in with the leaves of lettuce in Sammie's sandwich and then he'll learn to spell."

Watching her chance, Susie tore some leaves out of an old spelling book and slipped them in Sammie's sandwich before he put it in his lunch basket. Then the rabbit children hopped on to school and Sammie left his lunch basket in the coat room as did some of the others.

Now it happened that Uncle Wiggily visited the school that day and coming in through the coat room he saw Sammie's lunch basket hanging on a hook. Uncle Wiggily happened to have some peppermint candies in his pocket and, wishing to surprise the animal children, the old rabbit gentleman began opening each lunch box or basket to slip in a few candies. In this way Uncle Wiggily opened Sammie's lunch.

"But what kind of a queer sandwich has Sammie?" asked Uncle Wiggily of himself as he saw the white pages of the spelling book mixed in with the green leaves of lettuce. "Well, of all things!" he went on and when he saw what Susie had done he could not help laughing. "She wants Sammie to swallow a lot of words so he can spell!" laughed Mr. Longears.

"But that isn't the way. Eating paper isn't good for little rabbits, though Billie Wagtail, the goat, seems to like paper. But I think if I go out in the class room and show them Sammie's queer sandwich even that rabbit boy may learn to remember how to spell."

So Uncle Wiggily left the coat room carrying the funny paper and lettuce sandwich and, whispering to Miss Mouse what he was going to do, he called Sammie up front.

"Take a bite of this sandwich and spell me the word paper!" said the bunny uncle. Sammie was surprised, but did as he was told. And when he bit into his sandwich and tasted the paper leaves of the spelling book, though he did not swallow them, he gave a loud laugh and at once knew how to spell paper. Not only that, but afterward when he had studied his spelling lesson, Sammie never forgot it and he grew up to be one of the best spelling rabbits in all the world.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE GRATEFUL

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Thanksgiving Day and other special occasions for showing gratitude are expressions of a fundamental psychological human trait. It goes back to the self-regarding instinct of self-abasement or submission.

We are grateful for many things—for life, for health, for the common, everyday necessities and luxuries. We are most grateful for special favors or unusual bits of good luck. Our gratitude reaches the highest point when we are rescued from possible danger to our life or our fortunes.

The motive for all gratitude is the same. It does not vary in kind. It varies only in degree and intensity. Being grateful is one way of patting ourselves on the back for being so wise, so lucky and so successful. Expressing our gratitude gives us a fine chance to review every phase of our good luck. The satisfaction consists in knowing and realising how well off we are.

The sense of justice and fair play often leads us to acknowledge that our success is due in part to the kindness of some other person. We are all the more eager to make such acknowledgement to a superior person, better to the deity. For at the very moment of humble recognition of our dependence upon another we are asserting our own self-importance in identifying ourselves with that person. The satisfaction comes through a form of self-congratulation. So that after all we are more concerned with magnifying ourselves than in singing the praises of another.

The child boasts of what his father can do. The implication is that the son of a great father is also of some importance. Moreover, the sense of fairness prompting the grateful attitude is self commending from another angle. To be just and to be generous are marks of a large soul. Magnanimity is its own reward. It is expansive. It elates and enlarges the ego.

We are grateful through the urge of generousity and magnanamity. It fits in best with our ideal selfhood and the general standards of a good fellow. But the most important motive for expressing gratitude is not to praise and magnify another so much as it is to convince ourselves and others that we occupy a favorable position.

Being grateful and expressing gratitude is prompted by the same urge that impels the boy to count his money over and over again. In both cases the desire is strong to boast.

Issuing Of Crop Report Strengthens Wheat Values

CHICAGO, (Ills., Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—Evening-up of accounts so as to prepare for the government crop report due this afternoon led to early upturns in grain prices to-day; unfavorable weather for the corn movement tended also to give firmness to values. Opening unchanged to a shade lower, wheat afterward scored slight advances all around. Corn started at a shade to ⅜c higher and continued to point upward. Oats likewise acted firmer. Provisions were inclined to sag.

Opening prices were—Wheat, December 116⅛; March, 119⅛; Corn, December 83¼; March 87; oats, December 48⅝; March 48⅛.

The stock market was generally irregular with many favorite issues suffering slight losses. Canada Bread "A" preferred gained 9¼ points to 116¼ and International Nickel sold ten points to 240. Brazilian gained ½ to 69½, while Bell Teleptone dropped ½ to 167. F. N. Burt sold off for a loss of 1⅝ to 87⅞.

Hiram Walkers continued its recent descent to 70⅛ for a loss of 1⅝ Massey-Harris was down ½ to 84 while Page-Hersey rose 1¼ to 117¾. Shredded Wheat was easier at 89 down one. Imperial Bank gained three to 268 while Royal lost three to 377.

Farmers' Dairy shot up 2½ in early trading to 23½. Carlings was down one at 32 and Seagrams down ¼ at 18¼. Northern Bakeries after opening at forty six for a half point gain reacted to 43⅞ for a net loss of 1⅝ over yesterday's close. Oils were slightly weaker, Beacon at 23, a one cent gain and Super Petroleum 32⅛, a gain of ½ were the exceptions however. McColl-Frontenac dropped ½ to 31; International Petroleum ¼ to 47¾; while British American at 49, Service Station at 53 and Imperial Oil at 89 were unchanged.

POSTOFFICE OPEN UNTIL 9 O'CLOCK

Saturday Afternoon Delivery Until Christmas Starting To-morrow

That the city may be better served during the rush of Christmas season, special preparations for postal delivery have been made by Postmaster Charles Lacheur. He announced this morning that, commencing this Saturday, and for the next three, the mail carriers will deliver mail during the afternoons, while commencing with Monday evening the Post Office will remain open until 9 o'clock each evening.

In appreciation of this extended service, the citizens are asked by the Postal Department to assist by turning in all Christmas mail as early as possible.

MERCHANTS ENTER PROTEST AGAINST TWO LOCAL STORES

Action Of Woolworth and Metropolitan Stores Strongly Criticized

COMMITTEES FORMED

Want Observance of Spirit Of Present By-Law Regarding Nights Open

That the merchants of Peterborough are incensed over the action of the Metropolitan and F. W. Woolworth companies in having their stores remain open after the regular closing time, as provided by by-laws which govern Peterborough drygoods stores, was evidenced by the meeting, held this morning in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce, by the Retail Merchants' Association of the city. Presided over by Thomas Barrie, chairman of the association, the meeting passed a resolution, deploring the non-observance of the spirit of the by-law governing the closing of stores, the merchants present recalling instances where it had been the practice of new concerns to conform to local conditions. It seemed to them unfortunate that cases should arise where companies were not anxious to work in harmony with established Peterborough businesses while large employers of clerical help expressed an unwillingness to subject their staffs to the gruelling labors entailed in keeping the stores open every night before Christmas, even though wages be substantially enlarged thereby. Some even doubted the legality of such a procedure.

Committees Formed

In accordance with the spirit of the meeting, committees were formed for two purposes— to wait upon the managers of the Woolworth and Metropolitan stores with a view to securing their co-operation in the observance of the letter of the present by-law which did not appear to completely govern their stores—and secondly, to interview the city solicitor to determine what steps might be taken in the seeking of legislation to compel the unexceptional closing for the stores.

Those committees will act immediately and will report back to the main body of the Association.

GAS PLANT BY-LAW

The question might be asked what has brought about the presentation of the By-law for the purchase of the Gas Plant at the present time, and the answer is this:

When the Hydro-Electric Commission took over the electrical development in this district they also had to take over other utilities that formed part of the assets, such as the Street Railway and the Gas Plant.

The Commission is not interested in any development other than electrical, and do not undertake the running of street cars, the manufacture or sale of gas, nor the distribution of electrical energy. They sell electrical energy to local commissions which distribute it. The policy of disposing of all other assets has been effective in every municipality where similar conditions existed as in Peterborough. The Street Railway was offered to the City of Peterborough, but the Council could not see it as an investment, and it remained in the hands of the Commission.

The Gas Plant has been under negotiations for many months, and the City Council is to be congratulated on the price they have been able to obtain from the Commission for the sale of it.

The Commission is bound to sell this valuable utility, and before offering it to private interests have given the citizens of Peterborough an opportunity to make the purchase if they so desire. The original price asked was $360,000.00, and excluded some lots and other assets to the extent of about $35,000.00. The Mayor and City Council, through shrewd bargaining, have now obtained a price of $335,000.00 and the assets of $35,000.00 referred to are to be handed to the City in the deal.

The plant has always shown a profit over carrying charges, including maintenance and keeping the plant in excellent state of repair.

READ WHAT OTHER MUNICIPAL GAS PLANTS HAVE DONE:

There are ten municipally-owned gas plants in Ontario, and last year eight of them showed a net profit on the year's operations.

Brockville reported a profit of $13,833.18; Guelph, $16,309.06; Kingston $13,700.75; Kitchener $1,021.31; Owen Sound $5,564.76; St. Thomas $13,113.35; Waterloo $395.39; and Leamington, with a natural gas service, $25,120.53.

It is notable that in all these places the rates charged were lower than those paid in Peterborough, while, as an interesting coincidence, the two cities showing a deficit on last year's operations, Belleville and Stratford, charged higher rates than the rest.

Belleville had a net loss of $2,519.18, and Stratford reported a deficit of $2,466.62, the rate in Belleville being $1.85 per 1,000 feet and in Stratford $2.00 and $1.85 per 1,000 feet.

The lowest rates charged in any municipal plant, with the exception of cost of Leamington's natural gas service, was $1.02 per 1,000 feet in Kitchener.

Calgary Herald Wins Court Decision Against Circus Company.

A case which is of considerable importance not only to newspaper publishers but to the general public as well, has just been decided by the supreme court of Alberta. It seems a circus company telegraphed a news item from Kamloops, B.C., to the Calgary Herald, to the effect that a large sum of money would be invested by the company in a moving picture project in Calgary. Naturally the information was considered of sufficient interest to the people of the city to find a place in the local newspaper. The Calgary Herald, therefore, printed the despatch, which later turned out to be nothing more than an invention of the publicity agent attached to the circus. The Herald brought action against the company and succeeded in securing a favorable verdict, with costs. Defendants were also severely censured by the judge, who declared that their conduct "constituted a deliberate, fraudulent and unfortunately a successful attempt to impose as an item of news something which they apparently conjured up and exploited for their own purpose of self-advertising."

The outcome of this case, we repeat, is of much general interest and importance. The tricks of the free publicity merchants are as manifold as they are ingenious, and it is difficult to secure immunity from their "stunts" however wary one may be. In the guise of "news," columns and columns of unpaid-for publicity are sent out to the various newspaper and magazine offices. It is true, very little of this deluge of reading matter seeps through to the reader, for editors are well aware of the situation and constantly on guard. But a trick like that practised by the circus management is hard to detect until too late. As in this case, the advance notice about impending local developments, coming right from headquarters and taken in good faith, may be reproduced.

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS' TRAVEL

Throughout the year there is no period so like a magnet for drawing people toegther as Christmas time.

No matter where you may be, there is an intensive longing for Christmas at home. Long ago, when travelling facilities were limited, people journeyed many weary miles an endured great hardships in order that they might be with their friends and loved ones on Christmas Day, but this has all been changed by the application of modern railway methods, whereby even the continent may be crossed in safety and with every comfort, in a comparatively short journey.

This year Christmas and New Year's travel promise to be very heavy, and with a view to placing every facility at the disposal of their patrons, Canadian National Railways have made their advance preparations and plans for extra trains and additional equipment on regular trains. Full particulars will appear in newspapers and special timetables will be shortly obtainable from any Agent of the Company.

Those who wish to prepay the fare of relatives or friends from any outside point can deposit the money at any Canadian National Agency and the transportation will be delivered immediately and economically.

Among the many prominent delegates who will be on hand for the International League annual and National association of minor leagues gathering, which will be held at Toronto this week, there will be none who will attract more attention than the representative of the Royals of Montreal. No. 1, Walter E. Hapgood, business manager of the club, is known wherever baseball is played. He was associated with George Stallings at Boston and also at Rochester before he located himself in Montreal. No. 2 is the Hon. Louis Athanase David, K. C., president of the club and an ardent sportsman. No. 3, J. Ernest Savigny treasurer of the Montreal B.B. The success of the Royals the past season can be largely attributed to the efforts of the gentlemen named.

INASMUCH

(By Marie Christine.)

"Oh, mother," coaxed nine-year-old Elizabeth, coming into the living-room where Mrs. Smale sat, sorting over clippings of important international events which would be her contribution at the meeting of the Intelligence Club that evening.

"Let's not have much for Thanksgiving, and then have a nice Christmas."

"Why, lover," fondly answered Mrs. Smale, looking up with surprise, "do you mean not to have even a chicken? You know how much you like roast chicken?"

"Yes, but mother, we never have anything but a chicken or a duck for Christmas. If we just have pork-chops for Thanksgiving, couldn't we have a goose or turkey for Christmas. Just for once, mother," coaxingly, "just so Evelyn and I will know how it tastes."

"Well, I'm satisfied," Mrs. Smale replied, "but you must explain the no-Thanksgiving-dinner idea to daddy."

Knowing it was a real sacrifice, Elizabeth, who was extremely fond of chicken, was making, Mrs. Smale determined to carry out her suggestion and concentrate on a more elaborate Christmas than they were usually able to afford.

"She hears the other children talk of having turkey and goose I believe that's why she has her mind set on this plan," Mrs. Smale remarked to dad, as they discussed the idea, after the children had retired. "I'll juggle the meat budget about for the next few weeks and maybe I can manage a turkey. I rather relish a nice cut off the noble bird myself—we haven't had one since we used to go to grandma's for the holiday." And so the matter rested.

Shortly after Thanksgiving, Elizabeth came rushing in from school, one afternoon, with eyes shining and whole face aglow with excitement and earnestness. Throwing herself, impetuously, in front of the fireplace, she exclaimed "Mother, I have an idea for Christmas—don't you want to hear it?"

Smiling affectionately at her well-loved daughter, Mrs. Smale paused to mark the page of the book she was reading and then waited for the rest.

"Our teacher was telling us to-day about Christmas at her home and she said for as many years as she could remember they always invited a stranger to share their Christmas. Some one who had no home or who lived a long, long way from home and couldn't go. She said her mother always felt that it was a special gift she could give—a gift of hos—hospi—how do you say that word, mother? It means entertaining in your home"

"Hospitality, darling."

"Yes, that's it—hospitality—and then she said a verse, mother. I think it's in the Bible. It began, 'Inasmuch as ye ——' Isn't it a nice idea, mother? If we have a turkey, couldn't we have a stranger, too. There's just daddy and you and Evelyn and me. A turkey's big—I saw one in Roger's shop yesterday. There'd be lots for one more, wouldn't there,mummy dear,"and in her earnestness, Elizabeth slipped her hand into her mother's, continuing to stress her point, "Grandma and Aunt Susan are too far away—we'll have nobody but just us—let's invite a stranger."

Wondering at the zeal of her small daughter, and whither it might lead them, Mrs. Smale tried to meet the child's mood. "What stranger would you have, lover?"

"I'd like to have Miss Maltoon, my art teacher, but I think she is going home with Miss Smith for the vacation. And she wouldn't be a real stranger, anyway. Maybe daddy would know of some one—shall I ask him?" And Elizabeth ran off to find him.

In a private discussion of the matter that same evening, the parents agreed it would do no harm to try to meet Elizabeth's wishes. And so for a few days there was much discussion as to whom they should invite—whether to ask the Y. M. C. A. to extend an invitation to some homeless young man on their list or to follow their own judgment and find the 'stranger' without any assistance. Finally, Evelyn, the 'teen-age daughter, suggested that they invite the new man who was just starting in dad's department at the factory. "You know, dad, the one who has only been in this country a short time," she said.

"That's a good idea," said Dad, thoughtfully, "Olaf Gjerdrum! He seems to be a clean, nice-mannered chap and anxious to get on. He has already started a night course in English, although he knew a little when he came. What do you think, mother? Shall it be Olaf?"

And so, in due course, Olaf was invited and gratefully accepted. In halting English he asked Mr. Smale why they selected him and was told the story of Elizabeth's wish.

Christmas Day came at last, and Elizabeth and her sister were up betimes and down to the living-room to inspect the tree that stood just as high as the mantle, but changed the character of the whole room with its gay decorations and numerous parcels, both on and under the boughs. Usually the tree was robbed of its gifts immediately after breakfast, but in honor of the guest it was decided to wait until after dinner for this important event.

As the dinner hour approached, Elizabeth kept watching at the window, and at last reported some one was turning in on their walk, carrying a parcel. And so the guest arrived and was duly presented to the family whom he greeted in turn in his quaint broken English, and then, turning to Mrs. Smale, he presented to her the mysterious package, which Elizabeth was eyeing curiously. This proved to be a gay pot of Christmas cactus, and was given a place of honor in the sunny south window of the living-room.

And then, the dinner!—what a feast! Even small Elizabeth felt that nothing more could be desired—the turkey was perfection—mother's special plum-pudding with its sunshine sauce was delicious—all the fixings were there, cranberry jelly, nuts, raisins and grapes, while the candied orange strips gave the crowning zest to the 'very bestest dinner, mummy,' as Elizabeth expressed it.

After dinner, they gathered in the living-room, dad distributed the parcels, and the next hour was happily spent in examining and exclaiming over the various gifts. The guest had not been forgotten—to his great surprise he received two beautiful small prints of Norway scenes—A Viking Ship and The Naerofjord.

Following the jolly hour with Santa's gifts, they drew their chairs about the fireplace and Betty, who had become very good friends with Olaf, shyly asked him to tell of Christmas in his own country.

For a moment he remained silent. He grew dreamy as his mind went back to his own land—Christmas time in the land which has given the great day so many beautiful customs. Gazing into the fire, he seemed to lose himself in his imagings. Then, in oddly accented English, he began in a low voice:

"Christmas at home—Christmas in Norway—it is very close to me to-day. The steely blue sky and the great round moon queening the stars that shimmer over the dark pine wood. Moonlight on the snow. Christmas Eve—lights gleaming from the windows—a warm red beam streaming over the road and in the sharp clear air, the sound of bells on horses, of the laughter of young men and maidens, happy in the warm blood of youth, happy in the love-time of the world, happy under the magic of the moon.

"And inside the home more laughter, more happiness. Over all the land is the spirit of gayety and a spirit of kindness and care for all living things. The farmer strews grain that the birds of the air may feast, the housewife puts pans of milk under that barn that the stray cat may be filled with contentment, the young men and boys put more leaves up under the eaves that the swallows may be warm for the Christ-time—ah! the spirit of the season is kindness and care for others. And you have caught that spirit, little Betty. My first Christmas in this new land would have been very lonely but for you, little one. I am not ungrateful. I shall not forget."

For a moment, silence fell over the little group. And then Olaf told them more of the customs in his own land, showed them how to play one or two Norwegian games and then, going to the piano, sang in a deep rich baritone, a joyous Christmas carol in his native Norse, and other folk-songs.

The evening shadows were falling and ere the lights came on, he charmed the little circle still more by drifting into some of the weirdly beautiful music of Grieg's, which depicts so vividly the charm of the Land of the Midnight Sun.

The short day drew to a close and, again gathering about the fireplace, a light supper of sandwiches, Christmas cake and coffee was enjoyed. Then, just before the girls' bed-time, the guest reluctantly made his adieus, reiterating his thanks and promising to return soon.

Elizabeth watched the tall, erect figure until it disappeared around the corner and then, throwing her arms about her mother's neck, exclaimed happily, "Isn't he nice?—and didn't we have a nice Christmas, mother mine?"

And the recording angel paused, ere she put away the day's tablets and murmured softly, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me.'

Ernest McKean, above, an engineer of the Chief Acquilla, which was abandoned by its crew on Saturday on the Pacific Ocean, told his brother in St. Catharines to watch for news of the ship. In a letter he said the engine was in bad shape, and that he was afraid of the deck-load.

Marriages in England numbered 308,370 last year or a rate of 15.7 persons married per thousand, compared with 14.3 for 1926, which was the lowest rate since 1886.

TOY LED TO AIRPLANES

Winged Plaything Gave Wright Brothers First Glimpse of Mechanical Flight.

COST FIFTY CENTS

Five dimes started the Wright brothers on the road that led to the invention of the airplane!

When Wilbur was eleven and Orville seven years old, their father, a minister, went away on a church trip. "Boughten" gifts were somewhat rare in that frugal home at Dayton, O. Yet he liked to bring home a few knick knacks for the family. On this trip an odd toy caught his eye in the city store.

When he returned home, the father walked into the living-room of the Hawthorn Street house with an air mysterious, his hands covering some object.

'Now watch!' he said to the boys.

'Oh-h-h-h!" gasped the awe-stricken youngsters as the father opened his hands and a shiny thing leaped into the air. It rose whirling and smote the ceiling, fluttered a moment as if undecided upon its next course, and then sank slowly to the floor.

"It's a bat!" shrieked the ecstatic lads.

"No," said the father, "it is not alive. It is a machine. You see it has two little fans that whirl about because of the pull of this twisted rubber band. This is a scientific toy. I won't ask you boys to spell its name. It is called a helicopter."

Put Through Its Paces.

For the next few days, the flying bat was out through its paces within the house and out in the back yard. The boys were at it morning, noon and night. They subjected the motive power to a cruel strain, writes John R. Mc Mahon, beginning the story of Orville and Wilbur Wright, the fathers of flight, in the January Popular Science Monthly.' They racked and tore the fragile device with eager fingers, loudly warning each other against violence.

"I declare," remarked a neighbor, "those Wright boys are perfect terrors! Their father bought them an expensive toy. I hear it cost fifty cents. And in no time at all they tore it all to pieces."

Meanwhile, Wilbur and Orville had blissful dreams around the experience never to be effaced from memory. The beautiful marvel! The fans go round and round and push the air. They go so fast you can't see them. Faster than a bat's wings. Oh, if I could fly like that!

Destiny smiled tenderly on the sleeping lads.

ous nine months; seven charges are giving less than they gave before union; while a few have their full allotment and one or two may exceed it.

Rev. George William, field secretary, who spoke to the report given by Mr. Washington, stated that special envelopes were available for an extra offering and that these were being used by most circuits and congregations.

The report of the Home Mission Committee given by Rev. C. E. Dyer, of Greenbank, was quite encouraging. Mr. Dyer stated that the needy fields in the Lindsay Presbytery had been dealt kindly with by the members of the Missionary Committee and that help had been given wherever it was possible to make necessary grants.

Rev. F. L. Brown, superintendent of Missions for the Bay of Quinte Conference, spoke of this report and stated that in order to hold the support of the men who gave thousands to missionary work a very noble effort was necessary by every charge in the older settled part of the Province. He advisd re-arrangement of circuit boundaries wherever possible in order to eliminate the needs of missionary grants and enable the fields to become self-supporting.

IN POLICE COURT

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 14 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Court proceedings before Magistrate Floyd here yesterday morning were brought to a minimum when one case was settled by the accused pleading guilty and paying the fine imposed. The second was a juvenile case and required about fifteen minutes. Owing to G. A. Payne, police magistrate here, having been granted leave of absence on account of his ill-health, Counties Magistrate Floyd of Cobourg has been appointed to preside at the court here. He has set the court day for each week as Thursday.

Yesterday there were only two cases waiting for his hearing. Louis Garrison pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving and paid ten dollars and costs. A twelve-year-old boy from Seymour West was subjected to a lecture from the magistrate for having used a friend's bicycle improperly. County Crown Attorney Kerr of Cobourg and Dr. Daly of Port Hope appeared in court in connection with the case.

DISTRICT CONTESTS

than in educational matters.

It was suggested in the discussion that social and educational activities might be profitably combined. This had been done in Clark township, Durham County, with satisfactory results.

The "4H Clubs" in U.S.A.

Murray Allen of Middlesex county spoke on the subject of Lennox from the "4 H Club" leader training school at Springfield, Mass. From a local organization this convention has expanded until this year it was attended by delegates from thirty States and four provinces. It is financed by Horace A. Moses, once a poor farm boy and now a financier and industrialist, who pays the expenses of all the delegates, a boy and girl from each state and province. Mr. Moses asks in return only that such delegates write him at least once a year for three years, telling him of their problems and success and similar experiences.

The name of the "4 H Clubs" signifies the development of head, heart hands and health. The objectives of the clubs were to emphasize the need and dignity of agriculture, to propagate the idea that the security of the nation depends on well organisd, happy homes, and thirdly to impress on the young farm people the idea of making money

"This third purpose seemed to be the major one" Mr. Allan said, "but I believe it can be stressed too far. We would be apt to overlook that development and education one requires from our own club work and that should be considered more important than making money."

Importance of Leaders

The appointment of leaders in the "4 H Clubs" is very important, Mr. Allan said. Their leaders correspond to the honorary presidents of Ontario Junior Farm Clubs. Most of them are school teachers and college graduates. The county organizations include various specialties as for example in dairy and poultry work, also club agents whose activities are somewhat along the lines of our district representatives of the Department of Agriculture, and there are also the teacher leaders. These latter directors, Mr. Allan said, did not provide for junior farmers sufficient scope for the development of latent abilities for leadership which the present Ontario system encouraged.

When Counsel Needed

"In Middlesex we have found that the most successful clubs are those with honorary presidents who attended most of the meetings and by their counsel kept the discussions moving along most profitable lines. We need morep ractical agricultural projects in our club work. We might introduce more practical demonstrations, such as rope splicing, the discussion of hydro-electric power in districts that lack it, radio, sewage disposal and farm water supply, labor saving devices on the farm and so on. A real need is a number of members and others who have the time and qualifications to lead in these matters. In the United States they have salaried officials to look after club work entirely. We have no officials for that specialized work, but in Middlesex we have begun conducting classes to develop young farmers in leadership so that they may go out to different parts of the country and assist in promoting club activities."

In an address dealing with the opportunities which should be met by the junior farmers of Ontario, J. E. Whitlock, assistant director of the agricultural representative branch, Toronto, spoke of the pressing need of volunteer leadership, because of the lack of finances for salaried leaders.

"Every young man here is a potential leader," he said. "Given volunteer leaders the next step is to a definite program, and I wish to congratulate the Durham boys on the way they carried out their executive meeting display this morning. If every junior organization will get together and map out a program for ten or twelve months of the year, it will eliminate many of the objections we heard to-day.

The Work That Counts.

Again, our program should be well balanced. It should include agricutural projects more than we have so far experienced. Inter-club debates, music, dramatic affairs are all splendid, but it is the work done in the home club that really counts. Pay more attention to definite programs, and try to get as many as possible to play a part, especially the younger members.

High School Fairs

Most of you have attended short courses or received instruction from your local representative, and you should be the chief source of extended agriculture work in your county. I think you should be linked up with the school fairs. I feel we should be further ahead with our school fairs. The quality of the exhibits should be better. Our junior farmers could help in giving young people training in preparing their exhibits for the fairs. We have to get the young people interested in better livestock before you can instill into them a real love for good herds.

You could link your club up with the better seed campaign. One or two projects of that kind would be enough to attempt at once. I like the idea of junior farm clubs having their members coach a team in every school of the county, one member to a school. That would be an opportunity for extension work."

Name Has Prestige

Mr. Whitelock said that the name "Junior Farmers" had established a prestige which was recognized by county councils, parents of the members, and by prominent public men. He suggested that a creed might be drafted and adopted that a pin be struck for the members. Tihs suggestion was approved, and the preparation of a creed was left to the Toronto officers, and counties may forward ideas they wish considered for incorporation.

Dr. N. H. Sutton Present.

The district officer or health, Dr. N. H. Sutton of Peterborough, addressed both meetings on the subject of the promotion of health in rural communities, and said he would be glad to cooperate in any possible way with the individual clubs.

An interetsing contribution to the young men's program was the conducting of an executive meeting of a junior farmers' club by six youths of Clarke township. They were Jas. Brown, as president, Gordon Ashton, 1st vice-president, Charles Glenny, secretary-treasurer; Earl Colwill, Clarence Allen and Howard Gibson, directors.

They exemplified the range of work that can be initiated and how it can be done, preparing interesting programmes for their entire season.

.....Some of the Resolutions.....

The resolutions committee was composed of J. B. Nelson, Mr. Winter, of Victoria county, Carman Seymour of Durham County, Archie Tolmie of Victoria and B. Jamieson of Woodville. One resolution was in favor of all junior farmers supporting the better seed campaign, and also assisting the judging team work at school fairs.

The meeting also urged the continuance of the inter-county debating league, and recommended that a committee be appointed to arrange for the coming season's activities. That committee is composed of John Goodfellow, Clarence Allen of Durham, Clarence Mann of Peterborough, Norman Jamieson of Victoria county, and Dr. J. B. Reynolds of Port Hope. They will meet on December 20 at Port Hope.

Another resolution called for copies of a program like that presented by the Durham county boys, to be forwarded to each representative, for use in his county, and that local organizations be urged to adopt such a program.

Challenge by Victoria.

Victoria county challenged any of the other seven to meet their livestock judging team. Durham accepted.

Assisting the girls of the Junior Institute were Miss E. Hopkins, of Lindsay; Miss Florence P. Eadie of Scotland, Ont; Mr. J. B. Nelson of Peterborough; Miss Pearl Church of Peel county, and Mrs. C. Macoun, of Campbellford.

Miss Helen Tedford of Peterboro, spoke on "A Trip to Toronto and the Royal Winter Fair." Mr. Gordon McCubbin of Warkworth, who was to have presided at the luncheon, was unable to be present.

LATE CLERK LAID AWAY

Reeve B. Middleton, Ed. M. Elliott, county clerk, and treasurer, and E. A. Peck, M.P., county solicitor. From the village of Hastings were noticed Reeve Dr. Wilson, ex-Reeve Dr. Hess and Alex. Wilson, village clerk.

Some of the Flowers

Among the banks of flowers were the following: wreaths from the Warden and Members of the Northumberland and Durham Counties Council, from the Canadian Artillery Association, of which Col. MacNachton was a past president; from the Officers of the Cobourg Garrison; a St. Andrew's Cross of roses from the Nursing Staff and Board of the Cobourg General Hospital; a wreath from the Council of the town of Cobourg; wreath from Judge O'Connor, Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr and other officials of the local Court; wreath from the Western Insurance Co.; spray from the Cobourg Reading Club; anchor from St. Andrew's congregation; spray from the Ladies' Helping Circle of the church, and floral basket from the choir.

The Church Service

The church service was conducted by Capt. Rev. F. C. Harper of St. Andrew's, assisted by Capt. Rev. T. Stanage Boyle, D.D., of St. Peter's Anglican church.

Rev. Mr. Harper based his address on ii. Timothy, 4-7: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." By analogy he related his text to Col. MacNachtan's life as a man and a soldier. "I believe," he said, "that the secret of a soldier's success is to obey, unqualifiedly and implicity, and Col. MacNachtan regarded the voice of authority to the end o fhis days. He who learns to command must first have learned to obey, and also when he issues a command is fully conscious that he has obeyed in his heart. In church or out of it he had the simple characteristic of one who sought to obey, and to rule his own spirit because it was better than the taking of a city. It was that thought which made him a man of service to his county and to his country."

The funeral music was played by the Kilties band of Cobourg. Major Bygott of Campbellford was to have been an honorary pall-bearer, but illness prevented him from attending.

Rev. Mr. Harper conducted the service at the grave.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, December 14. — A fairly active business was done in butter yesterday and prices were firmly maintained. Steady withdrawals from storage holdings are reported taking place daily for immediate domestic consumptive needs. The storage statement released on Wednesday shows holdings in Canada at approximately 9,800,000 pounds below last year and nearly 5,000,000 pounds under the five-year average.

Local dealers again ascribe the cheese trade on spot as "very, very dull." Nominal quotations show no change at 21¼c to 21¾c per pound for No. 1, large, colored, parffined, and Government graded, delivered in Toronto.

In the egg market a good demand prevails for all grades of fresh and storage at easier prices. Price-cutting has been general in a wholesale way during the last few days, and the trade is quoting country shippers at a range of from 53c to 55c per dozen for fresh extras. Heavy production in Ontario may be expected to develop more quickly than elsewhere owing to the prolonged spell of mild weather. Retailers have not yet made any radical change in prices to the consumer in keeping with the market decline.

Prevailing prices of storage eggs to retailers at central market are now considerably below last year's values.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS WILL SPEND TWENTY MILLIONS ON BRANCH LINES IN NORTHWEST

Three-Year Program Covering Development Acquired With the C.P.R.

SOME IN ONTARIO

Trend of Construction Will Be Northward To Link Up Mining Areas

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.—A three-year branch line program, aggregating more than $30,000,000, will be brought down to parliament next session, being the answer of the Canadian National Railways to the Canadian Pacific's announced three-year program of construction.

In addition, the Hudson Bay railway will be carried to Fort Churchill, reaching there next summer, and the Canadian National Railways will participate on a 50-50 basis with the Canadian Pacific in the purchse of the Alberta government railways which include the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia railway, the Alberta and Great Waterways railway and the Central Canada railway. Premier Brownlee of Alberta told The Star yesterday he had received a communication from the board of directors of the Canadian National intimating their intention of taking up their 50 per cent option in the deal negotiated by the Canadian Pacific.

The new C.N.R. program will be the third since the system became consolidated. In 1924 a three-year proprogram was approved by parliament for the construction of 652.3 miles of branch line railway at a cost of $15,-615,515. In 1927 another there-year program was passed providing for the construction of 510.4 miles, at an estimated cost of $20,000,000. Of this sum $3,191,606 was spent in 1927. By the end of this year a further $10,-725,000 will be spent and the balance expended in 1929.

The passage by parliament of these programs delayed action on them in the year they were passed, so a new departure will be made next year. Parliament will be asked to approve the new program before the old has been completed. Thus, work can be commenced as soon as the work on the 1927-29 program has been finished. The money is paid over to the Canadian National, which prepares the program for the approval of the minister of railways and the sanction of parliament. The financial experts and engineers of the Canadian National almost have completed the new program to be presented to the minister.

The appropriations include the cost of stations and other railway buildings on the branch lines to be constructed. Some of the extensions and improvements will be in Ontario but for the most part they will be the development of roads in Western Canada and better facilities for bringing out the steadily increasing wheat crop. Then trend of construction will be northward and there will be some lines to tap the mineral areas or link up with roads in those areas.

The Hudson Bay railways is not a Canadian National branch line but is a national project, paid for by special vote. The actual construction work is being done by Canadian National engineers and construction staff, but under the direction of engineers of the department of railways and canals. The railway work is expected to be completed next year. Considerable progress has been made on the harbor works.

AIRPLANE TEST IS EXPLAINED

J. H. Parkin, of Toronto Gives Interesting Talk To Engineers.

UNIVERSITY HELPS

That Canada is keeping abreast of the other nations in the big strides made in aeronautical developments, was well proven in the lecture of J. H. Parkin, assistant professor of Mechanical Engineering at the University of Toronto, on the subject Experimental Aeronautics at the University of Toronto, before the Peterborough Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada last evening.

It was explained that the work done in the laboratory at the Universities is doing much to aid the aeronautical development in Canada, and that most of the advances are first thought out and then tested in laboratories throughout the world similar to the one at Toronto. One of the earliest means of testing the actions of airplanes as to control and stability was by means of gliders. Later a track and carriage was made and the airplane moved along swiftly by means of steam. Both thees methods were very unsatisfactory, and later the wind tunnel was invented and developed. The Wright brothers in their early experiments in 1902 first used a crude form of air tunnel. The tunnel had many advantages over any other methods of testing airplanes because the actual reaction of an airplane can be secured by placing an exact model in the wind tunnel. There are at the present time some 60 wind tunnels in the world, the United States having twenty, Great Britain twelve and other countries a lower number. Canada has only one, the one at Toronto, which was first built in 1927. Every country at all keen on aviation has at least one.

At the university aeronautical engineering has become a special branch of engineering, and a large enrolment is not desired—quality being the desire, and not quantity. Not more than six will be graduated each year.

Up until the present time only the problems peculiar to aviation in Canada have been studied, such as the flying boat, and the craft using skids, which are used in the forest patrol—work has been done for the government and for some of the airplane manufacturers.

The air tunnel serves the same purpose in aeronautics as the water channel in the ship building industry. The models of the ships are placed in the water channel, drawn through it and the results and manoeuvres of the models closely observed. But in the wind tunnel the airplane model is held stationary and the air forced through the tunnel at great velocity; but the results are the same as if the model were in motion. In the United States there is one tunnel which is large enough to test small aircraft. With the model in a fixed position, and the wind forced past it, a perfect test can be determined as to the lift, drag and all the other important features pertaining to the stability and flight of an airplane. In the tunnel at Toronto tests can be made with the same conditions prevailing as those if the craft were going at a speed of 100 miles an hour.

It was explained that the airplane sucked up the air set in motion by the propeller, and not forced up. Tests can be made so perfectly as to determine to within one-one thousandth of a pound the pressure exerted by the wind on its structure.

One of the early tests carried on at Toronto tunnel was to determine the most serviceable type of wing types. It was proven that the square wing types so often put on planes by manufacturers because of their ease in making, was the least efficient and that semi-circular or eliptical tips were the most superior.

The more important late tests have been performed on Vickers flying boats so useful in the development of the Canadian north.

Professor Parkins had a fine set of lantern slides which illustrated his talk and made clear some of the very extra-ordinarily complicated work so ably being carried on in Toronto to develop aviation in Canada.

Booticians Cable Supplies To United States; Feat Astonishes Provincial Police At Border

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 14.—The latest advances of science are put to shame by the latest achievement of the local group of merchandizers which supplies potent wassail to the insatiable public across the river.

Let others exclaim over television, talking movies, or sending flowers by telegraph. Niagura Peninsula booticians are content to rest their bid for fame on an even mose astonishing feat—transmission of liquor by cable.

It must be pretty powerful stuff, and get there speedily and in quantity, for they have been using at 120,000-volt line to waft heavy-joltage beverages into the sovereign state of New York. An additional novel aspect of the epochal invention is that the line runs over instead of under the watef.

Best of all, it costs the joy-water purveyors nothing. Several thousand dollars worth of liquors have been shipped nightly across the river over the line, which is the Hydro power cable running across from the big power house at Queenston.

Announcement of the startling merchandishing method was made by Provincial Constable Wood. Early this morning he discovered an automobile full of assorted liquors ready to be loaded into an ingeniously built car which had been attached to the cable by pulleys.

Announcement of the startling new merchandising method was

The apparatus had been constructed to prevent its operators being shocked, but it would have taken many, many safety devices to check the mixed emotions which surged to the mind of the inquisitive constable.

VETERAN EMPLOYES GUESTS AT BANQUET

Pensioned Railroaders of C. N. R. Gather at Get-Together Function.

(Examiner Correspondence)

LINDSAY, Dec. 14.—(Special to The Examiner).—Lindsay was the mecca on Wednesday, of a large number of pensioned ex-employees of the old Grand Trunk and later the Canadian National Railway system. The veteran railroaders, a number of whom were from Peterborough, Port Hope and Belleville, were the guests of the C.N.R. management at a get-together function in the Town Hall. It proved a most happy and interesting occasion for the men who helped to make railroad history in the old wood-burning engine days. Many of the boys had not met for years and many an interesting as well as thrilling incident was recalled as the pensioners singled together as one happy family.

A number of officials of this division of the system were present, including General Superintendent Fish and Superintendent Stokes, of Belleville. A familiar figure at the gathering was former Superintendent D. J. McMillan, of Belleville. The day's program concuded with a banquet in the afternoon.

GALLOWS ORDERED PLACED AT LONDON

Hangman Superintends Erection of Instrument Used For Murrell's Brother.

LONDON, Ont., December 13. — Arthur Ellis, official executioner, reached London at noon yesterday, and after a conference with Sheriff D. M. Graham, issued orders for the commencement to be made this morning on the erection of a scaffold from which to hang Bill Murrell on Monday.

The hangman examined and took from its storage in the county garage, the same scaffold he built here in 1924 for the double execution of Murrell's brother Syd. and Clarence Topping. This grim structure with its thirteen steps will be used on Monday unless the Department of Justice in the meanwhile yields to the representations made in the condemned man's behalf and commutes the sentence to life imprisonment.

Ellis' services became available here when the Supreme Court of Alberta granted a new trial to a man who was to have been hanged in Edmonton next Monday.

DOMINION TARIFF BOARD HEARS COAL PROBLEM ARGUED

Recommendation Will be Reflected in Next Federal Budget.

DEMANDS OF OPERATORS

United States Tariff on Soft Coal is Reciprocal—Want Duty Removed.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec 14 (By The Canadian Press).—The Dominion's position in respect to its coal industries has been the subject of a great deal of consideration by various governing bodies of the Dominion during the present year. The most extensive coal fields are found in Nova Scotia, Alberta and British Columbia. This means a long haul to supply the more thickly settled provinces of Ontario and Quebec should a policy be finally adopted of using Canadian coal to a much greater extent in the future.

At present the larger portion of coal used in Central Canada is imported from the United States. Latest statistics show that out of a total annual importation of 14,165,000 tons of bituminous coal, 13,960,000 tons come from the United States. There is a duty of 50 cents a ton on this variety of coal into Canada but the duty is returnable if the coal is converted into coke for metallurgical and certain other purposes. Government figures reveal that the annual drawback is approximately $750,000; indicating that about 1,500,000 tons are imported to the Dominion for this purpose. There is no duty on anthracite coal.

The duty on bituminous coal has caused considerable clash of interests and it is with this that the tariff board has been wrestling for some time.

The United States' tariff on soft coal is reciprocal. It provides that the tariff on coal from Canada shall be the same as the duty placed on United States coal coming into this country. As a result, Fernie (B. C.) mine operators have agitated for the removal of the duty so that they might have an open market in the Pacific coast states. Alberta interests want the duty to remain as it is because they are that an open door policy would cause them to lose some of their markets on the prairies to United States coal. Nova Scotia also is opposed to any lowering of the rate.

Tariff Reciprocal.

The United States' reciprocal tariff, however, does not take into account the drawback allowed in Canada. All Canadian bituminous going across the border is assessed a 50-cent duty whether or not it is to be converted into coke.

Owners of the Nova Scotia mines point out that the present tariff gives them no protection at all where the coal is brought in to be converted into coke for metallurgical purposes. They have asked that they be recompensed for this loss of protection by being given a bonus of 50 cents a ton when they produce coke that comes into competition with the imported product from which a drawback has been obtained. Canadian gas companies also insist that they are not being fairly treated because they have to pay a duty on their coal and yet the coke they produce as a by-product enters into competition with coke on which no duty has been paid.

The Tariff Board have heard all the interests who have submitted lengthy briefs and will advise the Department of Finance concerning its recommendation. This advice is not made public and will only be reflected in the budget submitted at the next session of the Dominion Parliament.

The use of domestic bituminous coal, however, is increasing in spite of the vast distances which it must be hauled. There were heavy shipments of Nova Scotia coal to Montreal and other points along the St. Lawrence this year. Then there was the special rate, assumed to be the "out-of-pocket" costs of bringing Alberta coal to Ontario for three months during the summer. The success of this experiment is now being considered by the Fuel Board.

MARKET GRADES ARE EXPLAINED

Some Confusion Regarding Toledo Seed Exchange—Very Little in Top Classes.

HEAVY DOCKAGE ON FIRST.

Some confusion exists in the country apparently regarding clover seed grades. Quotations appear side by side in the same newspaper which vary several dollars in the price of No. 1. Buying prices are invariably much lower than those which are asked for recleaned Government grade seed later on in the season. Toledo quotations are away out of line with those offered in this country. But if all seed was reduced to a common basis of purity from weed seeds and of color, seedsmen maintain that there is practically no difference in the prices quoted.

Take, for instance, the price offered on the Toledo exchange. This market, it is pointed out by both seedsmen in United States as well as in Canada, does a very limited business, and the prices quoted, unless they state specifically, are offered for a very high grade of seed only. In alsike, for Toledo Prime purity must run 98.75 per cent or better. Like No. 1 under the Canadian Act this is a very high grade, so high, in fact, that last year but a few hundred bags from the total crop produced in United States could be cleaned up to reach it. One big seedsman operating in Eastern Canada states that he has not seen any alsike this year which could possibly be brought up to grade Toledo Prime and only a few bags from a very small district a year ago.

From quotations offered at Toledo must be subtracted $2.40 for duty and about 40 cents per bushel freight from Canadian points. Ontario quotations at the present time are based on buying grades of purities varying from 90 to 95 per cent. Very little of this seed even with dockage running around 15 per cent could be brought up to grade with Toledo Prime or Canadian No. 1 and much of it can only find a market by being exported to Europe in competition with a fair crop of better quality there. Color requirements, too, are very strict in regard to Toledo Prime and there has been so much weather damage in this country this year that little if any of the present crop can be brought up to these requirements. Modern seed cleaning machinery will take out practically all the sand, chaff and other foreign material in clover seed, and it will also take out most of the weed seed and small clover seeds, but it cannot remove off-color seeds as these are the same weight and size as the ones with good color. There is a very large percentage of off-color seed this year and consequently where color requirements are strict, as is the case with Toledo, it will be impossible to bring any considerable quantity of the present crop up to grade Toledo Prime.

Indeed, there is a very general feeling among men familiar with the seed business that the top grades in Canada as well as Toledo Prime are too high to be practical and the establishment of these very high grades is really defeating the purpose for which they were intended. There is so much cleaning and consequent dockage in preparing seed to grade high under the present standards and so much loss from lots which it is physically impossible to clean up to meet these grades that the price of Government grade seed is very high and only a fraction of the crop can be brought up to the standard required for legal selling in Canada. On account of this high price and scarcity many farmers feel that they cannot afford to use this graded seed and are tempted to buy ungraded, dirty seed at a low price "over the fence" from a neighbor. In not a few cases these ungraded lots, which are sold in defiance of the Canadian seed laws, have been rejected by seed buyers who, realizing that the same could not be brought up to the Government grades and knowing that they cannot resell anything which does not come up to those grades, refuse to handle them. It was this "over the fence" buying which was blamed for much of the rapid spread of weeds in Canada at the present time by members of the Seed Advisory Board at their recent meeting in Ottawa.

GRAIN TERMINAL IS ON HISTORIC GROUND

Party of Rebels Resisted Regulars and Killed 15 Officers and Men.

BROCKVILLE, Dec. 14 (By The Canadian Press).—Historic ground will be covered by the Great Lakes Grain Terminal that is to be established by the Dominion Government below Prescott for use after the completion of the Welland Ship Canal. The territory that is to be expropriated by the Government for the terminal has a frontage of approximately two miles on the St. Lawrence and extends from Windmill Point to the creek passing through the hamlet of Johnstown.

It was at the former spot on the river-front that a party of rebels who had crossed the river during the Rebellion of 1837 resisted siege on the part of regulars and militia units, who lost 15 officers and men before the garrison of the old mill (originally erected by a West Indian merchant named Hughes) capitulated. The windmill, still standing and now used as a lighthouse, has been suitably marked by the Historic Sites and Monuments Board. Farther east, the same body has marked the site of British batteries which were set up in 1761 by the expedition under the command of Jeffrey, Lord Amherst, to effect the reduction of the French stronghold, Fort Levis, which had been established upon an island opposite. The surrender of Fort Levis to the British expedition marked the passing of French dominion over the Upper St. Lawrence.

"A Stopping-place."

In pioneer days, Johnstown was known to the voyageurs as "La Galette" and formed a stopping-point after the long and arduous ascent of the St. Lawrence rapids. It was there that Simcoe received a vociferous greeting from the half-pay Loyalist officers upon his arrival in Upper Canada to assume its government, and it was there, too, that the first "capital" of the eastern part of the province was set up. Up to 1808 Johnstown was the administrative centre of all of the territory lying between the Ottawa and the St. Lawrence. Frame buildings—all trace of which has long since disappeared—were erected to serve as court-house and jail wrongdoers, sometimes for the most trivial offences, were occasionally exhibited in the stocks or the pillory for the edification and education of their fellow-citizens. The place was laid out and occupied as a town-site, but after Brockville (then Elizabethtown) had chosen as the "capital" of the Johnstown district, the buildings gradually disappeared and practically every trace of Johnstown's original grandeur has vanished. Where the court-house and jail stood is now devoted to the accommodation of summer cottages, and the coat-of-arms which once adorned the former building is now erected over the judge's bench in the Court House in Brockville.

RICHARD HALL Limited

ENTERTAINMENT FOR YOUNG CHILDREN

Christmas Concert To Be Held For Kiddies of C.G.E. Employees.

Consistent with the splendid work and rapid progress made by the Social and Athletic Club of the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited, during the past year is the Christmas entertainment which is to be held for the kiddies of all members of the above club at the Canadian Legion Hall Murray street on Saturday, December 22nd at 2 in the afternoon from two to four o'clock.

An immense Christmas tree has been procured and is to be set up in the main auditorium at the base of a huge chimney which has also been erected and out of which Santa Claus intends to emerge, and will present each child present with a gift and also with oranges and candy.

Prior to the coming of Santa will be held a vaudeville performance that undoubtedly will be very entertaining for the younger set. Immediately after this the children will be formed into lines, single file, and are to parade past the Christmas tree receiving their presents from Santa himself.

After many weeks of careful planning the several committees responsible for the program feel certain that their efforts will result in a perfect Christmas Party and parents may rest assured that every possible precaution has been taken to insure the safety of the children, for the purpose of preserving order and to keep a watchful eye over the gathering, there will be several firemen on duty in the hall and a special safety committee composed of C.G.E. employees.

Every employee who is a club member and who has any child under high school age should give the names of the children at an early date to the zone representative who in turn will hand over the list to the secretary, Neil Porter, so that he may have a sufficient number of admission tickets made out to be distributed among the employees.

The members in charge of the different committees are as follows:—Messrs. Cairns and E. Hardy, property; Bob Batley, Fruit and candy; F. Robinson and Bill Bennett, Safety and Check Room; Neil Porter, J. Pilling and I. McRae, Gifts; N. Porter, H. Bannon and J. Middleton, Packing and Wrapping.

SOCIAL EVENING IS GREATLY ENJOYED

Knox Young People's Society Hold Debate On Tuesday Night.

On Tuesday evening the Young People's Society of Knox church held a social gathering. The principal feature of the program was a debate: "Resolved, that women are better financial managers then men." The affirmative side was ably led by Miss Muriel Benson with the Misses Marion Hill, Mary Pollock and Marion McCannon assisting. Mr. George Wallace led the negative side with Messrs. J. Donaldson, Bob Allan and Stevenson assisting. The Judges, Rev. William McDonald, Mr. A. McKenzie and Mrs. John Bradbury decided in favor of the negative.

A newspaper was prepared by the audience, each department being taken in charge by a group of young people. The reading of the "news" caused much merriment.

Refreshments were served after which Rev. Wm. McDonald gave a short address.

FUTURE DEPENDS ON HEALTHFUL VIGOR

Situation Among Eskimos is Reported to be Most Gratifying.

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S., December 13. — The future of the Eskimo race in Canada's Eastern Arctic islands will to a large extent depend upon the continued healthful vigor of the eighteen hundred natives of Baffin Island, in the opinion of members of the Dominion's 1928 expedition to the posts in the northern archipelago. The expedition returned here recently aboard the steamer Beothic.

The situation on Baffin Island was reported to be most gratifying. The general health of the Eskimos there is very good. An epidemic among children occurred during the winter in the native settlement around Frobisher Bay, and thirty-five deaths resulted, mostly to children under five years of age. The outbreak had passed when the Beothic called at Lake Harbor, the nearest post, and the natives were in excellent health and spirits. Practically all the native settlements on Baffin Island were visited by members of the various Royal Canadian Mounted Police detachments during their patrols, and the natives were reported as a uniformly fine type, well nourished, generally free from disease, and contented. The few cases of destitution for which relief had to be provided during the winter were those of aged persons.

Animals Plentiful.

Food animals were plentiful, seal and walrus abounding. The fur catch was reported as small, but this apparently did not affect the natives detrimentally.

The 1928 patrol of the Arctic islands was successful and satisfactory reports were brought back from the north. All of the posts were visited and re-provisioned, and considerable scientific and other data was collected.

As expected, Bache Peninsula was not reached, but supplies were landed near-by for removal by dog-sled or power boat. When a post was established at this isolated point, officials of the Department of the Interior considered the work could be carried on if a supply ship was successful in visiting the post every second year. The Beothic has been able to reach its vicinity each year since its establishment, sailing into the port last year and forcing her way to within a short distance of the objective this year. If Smith Sound ever closed with ice, the officers and natives on Bache Peninsula would not suffer, as the post has a reserve supply of coal and provisions sufficient for three years.

Weather conditions during the voyage of the Beothic were much better than during the 1927 patrol. The only trouble experienced was when the expedition was in the vicinity of Bache Peninsula, Canada's farthest northern outpost.

An enthusiastic welcome was given the personnel of the Beothic when she arrived at Godhavn, Greenland on the morning of July 26. The local parliament was adjourned, and in the absence of the Governor, the visitors were the guests of the Acting Governor and other Danish officials.

Action Of Chief Is Protested By Men

LONDON, Ont., December 13. — The members of the Policemen's Union in this city are threatening to call a meeting to consider the action of Police Chief Birrell in appointing a certain policeman to the detective force and allegedly overlooking the rules of seniority. It is alleged that some time ago the Chief promised to have the matter threshed out at a meeting of the Police Commission and that this meeting has not been held.

THE TRAGEDY OF MANY LIVES IS CONSTIPATION

Guard against it in time

This evil scourge ruins thousands of promising men and women. It saps vigor. It kills initiative. It wrecks health and happiness. Sleepless nights, dragging feet, headaches, pain-dulled eyes, follow in its wake. Frequently it leads to lasting and serious disease.

Yet there is safe, prompt relief. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to relieve constipation. To surely prevent it, ALL-BRAN is 100% bran—100% effective. Doctors recommend it. Two tablespoonfuls daily — chronic cases, with every meal.

Don't you agree it is better to cure constipation with this healthful cereal than to try dangerous pills and drugs? Or uncertain part-bran products? Delicious with milk or cream—fruits or honey added. Use it in cooking too. Sprinkle it into soups. Sold by all grocers. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

LEAGUE ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Miss May Earl Will Head Young People's Organization at Bailieboro.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS

(Examiner Correspondence)

BAILIEBORO, Dec. 14.—Miss May Earl was elected president of the Young Peoples' League by a large vote at the annual meeting of the Y.P.S. in the United Church on Tuesday evening.

The retiring president, Fred Barnard, who has held the office for the past four years, had charge of the devotional period, when a few minutes of silent prayer for the recovery of His Majesty, King George, were offered.

The superintendent of the Sunday School, John Porter presided over the meeting during the election of officers. The reports of the various officers were very encouraging, showing a decided advancement over last year. The report of the president showed a large increase in members, there being approximately sixty on the roll. Every department was thoroughly organized and the various officers had filled their offices to the fullest extent during the past year. The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of about one hundred and forty dollars, an increase of about ninety dollars over the previous year.

The officers were elected by ballot as follows: Honorary President, Rev. E. Swayne; president, Miss May Earl; vice-president, Joseph Barnard; secretary, Stanley Johnston; treasurer, Norman Earl; organist, Miss Ruth Dawson; assistant organist, Miss L. Ball; first vicepresident, John Porter; second vice-president, Miss L. Earl; third vice-president, Archie Deyell; fourth vice-president, Miss Esther Lang.

The retiring officers are: Fred Barnard, past president; Herbert Dean, past secretary; Mrs. Norman Thompson, convenor of the Missionary Committee and Miss Edna Wallace, organist.

No More "?" Says Sheila, A Popular Correspondent

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

I crave your most gracious pardon. On reading my Examiner this evening I find that I am the partial cause of an S.O.S. and I hasten to reply. I had not seen the result of the recent competition, having been out of town a few days last week. I now learn that I was one of the prize-winners, my small contribution evidently having found favor in your sight. My sincerest thanks, gracious lady.

The Armistice Number was certainly a paper to be very proud of, and the management of The Examiner is to be congratulated upon the result of their time and thought, for time and thought and work must surely have been devoted to the preparing of the edition.

"Our Page" gets better all the time, the outcome of "Mariana's" suggestion which appears this evening is fine. When I read some of the letters sent to you along the lines of Lonesome Blue Eyes, I almost wish I had your job. You must get heaps of fun. What's that—the slipper treatment? As Pat says, "Them's my sentiments too."

This letter is getting too long, but you know when I start I am a regular Tennyson's Brook.

May I change that "?" (irritating little beggar, is it not?) to

* * *

I'm so glad you changed your pen name, "Sheila," because that question mark WAS a nuisance. The typesetters didn't know whether I didn't know how to decipher your name, or what. And "Sheila" is a really pretty name. I wish someone had thought to bestow it on me.

I'm pleased too, that you like the Daily Reading column. I do, personally, in spite of the work!

I've no objection, whatever to your endeavouring to emulate "The Brook":

"I chatter, chatter, as I flow
To join the brimming river,
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on for ever."

Because, you see, you are so interesting.

And how about some Songs of Love?

"Dear Marion:

Although usually busy I try to find time for your page each evening and have been very much interested. Also found some of the recipes very helpful. I am enclosing coupon and also a recipe which I use very often myself.

Mrs. J. H. P."

Peterborough.

* * *

Thanks for the recipe, "Mrs. J. H. P." and for your letter. It is indeed nice for the neighbors to know that a busy person steals time to read our page—and especially nice for me.

"Dear Marion:

I am enclosing a coupon for this week's help. Please send me the Christmas Gift suggestions and also the others I have marked. I want to thank you for the pointed slip, which I received sometime ago. It came in quite handy as the voile dress I was making called for a pointed slip.

I enjoy reading the Whatnot very much, also Marion's Mail. Your Armistice Number was just wonderful. I sent one to my daughter in Belleville, and the other day I received a letter from her telling me how much she appreciated it, also how much The Examiner has improved in every way.

Wishing you every success, I remain, just another,

Reader."

Peterborough.

* * *

I'm delighted to know the helps prove so valuable, "Reader." I think you'll find the Christmas helps good.

"Dear Marion:

I like the Women's Page very much and have received a lot of help through it. I like to read the letters and thought the ones in the Armistice Number real good.

I received the helps I asked for and would like very much to get this week's help. Thanking you for the others,

Ercell."

R.R. 3, Marmora.

* * *

Glad to hear from Marmora, "Ercell," and to know our page is liked there. Write a longer letter soon.

"Dear Marion:

Enclosed you will find your coupon for helps. I have checked it, hoping you will still have one of the Christmas helps left. This is the second time I have taken advantage of your wonderful page. I think it is so nice to have a page all our own in the paper, I know, for one, there have been lots of real good helps I have been glad of, so I am sending these few lines to show my humble thanks and also maybe some neighbor would like the help for Jam. I use it all the time and it is far cheaper than buying it at the store.

Thanking you for past favors and hoping I haven't taken up too much of your time, I remain,

Just Me."

Peterborough.

* * *

Thanks a lot for the jam recipe, "Just Me," which I'm sure the neighbors will appreciate. Come just as often as you like, and count on my being glad to hear from you.

"Dear Marion:

Please accept my thanks for the Christmas suggestions which I received to-night.

I noticed an item in the Whatnot last evening in regard to runs in silk stockings but did not notice any remedy. Did any of the readers ever try rubbing moist soap on the hole? This will prevent it from running until one is able to catch the stitches later.

In regard to pies running over—if the fruit for pies is mixed with flour, before it is used in the pies—it will not run over. I received this information from a Chinese chef.

I wonder if any of the readers can tell me whether Jesus had any brothers or sisters. I know it is the Catholic belief that Mary had no other children but I'm not just sure of the Protestant belife.

When one has been given a vote of thanks at some affair is it necessary for one to reply?

Sincerely yours,

Nookie."

* * *

Your hints are greatly appreciated, "Nookie." I'm sure the neighbors will wish to save that one about pies for their scrap books.

It is not usual to respond to a vote of thanks for singing or playing, or otherwise contributing to a program, which is, I presume, what you mean. It is correct, though, to stand up and bow.

Perhaps one of the neighbors can answer your other question, but because I wish to keep this page free from all religious and political argument I will have to send the replies to you by mail.

Sagebrush and Ellen

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

Ellen Maynard stood in the doorway of the school of which she was the new teacher and regarded the scene before her with homesick eyes.

Except for the immediate school yard, where a single cotton-wood flourished, there was nothing really notable in sight. A white ribbon of road that stretched for miles where it did not dip abruptly into coulee or hollow. A black and level line that was the railroad which had brought her here several days ago. For the rest, a rolling plain, covered with sagebrush to the horizon.

She had descended from the Union Pacific train wondering fearfully if some mistake had not been made in depositing her at this meagre collection of buildings. Presently, however, she discovered that the conductor had made no mistake. This was Rowdler and her landlady, Mrs. Julie Westcott, had her room all ready for her. The most interesting discovery that she made was that Mrs. Westcott had a son who, so far as bright shirt, fringed chaps and huge sombrero were concerned, was the cowboy of her dreams. And his name was Tom.

Today he was bringing her lunch to her; yet so blurred were her eyes with tears that she did not see him loping down the road until he had almost reached the school.

He lingered a moment to talk, fingering his bridle and looking out across the sage.

"You—you are fond of this country, I suppose?" said Ellen suddenly, with a sweeping gesture of her slender hand.

"You bet!" said Tom simply. "Born and raised on the range, same as Starface here!" He patted his mare's silky nose.

"Well," remarked Ellen, "I'm that homesick I hope I never see another piece of sage in my life. I hate it!"

Tom looked at her quickly. "I'm sorry," he said. "I suppose it does strike strangers that way. But with me, when I was East, I got so I just ached for a whiff of it."

Ellen threw him a glance of surprise. "East? I didn't know you had ever been East."

"Sure," said Tom easily. "I went to the state college in Minnesota—why, what is the matter?" For Ellen was laughing.

"That's West to us in the really truly East!" she explained.

Tom laughed with her. "Well, anyhow," he persisted, "I've been in the really truly West! To Leland Stanford for a year. And to Vancouver. But even out there I was downright homesick for these plains, just as I guess you're homesick for sidewalk, and skyscrapers."

"I have no relatives left," said Helen wistfully. "Near relatives. So, as you say, it must be for roads and buildings!"

With the passing of the weeks, Ellen schooled herself to a certain resignation. Shortly after Tom's return, he taught her how to ride, and after school they made many little excursions about the country.

"How far would you have to ride," she asked him curiously one day, "before you would see anything besides this same identical scene?"

Tom thought for a moment. "Sixty miles due south you would sight the Big Horns," he said finally. "Eighty miles due north there is a little section of Bad Lands."

"Oh!" said Ellen, in a small voice. "So far as that!"

Snow, falling early in this country confined Ellen more closely. There were days when there was no school because of the storms, and she would find herself wandering restlessly about Mrs. Westcott's not very large living room.

Little by little it was being borne in upon her that Tom was coming to feel something more than mere friendliness towards her and she was puzzled how to make her inevitable refusal as gentle as possible. She was relieved as the days passed and he gave no definite sign that could not be ignored.

Never was spring so grateful to her as that one at Rowdler. Soft winds ballooned over the range. The snow melted and shrank to the protected side of house or corral. Disappeared altogether. Warm days succeeded days that merely promised warmth. Blue skies reigned for weeks at a time.

Came May and June and the last days of school. Ellen's trunk stood half packed in her bedroom.

Not until she actually stood on the platform waiting for the train did Tom tell her in simple, homely words that he loved her. "I've known it for a long time," he said, "but I didn't say anything for fear it would bother you. I knew there was no use in hoping you'd care yourself."

Ellen looked straight into his splendid eyes. "I am sorry," she faltered. And then the train came and she was gone.

Two weeks later a letter came for Tom.

"Dear Tom:

I have found out a funny thing. Being homesick for the East is bad, but being homesick for the West is worse. Do you still feel the same? If you do, I'll come to you by the next train.

Give my love to the sagebrush.

Ellen."

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dear Marion:

I have never written to you before although I always read your page, but when I saw Mrs. B.'s SOS, I felt I must answer it for my own pickles went the same last year. In less than two weeks they had fermented so I had to throw them out and it is so discouraging after all the time one spends doing them. I discovered it was the cider vinegar that caused it so this year I used white sugar and white vinegar, brought it to the boil, and when cool put on pickles and keep cool and covered. Mine are a great success this year.

Hoping Mrs. B. will have the same success next year as I did this, and wishing you every success in our page, I remain,

Yours truly,

A. E. H."

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

OLD AND NEW DOCTORS

An editorial writer, in speaking of the modern physician as compared with the physician of just a few years back, compares things as in warfare.

"The early physician had no search lights, no star shells to light up the battle field, nor any airplanes or captive balloons to spy out the invaders. He did his best with the equipment at his disposal, and was frequently successful.

This older type of medical practice must now be put away with the horse pistol, the blunderbus, and the muzzle loading cannon, because this is the day of accuracy and high power explosives."

There is now the microscope which can "spot" the organism that is causing the trouble, can examine the nature of the blood, the urine, and waste from intestine; the X-ray machine which can diagnose a broken bone, a dislocated joint, a cancer and ulcer of stomach and intestine, stones in the gall bladder and kidneys; the electrocardiograph which shows exactly how the nerves and muscle of the heart are performing their work, the sphygmomanometer that tells the exact blood pressure; the electric opthal moscope for accurate detection of eye ailments; chemical tests of the blood, urine, and other fluids of the body, and many other "helps."

And naturally if you have found out the nature of the ailment there is now more up-to-date treatment of these ailments than in past days. The use of the X-ray and radium in the treatment of chronic skin conditions and even cancer.

The use of light, heat, massage, electricity and other agents are now on a scientific and established basis.

You can readily understand therefore that the modern physician approaches a patient with more knowledge and confidence than his brethren of the past.

And yet the physician of the past possessed something that the modern physician, unless he is watchful, may fall short of. Because he hadn't so much mechanical equipment to help him, the older physician had to examine and question the patient very closely. He thus obtained a knowledge of human nature that was "half the battle" in his diagnosis and treatment. Mechanical helps do not get the "full" story from the patient. Only the doctor's own personality obtains that.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHORS CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

This being the anniversary of the birth, in 1791, of Charles Wolfe, writer of the poem, it is fitting that to-day we should read "The Burial of Sir John Moore." There are few poems of war with the same power to stir.

DECEMBER 14, 1928.

Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note,
As his corpse to the rampart we hurried;
Not a soldier discharged his farewell shot
O'er the grave where our hero we buried.

We buried him darkly at dead of night
The sods with our bayonet turning;
By the struggling moonbeam's misty light,
And the lantern dimly burning.

No useless coffin inclosed his breast,
Not in sheet or in shroud we wound him;
But he lay like a warrior taking his rest,
With his martial cloak around him.

Few and short were the prayers we said,
And we spoke not a word of sorrow;
But we steadfastly gazed on the face that was dead,
And we bitterly thought of the morrow.

We thought, as we hollowed his narrow bed,
And smoothed down his lonely pillow,
That the foe and the stranger would tread o'er his head,
And we far away on the billow;

Lightly they'll talk of the spirit that's gone,
And o'er his cold ashes upbraid him,—
But little he'll reck, if they let him sleep on
In the grave where a Briton has laid him.

But half of our heavy task was done,
When the clock struck the hour for retiring;
And we heard the distant and random gun
That the foe was sullenly firing.

Slowly and sadly we laid him down,
From the field of his fame fresh and gory;
We carved not a line, and we raised not a stone—
But we left him alone with his glory.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

This frock worn appropriately at an afternoon bridge party was of bright blue silk crepe with soft felt hat to match.

The afternoon bridge ensemble should be chosen with great care. It isn't at all important that your frock should be expensive or your ornaments striking providing the effect produced is one of simple smartness. Unless you are a rather cold-blooded individual I would suggest silk crepe or satin, because houses at this time of the year are quite likely to be over-heated. Sheer velvet is, of course, smart and attractive, but there is the obvious disadvantage that velvet of any sort is a poor choice when one is to remain seated all the afternoon. Figured materials are attractive, but the frock of solid tone in one of the clear, bright shades of the season gives a pleasing patch of color in a group of women most of whom wear figured or two-toned frocks.

Today's sketch shows the ensemble chosen by a young woman who struck me as being quite the best dressed woman present at a recent bridge party. Bright blue was the color chosen. The frock was of silk crepe and the matching hat was of felt. The pearl choker was the only ornament and there were no bracelets to jangle distractingly on the table.

The hat for the afternoon bridge party should be chosen with especial care. It should be small, of course, and perfectly comfortable.

The tendency, I think, is for city women to dress rather more simply for luncheon and bridge engagements than women in the suburbs or small towns do, but it is possible to choose a frock of simplicity and elegance combined to suit the taste of all concerned.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

I am thoroughly convinced of the efficiency and capability of the younger generation of American housewives. In fact, I think that the young American women who have started in on their housewifely careers within the past decade are doing their work in a more satisfactory manner, with more enthusiasm and more intelligence, than their mothers did twenty or thirty years before.

They are making a better job out of housekeeping now because there is every reason why they should do so. Present-day clothes, I am sure, have a good deal to do with increased capabilities of the modern young housewife. Imagine the discomfort of the young housewife thirty years ago who tried to do her own work and look smart and fashionable at the same time! If she didn't wear a tightly drawn corset she felt that she was dowdy, she was lowrring her standards if she lowered her collar. Of course she felt exhausted before the day was done.

Modern improvements in kitchen equipment have taken the note of hopelessness out of housework today. In a fairly well-equipped modern house or apartment the young housewife can look forward each day to getting through with her tasks—usually the housewife a generation ago who did not keep a maid could not.

To be sure, girls a generation ago usually did have more actual home training in housework than girls do today. But girls nowadays have far greater opportunity to learn the underlying science of housewifery in schools and colleges. Girls who marry today have an opportunity to choose or reject a housewifely career. They do not have to enter marriage as an only means of providing for themselves. And the girl who has deliberately chosen to keep house is much more likely to make a go of it than the girl who has accepted it as the only alternative.

PAPER TOWELS

By keeping paper towels on hand in the kitchen much work can be saved. Use them to wipe up spilled grease, to clean up the stove, to put on the table before peeling vegetables, and to wipe your hands on.

QUICK SUPPER

Creamed sardines and hard-boiled eggs make a tasty and easily prepared supper dish. Either serve the mixture on toast or put in a baking dish and brown the top in the broiling oven.

LONG SHEETS

It saves blankets and comfortables if you use your long sheets on top and turn them back eight or ten inches over the other covers.

The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion

(Copyright)

THIS week has brought me several letters from neighbors taking me to task for my replies to "Thinker" and "Another Thinker," and I have also received another letter from the latter. These letters will be printed, with my comment, within a few days. I print all letters in the order in which they are received, according to the space that is available.

* * *

I have also, of course, received many letters supporting my stand in regard to those who think men should be given credit for whatever of success there is in the scheme of things human.

* * *

It is not my intention to prolong the discussion beyond reasonable lengths, and unless one of the thinkers thinks up something new, this will be the last mention of the affair in the Whatnot—although letters will be welcome.

* * *

All that I wish to do to-day is make a new declaration of independence. Women have found themselves; they are not any longer chattels, to be owned and enjoyed by the men who happen to have gained control of them.

* * *

The arguments we have had are very like those put forward for a continuance of slavery in United States.

* * *

Women are thinking, rational, human beings. They have every right that man has to enjoy life and its fruits. It may seem, to some, absurd to thus state elementary truths, but apparently such a statement is needed.

* * *

Women are doing great things in the world every day. Some are tending the cradle as of yore, but they are doing it more intelligently because of the freedom they have had to learn. Most women are busily engaged in keeping the family roof over some man's head, just as woman originated and built the first rude shelter, but they are doing it in a better way because they are free women and have a new scope for development of their native ability.

* * *

Other women are earning a livelihood for themselves and their families; doing it in competition with men; and doing it well.

* * *

Away back in the last century men objected to allowing women to work in any manufacturing plant, declaring they would work for less wages than men and thus drive men out of employment. The men got over that, and yielded the right to women to work at routine labor. In other words, they were quite willing to allow women to do the dirty work, while they retained the "white-collar" jobs.

* * *

Then, during the war, women broke into business. It was found they had just as much ability in banks and commercial houses as men, and most of them were a deal more pleasant to transact business with than many men had been. Hence to-day's outcry.

* * *

Sensible men are willing to concede to women the right to meet them on common ground. As I heard one man in this office say, "If I can't study and keep ahead of a woman, good luck to her."

* * *

If, instead of bemoaning their luck, and "crabbing" about an unreasonable boss, and spending time reading useless literature and playing or watching useless games, these men would apply themselves to serious study and effort, they would have no cause to fear opposition of any kind.

* * *

They would reach the highest level for which their natural brain capacity fitted them.

* * *

The trouble is, most men of the class to which I take objection are looking for an alibi. They haven't made successes of themselves, and they want someone on whom to hang the blame.

* * *

Why was it that a metropolitan journal the other day thought it worth while to put in a two-column heading the information,

"Woman Solves Metal Problem Vainly Studied by Mere Man?"

* * *

The article told how a Miss Webster, of Minneapolis, had discovered a steel-making process to utilize low-grade ores in manufacturing steel. The process has been purchased by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

* * *

Here is a woman who had a chance. She took the course in chemical engineering at the University of Minnesota, graduating as a chemist and metallurgist.

* * *

And that is just the chance which "Thinker" and his friend would deny to women. There are, of course, "women and women," just as there are "men and men"—as some correspondent has pointed out to me. Many women would not have the desire or ability to accomplish this work of Miss Webster's. But then, has "Thinker" ever contributed anything like that to the world? And if he can't why should he claim the right to keep a woman from trying?

* * *

Neighbors, I don't like all this recrimination; it's not nice. But I think the time has come to make a break-away from the archaic idea of women's utter dependance on man, and to break the servility that some men would still exact.

* * *

A few years ago it was considered the thing for a newspaper to label a page "Women's Interests" or "Fads and Foibles" or something like that. The matter under it was usually puerile. The Women's Page was considered a suitable home for the Bed-Time Story, and jokes (usually against women), and other things befitting infant minds. That was a man-editor's idea of what women should be given.

* * *

The Women's Page of The Examiner to-day reflects the real ability of its readers—it's not just a label meant to satisfy woman's growing consciousness of her needs. And in this change The Examiner pays a greater tribute to women's intelligence and makes a more definite recognition of their equality with men in such intellectual pursuits as reading the newspaper, than was the dedication of a page to them in the first place.

* * *

There's no use standing on the dock, looking longingly out to sea, waiting for ships that never come home. My idea is that if the ship is anywhere in sight we would be better in a row boat trying to tug it in than standing on the dock.

* * *

And if this admission of intellectual equality which we desire does not show signs of steaming into port, let's get out after it. We want no special privileges, but equal opportunity.

* * *

I hope it is never necessary to occupy the Whatnot column with further declarations of this kind.

* * *

There's just room left to tell you neighbors about this week's helps. You will find the hints on Christmas tree decoration really good. It's wonderful what can be done with a few scraps of colored paper, and spools, and thread.

* * *

Then there are the other Christmas helps—hints on parties and menus, by "Laura;" diagram pattern for a "Christmas negligee," simply made but very effective; and a folder telling how neighbors make Christmas gifts gifts at home.

* * *

I will send any of these, or all of them, at once, if you will return the coupon filled in. One coupon received on Monday had no name or address—please don't forget.

READ THE WANT ADS.

GIRL REQUESTS WIFE FOR DAD

Munich Fraulein Takes Charge of Her Father's Affairs, With Vengeance.

KINGSTON, Ont., Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—What Canadian daughter would have the temerity to try to manage her father's personal affairs for him, as a certain young German girl attempts to do, according to the following advertisement in a Munich paper: "For my father, tall, slim, versatile, good-looking widower of 50, I wish to hear of a refined lady with a view to matrimony." The advertisement concluded: "Am remaining in Munich only a week longer so shall appreciate prompt offers." It is easy to imagine with what a stern and suspicious eye the young daughter would look over applicants for her father's hand. Only a fearless woman could endure such scrutiny. And she would be scarcely the type to suit this daughter. Surely there is family trouble ahead for this Munich fraulien unless good fortune sends in response to her ad. a new mother as tractable as her father.

CHILDREN HAVE TOO MUCH MONEY

Says School Principal Who Found His Pupils Had $300 in Pockets.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 14.— (Canadian Press.) — "Children nowadays have too much spending money and they are becoming satiated with expensive amusements," said E. E. Gibbs, for 30 years a member of the teaching staff of London public schools, now completing his 25th year as principal of Chesley Avenue School, in an interview here. "When my scholars marched away last summer to attend the annual school picnic we made a rough census in each classroom and found they had about $300 in their pockets. We all like prosperity and are glad of it, but should children be educated to easy spending when in after life money may be harder to get? Then may come disappointment and dissatisfaction." If Mr. Gibbs' calculation of the spending money at the last school picnic was correct the school children of the whole city that day spent from $6,000 to $7,000 on amusement. Some claim the figure was nearer $10,000.

CHECK UP IS MADE ON CARS

Motorists Are Being Watched for Parking Undue Length of Time.

CO-OPERATION NEEDED

That a reasonably close check up is kept upon motorists who park their cars on George street, particularly along the west side, was made to an inquiring reporter by the city police on Wednesday. One of them, at least was busy at that time, checking on the cars that were parked, to ascertain whether or not, their owners were exceeding the time limit. He did this by placing a chalk mark on one front wheel of the car and another mark on the curb directly in front so that if the car was moved during the next hour, or twenty minutes, (according to the limit set on that particular section) he would know by the marks being out of line.

Chief of Police Newhall, in discussing the parking regulations, stated that a reasonable observance of the traffic parking laws, was met by a reasonable attitude toward motorists by the police, and expressed the hope that this co-operative spirit continue, as it is essential to the extra rush of Christmas. At the same time, the police will allow of no flaunting of the regulations.

COURT STANLEY ELECTS OFFICERS

Industrial Insurance is Explained by High Court Actuary.

The meeting of "Court Stanley" A.O.F. held Tuesday in the W.O.W. was largely attended and the enthusiasm by those present, was very noticeable. After the usual routine business had been disposed of and the initiation of new member been carried through, the following were elected by acclamation to carry on the business for the coming year:—C.R., Bro. W. Dowson; S.C.R., Bro. W. Taylor; S.W., Bro. T. Davis; J.W., Bro. I. Luther; S.B., Bro. J. Middleton; J. B., Bro. J. C. Hamilton; Treas., Bro. H. McWha; Secretary, Bro. A. Day; Chaplain, Bro. T. Hendry; Medical Officer, Bro. Dr. T. G. Louden; Trustees, Bros. T. Hendry, G. T. Tremain, Bro. A. Brotherston, Sen.; Auditors Bros. R. J. McWilliams, J. S. Mason, E. Parks.

The meeting was then addressed by Bros. F. Butter, C.L.U. and High Court Actuary of Toronto, who explained to all, the progress the Order has and is making from coast to coast. The wonderful results being obtained in the Industrial Insurance Branch is remarkable; also the number of new members being initiated into the Order show the wisdom of the Order adopting a 100 per cent. solvency to conform with the Dominion government requirements.

After Bro. Butt had given figures on the financial strength of the Institution, a hearty vote of thanks was accorded him, which was given in a real style. Before closing of the meeting reference was made to the serious illness of His Majesty King George, and all present united in the singing of "God Save the King.

ENGINE DERAILED IN NATIONAL YARDS

Freight Traffic Over C.N.R. Line Was Held Up Three Hours Last Night

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 14 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Freight traffic over the Canadian National line was interrupted for approximately three hours last night when a heavy freight locomotive was derailed in the yards here. The train arrived in Campbellford about 11.15 and left again at 3.40, with the line cleared and all traffic detained by the incident, once more on the move.

The locomotive was taking an extra east-bound freight, and when the wreck occurred, was setting a car on the storage track. The pony trucks and all the drivers left the rails. Only the tender remained on the track. At first inspection, it looked like a job for the auxiliary, and it was summoned from Lindsay. But the efforts of the train crew and section men were rewarded with such progress that the auxiliary was stopped at Peterborough and allowed to return to Lindsay.

YOUNG PEOPLE HAVE DEBATE

VISITORS WIN

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARKWORTH, Dec. 14—"Resolved that installment buying is detrimental to the people and country at large" was the subject of a very interesting debate between Warkworth and Colborne Young People's Societies. The affirmative was taken by Gordon McCubbin and Reginald McCann of Warkworth and the negative by Miss Mabel Rose and Miss Isabel Bryce, of Colborne. The judges were Miss May Mitchell, of Colborne, Miss McMahon and Rev. Mr. Duncan, of Warkworth. After due deliberation, they decided in favor of the negative debaters, although great credit was due both sides.

The meeting was held in the basement of the Presbyterian church on Monday evening and was presided over by Gordon McCubbin president of St. Andrew's Society Miss H. A. Mowat read the scripural lesson and Rev. G. R. Duncan led in prayer.

The visitors put on a short program of songs and readings, which were much enjoyed, but the main feature of the evening was the inter-league debate, after which community singing was enjoyed and a dainty lunch served to the visitors.

MAY INSTALL NEW ENGINES

Sante Fe Locomotives May Be Used on Midland- Belleville Line.

AUTOMATIC STOKERS

LINDSAY, Dec. 14.—(Special to The Examiner).—The presence here of Canadian National Railway officials and engineers a few days ago has given rise to the report that an inspection of the line from Midland to Belleville was being made with a view to installing the big Sante Fe locomotives on this section of the division. These locomotives are of the 63 percent standard and have automatic stokers. Of late a number of them have been electrically operated and the experiment has proved a great success. The largest locomotive at present in use between Midland and Belleville is the Mikado 50 percent. If the new motive power is installed it will mean larger haulages and also the construction of longer passing tracks to accommodate longer trains.

PERMANENT FORCE AFFECTED BY RULING

Canadian Militia Officers Do Not Need Bi-lingualism To Gain Promotion.

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.—Officers of the Canadian militia will not be affected by the regulation requiring a knowledge of French in officers seeking promotion in the military forces of Canada, it was learned yesterday at national defence headquarters.

Major-Gen. McNaughton announced at Vancouver that hereafter officers must have a knowledge of French because Canada was bilingual.

The new rgulation, however, merely refers to the examination of sub-alterns qualifying for higher rank. One of the examinations will be in French and the candidate must qualify as a second-class interpreter. The regulation was drawn up in 1926 but will not go into force until 1931, and not as Gen. McNaughton stated, in 1930.

The reason for the regulation is that there are two military districts in Canada where French predominates. The transfer and promotion of officers will therefore be facilitated if they have a knowledge of French.

It was made clear that only the permanent force officers are affected. The rule will work both ways and all French-Canadian officers will be required to qualify in English before gaining promotion. Only a working knowledge of the two languages will be required.

BIG INCREASE FOR DRY ENFORCEMENT

Senate Votes Huge Appropriation Without a Word Of Discussion

WASHINGTON, December 14 (Associated Press). — Without a word of debate the Senate yesterday boosted the appropriation proposed for prohibition enforcement next year from $13,500,000 to $270,627,384, the highest figure ever suggested. The increase, however, still must be approved by the House where repeated efforts to provide such a large sum have met with failure.

The move to increase the allotment was made by Senator Bruce, Democrat, Maryland, one of the Wet leaders in Congress, who proposed the more than quarter-billion dollar addition in amendment form to the Treasury-Post Office Bill, after the Senate once had passed the measure.

The Senator got his amendment in, however, by asking for reconsideration of the Bill, and then things moved so swiftly that it apparently was not until some time later that the Senate realized what had occurred.

Went Through in Rush.

Unable even to explain his amendment because of the rush with which it went through, Senator Bruce later explained off the floor that "if we can't repeal the Dry Act let us enforce it right." He said he had suggested the increase, because Commissioner Doran, of the Prohibition Bureau, had declared recently that it would take $300,000,000 to enforce the law. To support this increase for enforcement work, the Maryland Senator said he now proposed to prepare a Bill authorizing enough new Federal courts to "cover the land and take care of the enormous increase in business which seems in prospect."

Senator Bruce laughed aloud to the dismay of the small group of Senators on the floor when his amendment was declared approved and the bill immediately thereafter declared passed.

As Mr. Bruce laughed, Chairman Warren turned to the amendment, read it over, and then laughed himself. He showed other members on the floor what they had just accepted, and they all decided the laugh was on themselves, confident that the conferees of the Senate and House would not accept the enormous increase.

Next came the country booth which had a very enticing display, such as apples, vegetables, fruit pickles, fowl and several other dainty articles. Mrs. Edward Trennum was the convenor and Mrs. C. Heard and Mrs. H. Bullock.

Home Made Cooking.

In the centre was the most enticing looking booth of the three, which displayed home made cooking, cakes, pies, tarts, bread and lots of dainties. Mrs. Wilbert Bell and Mrs. Frankish looked after this booth, while the rest of the ladies of the Aid took turns in relieving the other members.

Mrs. Lloyd Kennedy wore a large apron covered with pockets. These pockets were filled with parcels and any one had the privilege of picking her pockets for ten cents.

When the returns were counted up and the money returned to the treasurer it was found that the results amounted to over $111.

IN POLICE COURT

In police court this morning, it cost Joseph Quigley of Louis street, $100 and costs for having liquor in his motor car some time after having procured it from the Government liquor store. He faced a charge of having liquor in a place other than his own private residence and pleaded guilty.

Leo Fontaine, manager of James Akey's livery on Brock street, pleaded guilty when he appeared on a remand on a charge of allowing a disorderly house on the premises over which he had charge. He pleaded guilty, though his counsel pointed out that the accused had not participated in the disorder. A fine of $20.00 and costs was imposed.

Unable to pay the $250.00 fine imposed as a result of his having pleaded guilty to a charge of having liquor without a permit, James McGuire took the alternative of one month's imprisonment in the common jail.

William Drain, until recently employed at Colborne, had attempted to commit suicide at Havelock; he had come before the magistrate and had been remanded until this morning. He elected summary trial by the magistrate pleading guilty, and after due consideration, was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

HOPES RAISED MAY AVERT WAR BY CONFERENCE

Return of Bolivian Delegates to Pan-American Conference Lessens Tension

MAY HAVE NO EFFECT

War Preparations Continue, Paraguay Claiming Bolivia Is Concentrating Troops

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 14 (A.P.).—Tension caused by the dispute between Paraguay and Bolivia has apparently lessened with the return to the Pan-American conference of the Bolivian delegates. In particular representatives of the American republics meeting here were optimistic over this development, the belief being expressed that it means that the quarrel will be settled without war.

The excitement caused in Bolivia and Paraguay after troops of the two countries clashed on the frontier, however, seems to have abated little.

Juan Ramirez, Paraguayan charge, issued the following communique:

"The legation of Paraguay has received official information that the Bolivian government was concentrating troops and material of war along the frontier and those circumstances make more imminent the outburst of war."

This word came like a literal bombshell into the conferees' ranks. Delegates had been overjoyed by previous developments, making it appear that the threat of war was waning.

On withdrawing, the Bolivian minister said he had a communication from his government that his country wanted "moral reparation" from Paraguay before participating in conciliation proceedings.

This was followed by quick action by the United States state department. Secretary Kellogg personally urged the Bolivian minister to reconsider and take part in the conference, and the United States minister at La Paz was instructed to prevail upon the Bolivian government to change its attitude.

The Bolivian minister, Diez De Medina, said, however, that the fact that the Bolivian delegation had reentered the conference was not to be taken to mean that his country approved of the conciliation efforts of the special international committee.

Demands Satisfaction

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Dec. 14 (U.P.).—Bolivia demanded "satisfaction" from Paraguay in a note yesterday answering Secretary Kellogg's invitation to have the Pan-American conference mediate the Paraguayan-Bolivian boundary crisis. The Bolivian note, which was signed by President Siles and Foreign Minister Palacios, said that after the "satisfaction" Bolivia would be ready to follow along the lines of international mediation policy.

The note said that Bolivia considers that Paraguay had attacked Bolivian dignity and sovereignty by military force in a sudden and unexpected aggression. It asserted that this injury must be wiped out to restore the Bolivian people to a state of national mind that would permit of arbitration.

ELOCUTIONIST GIVES CONCERT

Miss Viola Payton Provides Entertainment of Outstanding Merit in Lindsay.

ABLY ASSISTED

The following report from The Lindsay Post refers to the recital given there on Monday evening by Miss Viola Payton, elocutionist, of this city:

"An entertainment of outstanding merit was given last night in Queen Street United Church, under the auspices of the Young People's Society. A recital was given by Miss Viola Payton, elocutionist, assisted by Daisy Murray Westington, soprano, of Toronto, and Margaret Helen Watson, A.T.C.M., of Toronto, accompanist.

The program was opened by Mrs. Westington, who sang a group of two numbers. Miss Payton then offered a group of two readings, the first being the cleverly told story of "Levinsky at the Wedding." In her second group Mrs. Westington included the well-known "Under the Greenwood Tree" and "Come to the Fair" was a popular encore.

"In two numbers Mrs. Watson showed her skilful control of the new organ, and her ability to bring out its sweetest and richest tones. 'A Voice from Afar,' in which she was assisted by Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Westington, was probably Miss Payton's most popular number. In it she carried her audience to an isolated home where an old couple, lonely because of the absence of their daughter, were made glad by the sound of her voice coming to them through the air from a far away city. Miss Payton also contributed a second reading in which she was assisted by piano accompaniment by Mrs. Watson, and after both of these numbers she responded to an encore. Mrs. Westington's next group was 'The Blind Plowman' and in response to a request 'The Wasted Crust.' This last number was a favorite with the juvenile members of the audience. In her concluding group, Mrs. Westington sang a sacred number with organ accompaniment, and the patriotic number, 'Land of Hope and Glory.' In closing her part of the program, Miss Payton recited 'What Did You See Out There, My Lad?' and one of Pauline Johnston's most appealing poems, 'Beyond the Blue.'"

POULTRY THIEVES ARE FRUSTRATED

Three Thugs Make Attempt To Loot Turkey Pen of Campbellford Farmer

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, December 14. — Poultry thieves, or prospective poultry thieves, got an early start last night when they visited a flock of turkeys owned by Wilson Thain, a farmer, about three miles south of this town. But they were unsuccessful in getting any of the birds, and their only good fortune lay in their escape from police pursuit. There were three men in a closed car which resembled a Durant coach, according to the description given. The car was equipped with disc wheels and the spare wheel carried in the rear had no tire. But the farmer, who described the vehicle, was unable to give the license number of it.

The farm is about a quarter of a mile west of the county road to Stirling, and is situated on the north side of the government road, which leads from the Stirling road at the top of French's Hill to the government road along the east bank of the canal and river. The police made all possible speed in responding to the call which was telephoned to them shortly after eight o'clock, and since the road is not subject to heavy traffic, were able to track the car for some distance. A clever ruse by the fugitives threw the police off the trail just long enough for them to make their escape.

From a description of the car, it was thought that it might be owned locally, and investigation was started. But the car which the police believed might possibly have been used for the escapade, was proved to be in almost the exact opposite direction, and much further away. With this fact definitely established there is a temporary halt in the investigation. At the present time, the police here will not say whether they believe the attempt last night to have been made by the same party or parties who have visited the vicinity on two previous occasions during the past few weeks. On both these occasions, the car used was a closed model. Both attempts were made south of Campbellford, one on the east and one on the west side of the river. On the former occasions, chickens were the birds which the thieves desired. The last affair had turkeys as its centre of attraction.

Three strange men reported to the police as being strangers in town and trespassing on the property of the Canadian Paper Box plant south of the town, are not believed to be in any way connected with the three men in the car. This fact had been established by the local police before midnight last night.

TAX NOTICES ARE SENT OUT

$2,500 Has Already Been Paid in Poll Taxes, Says Collectors.

TIME OVERDUE

That the change in the income tax regulations has meant an increase in the poll tax totals for the year, as already paid, was the intimation of William J. Green, City Tax Collector, in discussing the sending out of notices to those who have not already paid their taxes for the year 1928.

This morning, several bundles of such notices were posted from this City office, while those who continue to disregard this very important duty will be called upon to explain before the police magistrate 'ere long.

Mr. Green stated that already, there had been a total of approximately $2,500.00 in poll taxes paid into his office, being the largest amount collected as compared with past years.

O.H.A. REFUSES AFFILIATION

Players Joining New League Will Be Barred From Ontario Association

TORONTO, Dec. 14.—The Ontario Hockey Association's affiliation with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association gives the O.H.A. control over all amateur hockey in its territory, and therefore the application from the newly-formed International Amateur Hockey League for affiliation was refused at a meeting of the executive held in the Telegram Building last night. All players taking part in games played by International League teams in the future will be barred from further O.H.A. competition. The following resolution was adopted:

"With reference to the application of the International Hockey League for affiliation with the O.H.A., it must be noted that the affiliation of the O.H.A. with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will not permit it to accept any club operating outside the jurisdiction of the O.H.A. in this province.

"Furthermore, the O.H.A. executive, in furtherance of its policy as enunciated at the last annual meeting strongly objects to the organization of any amateur hockey association outside of its control. The O.H.A. has for 38 years fostered amateur hockey in this province and endeavored through its senior, intermediate and junior series to bring hockey up to the highest standard. It is the unanimous opinion of this executive that all amateur hockey in this province should be played under the rules and regulations of constituted authority, and the operation of leagues not so controlled would, we believe, be inimical to the best interests of amateur hockey.

"The request of the said league for affiliation is therefore refused, and notice is hereby given that any player participating in any games scheduled in such leagues from this date forward shall be barred from further participation in the O.H.A."

The Hamilton Amateur Hockey Association, fostering hockey in Hamilton in conjunction with the Big Brotherhood Society, also sought affiliation with the O.H.A. The series is formed for boys between the ages of 13 and 16. The Hamilton A.H.A. will be admitted to affiliation under the same terms as the Toronto High School Association.

The executive decided that the Clinton club must pay the claim of the Stratford club for $23 incurred when Clinton defaulted a game last season.

Owing to the fact that the rink in their home town has been condemned G. Bulger, Douglas Symonds, and Ed. Cavanagh, all of Cobourg, were granted permission to play for Port Hope intermediates during the season of 1928-29 only.

Albert Thompson and Delbert Thompson, formerly of Stirling, were declared eligible to play in Port Hope.

Kenneth G. Currie was granted a transfer from Kitchener to Brantford.

Ralph Beemer, of London, under the residence rule, does not qualify to play in the O.H.A. this season.

Further information is required from Arthur Knapp, formerly of Prescott, who desires to play with the Gananoque club.

Further information is also required in regard to the applications from Moody Charles Sando and Charles Hutchinson to play in St. Thomas.

V. Gordon Tanner, a school teacher, is eligible to play in Blenheim.

Ross V. Currie was granted a certificate with Brantford Hockey Club juniors.

F. W. Kemp, J. Robbie, F. Johnston and E. W. Creighton of Listowel, were refused permission to play for Palmerston. Listowel has a junior team but no intermediate.

Couture brothers do not qualify under the O.H.A. residence rule to play for the Southampton club.

Bob Donald of Mount Forest, may play junior O.H.A. in Palmerston this season, but for no other club.

Clarence Gallanger, of Cornwall, is not eligible to play in Brockville.

Reginald B. Porterfield and John (Jack) Davidson may play junior O.H.A. with the Seaforth club if they wish.

The following members were present: President, Richard Butler, Lindsay; Immediate Past President, George B. Mackay, Toronto; 1st Vice-President, Frank Hyde, Woodstock; A.A.U. of C. governor, W. W. Davidson, Toronto; Secretary, W. A. Hewitt, Toronto; Assistant Secretary, W. M. Tackaberry, Toronto; Treasurer, Sheriff J. F. FAMOUS HOCKEY GAMES OF PETERBOROUGH TEAMS

By F.D.C.

Perhaps the most sensational victory won by the great Peterborough team of 1906 was their startling finish against the University of Toronto seven on March 23, when after being down five goals with the end of the battle in sight, Captain Fred Whitcroft and his teammates ran in six counters in seven minutes and converted almost sure defeat into glorious triumph.

Whenever old time fans get together this celebrated game is almost sure to come up, even although it was an exhibition affair with nothing but prestige at stake.

Varsity brought down a crack team including Hanley of Midland and other stars, promising to beat this all-conquering Peterborough team and it must be admitted they came within an ace of doing it. The Petes for the greater part of the battle showed little of their usual team work or aggressiveness. Probably they had gone stale, but at all events the students led by Herb Clark, who scored four goals and along with Toms and Davidson played great hockey, set a merry pace. They led 6 to 4 at half time and as they proceeded to add to their margin early in the second half they looked all over winners.

With seven minutes to go and the score 11 to 6 for Varsity the Petes suddenly came to life. Morgan put them back in the hunt when he beat Keith after a scrimmage in front of the Varsity net in which half the players were down in a heap. Thirty seconds after the Petes' centre flashed in again for second counter and the Petes were on their way, with Varsity suddenly powerless to stop them. Bill Cavanah let go one of his famous shots from the left boards and it was 11 to 9. Four minutes to go; three goals needed to win! Whitcroft whirled in with a beautiful piece of stickhandling, slipped the rubber over to Cavanah and it was 11 to 10. In dashed Morgan, the pass went over to Whitcroft and the score was tied with 65 seconds to play. And then Rollie Glover broke away and passed to Chris Graham, who went in close and beat Keith for the winning goal. What a finish to a great season was that sudden spirit from far behind, a fitting windup indeed to a campaign in which that dion-hearted blue and white crew had advertised Peterborough from one end of Canada to the other.

The line up:

Varsity—Goal, Keith; point, Hanley; cover, Broodfoot; forwards, H. Clarke, Toms, Davidson, A. Clark.

Peterboro—Goal, Wasson; point, Glover; cover, Crowley; forwards, Whitcroft, Morgan, Graham, Cavanah.

Referee—Ernie Ford, Peterboro.

C.G.E. ENGINEERS ORGANIZE TEAM

Department Will Place Strong Aggregation In Shop Hockey League.

The Engineering Department hockey enthusiasts held the first meeting of the season last night and decided to again enter one team in the Shop League. This department will apparently have a slightly better team than last year, as George Gore and Bert Hall who has already shown his worth as a goal tender are both eligible players and will no doubt strengthen last year's aggregation. J. O. Mitchell of the Mechanical Drafting Department who knows his hockey onions as well as anyone around the plant, will, it is hoped, act as coach this year. It was moved and carried that the players buy sweaters, the colors to be maroon with white trimmings.

Next General Meeting

All hockey players and fans are reminded that the next general hockey meeting in the C.G.E. will be held Tuesday Dec. 18, in the Laboratory Lecture Room and it it hoped that by that time the departments which have not sent in their entry for the Shop League to date will have done so by then in order that the schedule may be drawn up at once.

TYSON RETURNS TO THE BISONS

Herd Secures Outfielder From Brooklyn While Horne Goes to Cubs

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—(A.P.)—The brisk trading at the major league meetings seems to affect the player market in other parts of the country as well as at places where the gatherings are held. While the major leagues were doing business in Chicago Wednesday the ivory market was booming in several minor league cities in addition to one deal announced in New York.

The Brooklyn Robins and the Chicago Cubs figured in deals announced after the National league magnates had left for the joint meeting in Chicago. The Robins released Al Tyson, outfielder, to the Buffalo Internationals in a cash deal. Tyson, who was up to the majors once before with the Giants, broke a leg in midseason last year and was kept out of the game for the rest of the year.

The Cubs paid out $20,000 in hard money for "Sonny" Horne, Jersey City pitcher who won 15 games and lost 17 for a tail-end club. Horne was voted the most valuable player the Jersey-men had last season.

Two deals between minor league clubs sent Joe Zubris pitcher for the New Haven club of the Eastern league, to Reading in the International and Catcer George Rensor from the Evansville Three-Eye club to Fort Worth. New Haven got Darydimple, youthful shortstop, in return for Zubris.

A transaction at Columbus, Go., involved an entire club instead of merely a few players. C. D. Smith and his associates assured Columbus of an entry in the Southeastern league next season by buying the club. Columbus had plenty of financial difficulties last year, as did most of the other clubs in the circuit, which was cut down from eight to six clubs because of the losses.

Moriarity Is Back On Umpire's Job

CHICAGO, Dec. 14, — George Moriarty, manager of the Detroit Tigers for two years, will return to the American League as an umpire next season, President E. S. Barnard of the league announced yesterday. Dave Barry of Boston, was added to the list as a reserve umpire.

STAR OF THE WEST

George Boucher, captain of the Ottawa Senators, to-night leads his puck chasers against the Ford City. George is one of the famous hockey family which includes Frank, now with Rangers; Bill, last year with New York Americans; and Bobby, who is with Newark this year. They are the sons of Tom Boucher, famous old College and Ottawa rugbyist.

George was a kid "phenom" in hockey as a youngster and once played in five different games in a night. He first attracted attention at sixteen when playing with Aberdeens and the next year was a sensation with a team called Royal Canadiens.

He is starting his thirteenth season with Ottawa and like a famous brand, is still going strong. He is one of the vanishing race of stickhandlers and his work in that regard is highly spectacular. Boucher has been on four Stanley Cup teams and is regarded as a strong blocking player.

He is also a smart baseball player and captains the Senators, a semi-pro team in Ottawa, made up of the Ottawa hockey players and other hockey stars who are adept at baseball. He was a good rugby half-back and played with Rough Riders when he was a mere boy. He was a fine broken field runner and a sure catch. Even yet he can play a stellar game, and is considered a smart rugby coach. He has been captain of Ottawa Senators for four years and is a rugged type of battler. In addition he is a noted wrestler and physically one of the strongest players in hockey.

Windsor Bulldogs Ar eShut Out By Millionaires In Fast Clash

GOES OVERTIME

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 14 (Canadian Press).—Ronnie Martin made the Millionaires a little richer in the win column of the Canadian Professional Hockey League standings at the Arena Gardens last night when he scored the lone goal of the game after three minutes and 35 seconds of overtime play, to defeat Windsor Bulldogs. The win meant more than a pair of points, as the Millionaires convinced the best crowd of the Canpro season that they could play good hockey, their display being the best on local ice.

Illness Of Both Teams Failed to Prevent a Thrilling Struggle

PLAYERS PUT HARD

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 14—(Canadian Press).—Illness, which visited both the Ottawa Senators and the Detroit Cougars, failed to prevent the two National Professional Hockey League team sfrom staging a thrilling battle here last night, with a 1 all tie game the result of a hard evening's work. Len. Grosvenor, Ottawa forward, and George Hay, Cougar star wing man, were ill in bed with bad colds and a number of the other players on both teams were not in the best condition, but they put up a hard, rough battle that had the fans roaring at every stage of the game.

THE LEGION.

(By D. I. S., R.R. 9)

We're all that's left of a gory war,
And united we intend to stand.
We knew and said, what we fought for
Our comrades lie in a distant land.

They are dead, but stay! we're here
Their battle to complete.
And by our presence, have no fear
We'll never stand defeat.

We are a legion firm and strong,
It is faithful, tried and true.
We'll keep our flag still waving on
This deal old land we saved for you.

Our youth and health are not the same
As in the good old days of yore.
But as true soldiers, we are game,
A bulldog watchful, at the door.

A BURNING airplane—a gallant enemy—an exchange of guns—these are the links in the chain of fate forged in one of the most dramatic screen productions of the year.

THE COLLEGIANS

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL

BABY ELEANOR AND ROD LA ROCQUE

The dainty little miss who has become familiar to millions of theatre goers on account of her clever work in "Our Gang" comedies, Little Eleanor O'Hara, "Baby Eleanor", is at the Capitol Theatre in person this week, accompanied by her father and mother. She made a hit with her audiences yesterday. A charming little lady of eight years of age, who had been in the movies for four years, she captured the appreciation of her watchers yesterday with her delightful little songs and dances. She sings a "Baby Days" song, dances to the music of "Ramona" and does a castanet dance to "La Paloma" and illustrates in her acting with her father the movie presentation of Al Jolson's son, "Sonny Boy". Then in real Scotch tartan, with twinkling plaid-clad legs and velvet bonnet, she does a fetching Highland Fling.

Echoes of Harry Lauder's favorite song, "The End of the Road", came back as the audiences yesterday listened to Mr. O'Hara's fine baritone in the beautiful old number.

"Captain Swagger" is Rod La Rocque's latest vehicle. It is an affair of several peppy episodes that do their best to lighten up the general atmosphere of dragginess that pervades this much talked-of picture. The sub-titules are extremely inane.

Rod La Rocque is the hero of a production that opens with a war scene of 1917, when the American ace, Hugh Drummond, brings down a German plane and then rescues from its burning depths the pilot, Baron Von Stahl. As a mark of gratitude, the Baron presents his rescuer with his revolver and later, when Hugh has fallen on stony broke days in New York, after the war, the Baron, who is a fence for stolen goods, operating through a pawnshop, lends him two hundred dollars on the gun. Drummond, who has met under odd circumstances a young girl who is also stony broke, Sue Arnold (Sue Carol) befriends her and secures a position for them both as Russian dancers in the Viennese Club. Here they are innocent victims of a hold-up staged by the Baron and his pals and later, Hugh and the Baron assist each other in a thrilling escape from pursuing police officers. The picture, despite the injection of a philandering gentleman admirer of Sue's ends happily.

The third series of the Collegians has for this week's offering an entertaining bit in which the rivalry of Don Trent and Ed Benson is submerged in a battle between June, the heroine, and a peroxide blonde who does her best to involve Benson in an embarassing mix-up.

The short reels include an interesting presentation of several of the famous movie stars and a close-up of the equally famous gate-crasher "One Eye Connolly", with the tiny Major Mite and his eight-foot companion.

The Capitol is announcing for next week a children's matinee on the morning of Saturday, when all children are asked to bring a potato or apple as the price of admission. These will be gathered up and presented jointly to the Children's Shelter and St. Vincent's Orphanage, as a gift from the children and the Capitol management.

Comedian Sends Personal Message to His Fan Club Here

Members of the Johnny Hines Fan Club of this city are turning out en masse to the Regent Theatre where Johnny Hines' latest First National Picture, "Chinatown Charlie" is open for a run. This club is composed of the many admirers of the comedian locally and is a branch of the Johnny Hines Fan Clubs all over the world, boasting membership in England, France, Belgium, Africa and Honolulu.

Therefore it is entirely appropriate that the comedian should seize his pen and compose a pleasing message of greeting to the local members.

"Dear Members of the Johnny Hines Fan Club," the comedian wrote. "I have often hoped that I would have the opportunity to greet each one of you personally and tell you of my appreciation for your organization. That, unfortunately, is impossible at this time, as I am now in Hollywood about to start work on my next picture.

"The next thing I can do is greet you from the screen of the Regent Theatre where my newest picture 'Chinatown Charlie' is playing. When you see me in this picture, please be assured that I am trying my best to give a portrayal of a lively American boy suddenly thrust into exciting events which take place all in a single evening. They are as fast and as furious as I could make them, and I have tried to sprinkle laughs abundantly along this speedy celluloid path.

"I take you with me on a sight-seeing bus from New York Times' Square on a humorous trip to Chinatown, the underworld, and the lower East Side. Naturally, things of a hilarious nature are bound to happen both on the trip and when we reach the mazes of Chinatown. If you enjoy the picture and laugh heartily, I will know that I have not worked in vain for your enjoyment. I would like to hear from each of you members and would like to know how you like the picture. Perhaps sometime I may be able to greet each one of you in person. I sincerely hope so. In the meantime, good luck to all of you. Yours till Niagara Falls—Johnny."

GENARO WILL DEFEND TITLE

New York Battler Will Meet Canadian Champion At Detroit To-night

ROCCO HAS FOLLOWING

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 14.—(Canadian Press).—The flyweight championship of the world will be at stake when Frankie Genaro, present holder of the title, meets Steve Rocco, Canadian champion, in a ten-round bout to-night.

The pair met in Toronto, Rocco's home, last summer and fought to a draw. Rocco was only a few weeks out of the amateur class at that time and figures to be enough improved now to defeat Genaro. The veteran titleholder expects his experience and ringcraft to offset Rocco's aggressiveness and youth.

They were to weigh in at 3 o'clock this afternoon and neither was expected to have any trouble making the division limit of 112.

The contest will be the first title bout in Detroit since 1927, when Sammy Mandell defeated Phil McGraw, Detroit, in defense of his lightweight title.

CRICKETER NEAR CENTURY MARK

Veteran Sportsman Tells Why He Prefers Cricket To Any Other Game

OTTAWA, Ont., December 14 (Canadian Press). — Emmanuel Hyman Benjamin, of this city, who celebrated his 98th birthday recently, still attends leading sport events and appears to enjoy them, too. He is familiarly known to the residents of the Capital as "Ben," and Ben is generally recognized as Ottawa's Grand Old Man of Sport. From very early days he played cricket and even when well advanced in years he engaged in his favorite game. Cricket, he says, is one of the few games in which there is no wrangling among the players nor fault finding with the umpire or referee, and this is one reason why it is his most favored sport.

Mr. Benjamin many years ago became connected with the Ottawa Cricket Club, and often acted as umpire or scorer at their matches. He was scorer in the match played here by the first English eleven that visited Canada. The famous cricketer, W. G. Grace, was the great attraction then, carrying his bat, as "Ben" says, for a whole day. Mr. Benjamin was also an umpire in the match played by the first American cricket team to play in Canada.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

The Church Hockey League holds its first meeting to-night at the Y.M.C.A., and the executive will be elected.

The Peterborough Baseball Club had an enthusiastic meeting last night. Gordon Matthews was re-elected as president, and a strong executive was put in to support him in the work of running the affairs of the club. A big slice of business was cleaned up, and things look most promising for next year.

Just as the boys down at the Sacred Heart rink had everything running hunky-dory, the weather had to hit a soft spot and spoil it. The works of mice and men often go awry, as the famous Bobby Burns once wrote.

In the game at Detroit last night it was reported that six members of the Ottawa Senators were ill, but even at that they went out and battled the Cougars to a 1-all tie, and gave a great exhibition of hockey. All the regulars were subbing, and Alex. Connel only went into the nets because the Senators had no sub goalie.

Leila Brooks, the great Canadian woman skater, established a new world's record in the one mile race, clipping six seconds off the former time of 3.13 4-5. The Canadian skaters made a clean sweep of all the events in Detroit, and gave another proof that Canadians are the greatest skaters in the world.

The Americans are the surprise team of the professional hockey league so far this season, and last night they jumped into first place by defeating the Montreal Maroons 2 to 1. They have a good goalie in Roy Worters, and two flashy wings in Burch and Himes, but outside of this trio they have nothing extra. And yet because peace reigns in their club, they are winning a row of successes.

Geary Stars For British Team Capturing Five Wickets For 35 Runs

Sport—Ponsford takes ... .

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press Cable).—Batting first in the second cricket test match which opened here to-day the Australians had scored 251 runs for eight wickets against England, when stumps were drawn.

The Australians suffered a crushing piece of bad luck when W. H. Ponsford, their great hitter suffered a fractured finger. He had to retire from the match.

The crowd staged an unruly scene when A. Kippax was clean bowled. The batsman did not think the ball hit the wicket and one of the umpires agreed with him. The crowd jeered the English wicket-keeper, Duckworth, suspecting him of tipping off the bails.

Geary, the English bowler, was in rare form, capturing five wickets for 35 runs. Woodful played the best innings for the Australians, scoring 68.

MAX SWANSTON HEADS PETES

Veteran Catcher Has Been Elected Manager of Local Senior Team

MUCH ENTHUSIASM

So much enthusiasm was shown at the annual meeting of the Peterborough Baseball Club in the Empress Hotel parlors last night that it is safe to predict a successful season in the Central Ontario League race next year.

President Gordon S. Matthews was in the chair and there was a representative attendance of players and fans, all of whom were keen to have Peterborough represented by the strongest possible team in 1929.

Many features in connection with baseball were discussed and it was the unanimous opinion that every opportunity should be given younger players in the city to make good in the Senior loop. There will be a hearty welcome for every youngster who wishes to try out with the team.

Max Swanston, the Petes' veteran catcher, who led them in the Ontario finals in 1927, has been persuaded to accept the important position of manager once again. Players and fans alike will be delighted that "Swannie" has consented to take over the responsibilities.

The officers who have done so much for senior baseball in Peterborough, were all re-elected, along with several new executives whose inteerst in sport has been demonstrated in a practical manner.

Following is a list of the officers for 1929:

President: Gordon S. Matthews.
Vice-President—Vic. Hamilton.
Secretary-Treasurer—Sheriff F. J. A. Hall.
Manager—Max Swanston.
Executive Committee—R. M. Glover, J. Pilling, W. L. Ferguson, G. A. Macdonald, J. W. Anderson, J. E. Sullivan, H. T. McFadden, Chas. Westbrooke, William Kay.

Committees to wait on the City Council to request the use of James Stevenson Park, and to endeavor to have dressing rooms and shower baths installed there were appointed and other preliminaries discussed before the meeting adjourned.

It is likely there will be a get-together supper arranged for early next year in order to talk over the situation.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

BIG LEAGUES HAVE FARMS IN MINORS

Majority of Majors Have Working Agreements With Lower Clubs

CHICAGO, Dec. 14. — John A. Heydler, president of the National League, tossed his revolutionary idea of a ten-man baseball team into the joint meeting of the American and National League club owners yesterday.

Instead of creating a whooping uproar, the proposal fell as flat as a cooking school cake. It was not even discussed except by President Heydler himself when he presented the idea to the club owners. Then he talked about it apologetically, explaining he merely wanted to go on record with the scheme for future consideration.

With the idea tabled, the pitchers of both the National and American Leagues will bat for themselves during the coming season.

"All I wanted to do was to present the idea, no matter if it were tables," said President Heydler. "I wanted it to go on record. It will give the club owners of both leagues something to think over and some good may come of it at a future meeting. I still contend the idea has merits. I sincerely hope the club owners of both leagues will give the idea serious consideration."

Landis Presides.

Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, presiding over the session, had little opportunity to wave the 'big stick' as peace and harmony prevailed from start to finish. The club owners unanimously agreed to start the major league season on April 16, about a week later than usual, and wind it up October 6, a week later than the close of the 1928 season. This will bring the world series in conflict with the football season, as the baseball classic, under the new closing date, cannot be started until October 9 or 10. The club owners decided on the later opening date because of the adverse weather conditions that prevailed last spring when scores of games were forced to be postponed.

The minor league situation was discussed, but it was the sense of the joint meeting that no major league representation should attend the minor league draft conference to be held at West Baden, Ind., Jan. 10. The majors will be glad to listen to the minors relative to the draft question, but will leave this subject entirely up to the minor leaguers.

Probably taking cognizance of the minor leaguers' demands that the major league owners give up their minor league holdings within three years, Commissioner Landis canvassed the situation in this respect yesterday, causing each club to reveal the minor league clubs they control, or own as farms.

Clubs Majors Control

Commissioner Landis' check-up on this question revealed Brooklyn was interested in Macon, Ga.; Boston Nationals in Providence; Chicago Clubs in Reading, Pa., Cincinnati in Columbus O., and Peoria; Pittsburg in Salisbury, N.C., and Columbia, S.C., and St. Louis Nationals in Rochester, N.Y., Houston, Tex., Danville, Ill., Dayton, O., and Topeka, Kan.

In the American League it was revealed Cleveland had an interest in Fredericksburg, Va., and a working agreement with Terre Haute, Ind. Also that Detroit was interested in Evansville, Ind.; Fort Smith Ark., and a working agreement with Hanover in the Blue Grass League. Philadelphia Athletics hold an interest in Portland. Phil A. Ball, owner of the St. Louis Browns, admitted the ownership of the Tulsa and Muskogee clubs. In addition, William Wrigley, jr., owner of the Chicago Cubs, also own the Los Angeles club, of the Pacific Coast League.

The club owners agree that no player under 17 years of age would be eligible to sign a contract. They also decided to turn over another $50,000 to the American Legion Baseball Fund next Summer to be used to conduct a baseball tournament for junior players.

No Startling Trades

No startling trades were made, although the lobby of the Congress Hotel was filled with conversation from morning to night, but few players were shifted around.

President E. S. Barnard, of the American League, announced that George Moriarity, former manager of the Detroit Tigers, would return to the league as a member of the umpiring staff next year, and that Dave Barry, of Boston, had been placed on the reserve list of umpires.

Eugene "Bubbles" Hargraves, veteran Cincinnati backstop, was signed as manager of the St. Paul Club of the American Association, after Brooklyn finally waived on him. St. Paul agreed to turn over Pitcher Paul Zahniser to the Reds and some cash for Hargraves.

Cincinnati purchased Outfielder Swanson, the heavy slugger with the Mission Club of the Pacific Coast League. Nick Allen, former St. Paul manager, is dickering with the White Sox for a job as head coach. The position of head coach with the Sox has been vacant since Lena Blackburne was made manager last July.

F. Hoffman, catcher for the Boston Red Sox and Pete Scott, Pittsburg outfielder, were sold to the Mission Club of the Pacific Coast League and Pat Collins Yankee catcher, went to the Boston Braves by purchase.

WEEPING JURY FREES FATHER WHO SHOT SON

Judge, Prosecutor and Audience in Tears at Chicago Trial.

DAD WAS DRUNK

"I Would Rather Be Dead Than Be the Son of a Drunkard," Said Youth.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14 (A.P.)—A wet-eyed jury in five minutes acquitted of murder a father who confessed killing his son after a "hanging prosecutor" burst into tears and refused to continue the prosecution.

The judge, the State prosecutor, the defendant, his daughter, who was forced to testify against him, and virtually the entire court room, including the jury, were in tears as the trial, less than three hours old, came to an ending as dramatic as any ever witnessed in the grim old Criminal Courts Building here, scene of hundreds of murder trials.

Arthur F. Falk, the defendant, a former park commissioner, slumped to the floor in a faint as the jurors, still weeping, brought in a verdict five minutes after receiving the case, while the court, State and defense attorneys, and even spectators, endeavored to control their tears after an emotional climax as is seldom witnessed in a court room.

Drunken Rage.

Falk, in a drunken rage, shot and killed his 22-year-old son Eldred three months ago when the youth upbraided him for coming home intoxicated. Offering his father a shotgun that Falk had given the boy last Christmas, Eldred told his father to fire, adding that he would rather be dead than be the son of a drunkard.

Falk, his brain befuddled by drink, pulled the trigger and his son fell dead at his feet. The father, sobered by the shooting, attempted to reload the gun and kill himself, but had never fired a gun before and did not know how. Instead, he called the police and made a full confession. His wife and a 18-year-old daughter, Vernus, at first turned against him, but a few days ago declared they intended to stand by the husband and father even though he had killed their son and brother.

Father Remorseful.

Such was the case that opened in the court of Judge Normoyle when Falk, his face contorted with remorse, went on trial for his life. At his elbow lay the gun with which his son's life was equipped out, behind him in deep mourning, sat his mother, his wife and his daughter.

Tears rolled down his cheeks as Harold Levy, who with Emmett Byrne, are known as Cook County's "hanging prosecutors" outlined the State's case. William Mannion, defense lawyer, said he hoped to prove the shooting was entirely accidental and that Falk did not know what he was doing.

Falk's daughter was called as the State's chief witness. Relentlessly the State forced her to tell of her father's return home intoxicated, of his quarrel with her brother, of her brother's entreaty to her father to kill him and of hearing the fatal shot. She burst into tears as she identified the weapon her father used and spectators and some of the jurors already were weeping with her.

Prosecutor Weeps.

Other testimony was quickly presented by both sides. Then Prosecutor Byrne Rose to begin the State's closing argument. Suddenly he burst into tears and announced that he could not continue. He reviewed five years' work as State prosecutor and said he had acted without fear or favor and has never been swayed by his emotions.

"But," he said, as tears streamed down his cheeks, "if this man is sent to the electric chair or to the penitentiary, I refuse to be a party to it. When I had concluded my argument, I couldn't look into the faces of the defendant, his wife, daughter or mother."

By this time the entire courtroom was in tears and Judge Normoyle was wiping the tears from his eyes.

The case went to the jury without further argument, and within five minutes the jurors were back with the acquittal verdict. Later in the judge's chambers Falk and his family reunited, but still were too overcome with emotion to talk.

"The verdict," said Judge Normoyle, "was a very sensible one. It was the only one that could have been returned under the circumstances."

RUGBY TEAM IS BANQUETED BY KIWANIANS

Collegiate Boys Attend Weekly Luncheon of Kiwanis Club

INTERESTING ADDRESS

Rev. Paul Costello Emphasizes the Benefits Derived From Athletics

The value of athletics to a community was brought home to Peterborough Kiwanians at their luncheon meeting to-day when the Rev. Father Paul Costello, Rotarian, speaking with special regard for the presence of the P.C.I. Central Ontario Interscholastic rugby championship team, emphasized the benefits derived by the boys, in body and in character, and bearing of these benefits upon their future good citizenship.

To-day's meeting, graced as it was by the presence of the team which Kiwanian C. S. Browne had coached to attain more than ordinary success during the past season, was a most enjoyable one, and though Father Costello's address was not a lengthy one, he gave the boys some interesting history of the game at which they are so adept. The personnel of the team was as follows: —R. Leigh Glover, Henry Dearborn, Walter Dinesen, Gordon Young, Victor Johnson, Clinton Magee, Wilbert Ward, Jack Clayton, F. Hewett, Douglas Hall, Arnold Reynolds, Wilfred Preston, Neil Gemmell, Arthur T. Westbrook, Gordon Cuthbertson, Vernon Armstrong, Harold Wiman, Richard Greene, Joe Dunkerley, Albion Lord, Floyd Wagar.

Other guests at to-day's luncheon included D. Holland, R. Royan of Croydon England, H. T. Scott, of Campbellford, R. E. Wemp of Peterborough and Harry Saunders of Toronto.

Under the heading of miscellaneous was several announcements and invitations of interest to the club. There was that of Carl S. Browne, chairman of the Inter-club relations, regarding a Christmas concert being put on by the Lindsay Kiwanians on December 19 to which a Peterborough Delegation was invited; John R. Heron ran the risk of a fine, successfully, in announcing the installation of one of the most unusual machines in the city, the new Creed Printer which gives The Examiner an exclusive wire service, and to witness the workings of which he invited the members of the club; announcement was also made of the Board of Education's invitation to the club to attend the formal opening of the new Vocational school wing at the Collegiate to-night at eight o'clock. Of interest to Mark Bredin, W. H. Boyle and Gordon L. Young was the announcement of M. L. Sweetman's Booster prizes.

Welcomes Rugby Team

In extending a welcome to the rugby team, Isaac P. McNabb also expressed the club's appreciation of their contribution to the realm of sport in Peterborough in capturing the Neal trophy, embematic of the Central Ontario Inter-Scholastic rugby championship. "We are right glad to have you here and congratulate you on your splendid sportsmanship in victory and in defeat. By the exercise of those good qualities which you have developed in playing the game, we urge you on to greater victories in life," he concluded.

Vernon Morphet then contributed two solos in pleasing manner, with accompaniments by G. F. Liddle.

In reply, Captain Gemmell ably bespoke the thanks of the team for the kindly and helpful interest of the club, especially of the two Kiwanians, C. S. Browne and Dr. F. C. Neal.

Rev. Father Paul Costello.

Following a brief introduction by John A. McKone, the Rev. Father Paul Costello prefaced his main address with an expression of pleasure at coming to Kiwanis.

"I have chosen to-day as my subject, the value of athletics to a community—chosen in view of the champion interscholastic football team being present to-day. It gives me pleasure to be here to tell the boys that I am delighted at their success. I think it is a splendid gesture to encourage these future Kiwanians.

"As a boy, I found it very encouraging to have older men assist us in our game of rugby football. It is my own pet game.

"Before going further, I would like to be speak for this club one of the finest presidents in J. J. Turner that it can ever have.

"I believe that athletics is one of the greatest assets to a community in building good citizens, for it does a great deal to form the character of a new citizen.

The citizen who is always up and doing, honestly working out the details he is called upon to do is that four-square fellow—sometimes called a square shooter—who has somewhere acquired that which goes to make up a real character. Years ago, a man's word was considered as good as his bond because he was a four-square living man, and I have found that the young man who participates in games will ultimately be an honest man, meeting his difficulties with a smile and earnestly persevering in all things."

The speaker recalled an incident of boyhood days when he had learned to keep his temper in a game. "That self-control is one of the very fine things that a fellow learns in athletics," said he,

Turns Into Good Citizen

"Honesty, and that four-squareness learned from athletics, a high moral calibre and an inclination to think out things good for one's team, later develops a boy into a good citizen.

"So, to my way of thinking, athletics are supremely important and the school that encourages athletics is aiding a long-neglected phase of education.

History of the Game

Father Costello, speaking more directly of the game at which the boys had proved themselves so capable, went back into ancient history to trace the present game of rugby football from its beginning among the citizens of Athens, who, in the year 177 A.D. erected a monument to the glory on one Aristonico Caristo, who won laurels in a game called phenida (similar to football.. The Romans had a similar game called harpastrum, and the Florentines called it calico.

The game was introduced into Britain in the year 1175, and in the time of Edward II. it was forbidden in London. However, it developed gradually, that is the football phase of it, until at the school of Rugby, England, a player, William Ellis by name, carried the ball down the field under his arm. Thus originated the rugby phase of the game which has spread to the Dominion of Canada and the United States to its present place of importance among the colleges and universities of the American continent.

"The game should be developed and I congratulate Carl S. Browne on his interest in the boys of Peterborough Collegiate. It will mean greater citizenship in the community," concluded Father Costello.

In moving the vote of thanks, Dr. E. H. Wood not only spoke of the club's interest in the address, but also spoke of the splendid spirit of sportsmanship which the P.C.I. team had revealed when it went down to defeat, fighting so hard that the opposing team failed to score in the last quarter.

COAL IS FOUND BY A MECHANIC

J. Laruche Profits by Discovery In St. Joseph d'Alma

$10,000 CASH

QUEBEC, Dec. 14 (Canadian Press) —A coal discovery is reported from St. Joseph D'Alma, where J. Larouche, mechanic of that place, discovered a rich seam on property he owned near the town.

A survey was made and according to reports the vein is both wide and deep. A company, who name is so far withheld, has acquired exploitation rights on twenty lots of land, having purchased, among others, that owned by Larouche, for which they paid $10,000 cash, together with 100 paid-up shares in the company, and a promise of $30,000 the day mining operations are started.

NEW SERVICE IN OPERATION

city, have again come into their own, or at least those leading up George street from the C.P.R. station have. Since Tuesday last, William Lytle, the contractor who installed them twenty years ago for the telephone company, has been busy with a staff of men preparing two conduits to carry wires from the C.P.R. station telegraph to the uptown ticket office at 343 George street, as well as to the Examiner's new Creed Type, exclusive wire service. The lines to the ticket office will have been completed within a couple of weeks.

The new arrangement has many advantages. Since the removal of the poles from George street, the up-town ticket office has been served by a two-wire loop which has been carried from the station around by the C.P.R. right-of-way, east of Water street, and across by the market square. This line, subject to the elements, suffered at times from sleet and ice, which hazard will be removed by the underground conduit system. In addition the wires will come into the office in one large cable and will afford greater telegraphic conveniences to the public.

nurses. We found everything in excellent condition.

"The House of Providence provides a home for sixty-nine inmates, thirty-five men and thirty four women, all of whom spoke highly of the care received from Mother St. Bridget and her staff of Sisters in charge.

"In conclusion we congratulate Your Honor on the light criminal and civil docket and trust you may be long spared to administer justice in the County of Peterborough."

CHOIR HONORS M. B. CHENHALL

Members Present Conductor With a Beautiful Gold Watch

SOCIAL EVENING

The practice of St. Paul's Presbyusual last night—the choristers, to the number of about sixty, rehearsed the music for Sunday's services, and "Messiah" numbers — but the meeting-place was in the Paragon. It was decided by the choir members that a social evening would be fitting, as special details had to be carried through, including a display of the trophies of the recent music festival and the presentation of a gold watch to the esteemed choirmaster, Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O.

Accordingly, at eight o'clock, the members assembled, Mr. Chenhall conducted for over an hour; and the choir were prepared for the next item in the evening's proceedings.

Presentation to Conductor.
Arthur J. McLeish stepped to the front, and made a few remarks on the fine array of silverware won by the choir, and regretted that the inscriptions had not been made on the tablets. This was preparatory to calling upon George East to read a few crisp sentences, in the form of an address, extolling Mr. Chenhall's fine qualities and accomplishments in coaching the choir from week to week. He also asked the conductor to accept the watch as a slight token of the choir's deep regard—the honors being performed by Mrs. Strong in a few words.

Returns Thanks.
Following a prolonged ovation on rising to reply, Mr. Chenhall complimented the choir on its past achievements, and remarked that he wished no better honor than to conduct and guide them from week to week and from success to success. The inscription on the watch reads as follows:

"Presented to Mr. M. B. Chenhall by the Choir of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Peterborough. December 13, 1928." On the outside of the case is the monogram, "M. B.C."—and all the work of G. D. McClelland, jeweller, aWter Street.

After the presentation, refreshments were served, under the supervision of Miss Simpson and Mrs. Fowler, and a social time enjoyed.
